CONSUMPTION AND CHEST DISEASES.

The number of deaths from tuberculosis in the United Kingdom and the rate per 100,000 of the population for each year since 1915 were as follows:—

Year.	Deaths.	Rate per 100,000.
1915	54,295	151.5
1916	53,852	150.9
1917	53,934	150.4
1918	52,073	149.4
1919	46,322	125.8
1920	42,545	112.8

The fall in the rate of 56.6 per 100,000 between 1918 and 1920 is attributable partly to the cessation of the War and consequent better living conditions, and partly to the valuable work done by Local Government Authorities. The increase of facilities for the treatment since 1915 is as follows:—

Year.	No. of beds in public institutions.	Dispensaries.
1915	1,500	8
1918	6,749	375
1921	9,879	470

At the same time the beds in voluntary institutions increased from 2,800 in 1915 to 7,568 in 1921, a total increase of beds from 4,300 in 1915 to 17,447 in 1921.

The Victoria League (FOUNDED 1901)

THE Victoria League was founded in 1901 as an Association destined to promote mutual understanding between British subjects throughout the Empire. It maintains active correspondence with 23 Branches in Australia, South Africa, New Zealand and Jamaica, and with its Allied Association, the Imperial Order of the Daughters of the Empire in Canada. By interchange of introductions it is enabled to extend hospitality to hundreds of visitors from the Dominions every year, and to ensure a welcome for English wives of Overseas soldiers and others settling Overseas.

During the War the Victoria League conducted large Clubs for Overseas soldiers, when 282,564 were provided with beds and 1,225,151 with meals. Its branches in Edinburgh, Glasgow and Dundee opened similar and equally successful Clubs.

Its social and educational work is carried on by branches throughout Great Britain. In co-operation with the War Office 2267 lectures were given in 1918-19 in Military Camps by Victoria League lecturers. Lantern lectures and picture talks are constantly given in numerous schools affiliated to the League, it also circulates books and other literature to settlers in remote places throughout the Empire, and has supplied literature weekly to the men employed on the Graves Commission in France.

The visit of 150 Canadian Teachers to Edinburgh, York and London in the summer of 1921 was organized by the Victoria League. The League is now extending its activities to India.

The Annual Public Meeting of the League was held in London in 1921 in the Guildhall. H.R.H. The Prince of Wales presided.

THE BANKERS' CLEARING HOUSE, in Post Office Court, Lombard Street, is the medium through which Bankers obtain the amount of Cheques and Bills in their hands for collection from other Bankers. The amount passing through this channel is enormous. The total for the year ending December 31st, 1920, was £39,018,903,000, an increase of £10,603,521,000 as compared with the year 1919. The Town Clearing in 1920 amounted to £32,852,933,000, an increase as compared with 1919 of £9,638,248,000; the Metropolitan Clearing to £2,093,750,000, an increase of £279,821,000; and the Country Clearing to £4,072,220,000, an increase of £685,452,000. The establishment is managed by a Committee of Bankers—Chairman, Rt. Hon. R. McKenna; Deputy Chairman, F. C. Goodenough; Hon. Sec., R. Holland-Martin, C.B.; Acting Managers, A. E. Salt (Chief Inspector); Herbert J. Woodcock (Deputy Inspector).

Principal Banks in the British Empire.

A list of the principal Joint Stock and Private Banks in the British Empire, with the date of their establishment and particulars of their Capital, Reserve Fund, Deposits, and Dividends. The Bank of England (see p. 369) and the Bank of Ireland (see p. 369), owing to their position as Bankers to the British and Irish Exchequers, are separately treated. Banks with an asterisk * are Clearing Bankers, and those with † are Army Agents; the reference for London Agents of Banks with no Office in London is to the numbers in the following list.

LIFE ASSURANCE.

THE list on the following two pages contains the names of all the more important British Life offices, of seven Colonial companies (marked C), and of three American offices (marked A), all of which transact business in this country.

CLASS OF BUSINESS.—The second column shows whether the company is conducted on the Mutual system whereby the whole of the divisible profit is allotted to participating policy-holders (M), or whether the company has proprietors by whom part (usually a very small proportion) of such profit is received (P). Life offices transacting other insurance business are indicated by letters in this column. In such cases the Life funds are kept separately, and are not liable for the claims of other departments. The Share Capital is usually liable for the claims of all branches.

FIGURES.—These are taken from the latest annual accounts available at date of going to press, and in the majority of cases refer to annual reports for the financial year ended 31 December, 1920.

LIFE FUNDS.—The amounts of these funds, though interesting, are not in themselves a sufficient indication of the financial stability of a company, which cannot be judged unless liabilities are actually compared with assets.

PREMIUM INCOME.—The annual premium income is in all cases stated after deduction of the amount paid to other companies for reassuring parts of the risks.

EXPENSES.—The expenses of a Life office include, in all cases where paid, commission to agents. The amount of expenses is less important in itself than in relation to premium income, consequently the percentage of the premium income absorbed in expenses is shown. The average percentage of British offices is about 12½%, of which about 5% is expended on commission and 7½% on other expenses. This ratio taken by itself is frequently misleading, because, if the proportion of new business is large, the percentage of the total premiums absorbed in expenses may legitimately be higher than where the new business is small. Moreover, where rates of premium are below the average any comparisons of percentage should be considered, with due regard to this feature, a gain to the policyholder through reduced premium being equivalent to an immediate cash bonus.

INTEREST.—The rate of interest earned is important for comparison with the rate assumed in valuing liabilities, since the greater the margin between these rates the greater is the surplus available from this source for bonus. Owing to the unprecedentedly high rate of income-tax now leviable, a reduction in the net yield may be anticipated in nearly every case in the immediate future.

VALUATIONS.—The last two columns of the table are derived from the valuation returns made by the companies to the Board of Trade. A valuation indicates liability under existing policies, after making allowance for the amounts to be paid and received. It is assumed that deaths will occur in accordance with a mortality table, and that interest will be earned at a certain rate. Various mortality tables are employed, those most usual being known as the H^m and O^m, and the corresponding Tables H^m(s) and O^m(s) which exclude mortality in the first five years of assurance. If a company assumes that it will earn a high rate of interest in the future, the net liability will appear less than if it assumes a low rate, while the liability on account of mortality appears greater by some tables than by others. The position of an office is most satisfactory when a stringent basis of valuation is adopted, because the margin between the calculated and experienced liability is larger and the surplus available for bonuses is greater. The O^m and O^m(s) tables in conjunction are more stringent than the O^m table alone, the H^m is more stringent than the American, and with every table the lower the rate of interest assumed the more stringent is the valuation.

FIRE INSURANCE RATES.

MOST large fire offices belong to the tariff association, charging identical rates of premium. There are, however, a number of non-tariff offices which claim to assess individual risks independently on merits. Tariff rates of premium per £100 insured against fire for the more common classes of risk are as follows:—

Private Dwelling Houses, built of brick or stone and tiled or slated and in no hazardous proximity, 1s. 6d.

Household goods therein, usually 2s.

Policies are issued by a number of companies embracing all risks incidental to private houses, in one amount.

Shops and Warehouses, similarly built and circumstanced, in which no hazardous goods are deposited nor hazardous trades carried on, from 2s.

Stock and Utensils in trade, fixtures, and household furniture in such shops and warehouses, from 2s.

Private Dwelling Houses, brick and timber built and tiled or slated, in no hazardous proximity, from 2s. 6d.

Most fire insurance companies transact accident and miscellaneous business, and if a strong company be selected with a reputation for liberal dealing it will probably be found to the advantage of a householder that he should effect with it all such policies as he may require, in place of dividing them amongst several companies. A number of fire offices are prepared to issue policies of an inclusive character for household purposes, combining in one contract protection against damage by fire to the contents of a house, or from burglary, housebreaking, larceny, theft, &c., and insurance against domestic servants' employers' liability, damage from storm or tempest, third party risks, and other hazards. This can usually be arranged for an annual premium of 5s. per £100 of the full value of the contents of the house. Fire insurance of the house itself is not included, however, in this estimate. The advantage of a policy of this description is that it obviates the inconvenience of payments of small amounts in insurance premiums at different dates, and that in one comprehensive form it supplies protection at a moderate cost for all a householder's ordinary insurance requirements.

ANNUAL PREMIUMS FOR WHOLE LIFE ASSURANCE.

Life assurance may be effected either with or without participation in profits. If without participation, both sum assured and premium remain unchanged. If with participation, a higher premium is charged, and bonuses may usually be applied either to increase sum assured or to reduce premium, if not discounted for cash. An alternative plan is available in some offices whereby future bonuses are anticipated and used to reduce premiums from the outset. This is called the "Discounted Bonus" or "Cost Price" system. If the bonuses actually declared exceed those anticipated, the difference is credited to the policyholder; if, however, the anticipated bonuses exceed those declared, the balance has to be liquidated by the policyholder or remains as a debt. Policies should only be effected on this system in companies which can point to good and consistent bonus records, and whose valuation reserves are particularly strong.

The ages applicable to the life and endowment assurance (but not the annuity) rates as hereafter given are "next birthday" unless otherwise stated.

The next table shows the annual premiums payable throughout life for assurance of £100 at death with participation in profits. Premium rates alone are not sufficient for judging the relative attractions of life offices. An office charging a high premium may give higher bonuses than one charging a low premium, and therefore bonus results and prospects as well as premiums have to be considered. Some offices only allow bonuses to be taken in reduction of premium, and on this plan the rates are usually high to commence with, but are greatly reduced after a few years. Some reserve bonuses for the older classes of policyholders, and in these cases lower premiums than the average are usually charged. Most offices grant interim bonuses between valuation periods, and it is important to ascertain if this is the case before an assurance is effected, and how such interim bonuses compare with valuation bonuses, especially in cases of endowment assurance.

ENDOWMENT ASSURANCES.

Endowment Assurances are very popular, and are extremely attractive to persons who desire to combine a provision for their dependants, in event of premature death, with the investment of savings for the realisation of a fund for their own personal enjoyment in later life. For the investment of small annual sums there is no medium promising more satisfactory results than an Endowment assurance participating in profits in a good bonus-paying life office. The selection of such an office is all-important, as so much depends upon profit-earning capacity—see first page of Life Assurance section.

ANNUAL PREMIUMS FOR ENDOWMENT ASSURANCE OF £100. WITH PROFITS.

Under endowment assurances the sum assured is paid after a given number of years, or on the attainment of a fixed age. Should the life assured, however, die during the endowment period, the sum assured is paid at death. The annual premiums payable throughout the endowment period, or till death if previous, for the assurance of £100 at various ages of entry and maturity, participating in profits, are given in this table.

IMMEDIATE ANNUITIES.

THIS Table shows amount of Annuity granted for every £100 paid. The age is calculated from the last birthday, but many offices quote intermediate rates for every half or quarter year. By some a proportionate amount is payable to day of death. Some Companies pay whole or part of stamp duty. See note as to rates on introductory page.

The Annuity is calculated as payable half-yearly. In some cases the quarterly rate is the same; in others it is a little less. Some offices grant special terms in case of impaired lives.

GENERAL REGULATIONS.

UNPAID PACKETS (letters, newspapers, postcards) are charged double postage on delivery; UNDERPAID PACKETS, double the deficiency.

RE-DIRECTION.—(1) By agent of addressee: Letters, post-cards, printed papers, and newspapers may be re-posted free not later than the day after delivery (Sundays and public holidays not being counted), and must not have been opened or tampered with. Parcels may be re-directed free of charge, within the same time limits, if the original and the corrected addresses are both within the same Town Delivery Area (the whole London Postal District being regarded for this purpose as one Town Delivery Area); otherwise they are charged on delivery at the ordinary prepaid rate. The above rules apply also to Registered packets, which must be taken to a Post Office. (a) By the Post Office (not undertaken during temporary absence, unless house be left empty, or from clubs, hotels, &c.). Notice of removal and for the re-direction of letters must be given on printed forms, to be obtained from the local postmaster or from postmen, and signed by the person to whom the letters are to be addressed. Separate forms must be filled in for parcels, and for the re-direction and (postal) forwarding of telegrams. The notice holds good for twelve months, and may be extended by payment of 1s. for second, 1s. third, and 2s. each subsequent year.

REGISTRATION.—Registered postal packets of all kinds must be handed to an officer of the Post Office, and a receipt taken. Parcels (or the string with which they are tied) and letters, must be fastened with wax or other adhesive. The registration fee is 2d. exclusive of postage. With a further 2d. the sender may obtain advice of delivery. The latest time for registering for the night-mails is usually half an hour before the box closes for letters; in the case of parcels, half an hour before the latest time for posting ordinary parcels. Inland packets marked "Registered" or containing coin or jewellery, if found in a letter-box, undergo compulsory registration (4d.), carrying no compensation. COMPENSATION for loss or damage in the post of articles adequately packed.—The fees for compensation inclusive of registration are:—Fee 2d., compensation up to 5s; 4d., £20; and 1d. for each additional £20 up to the maximum 1s. 11d. for £400. Compensation up to £2 is given on (a) unregistered parcels (for loss, only if certificate of posting is obtained at the time of posting), (b) unregistered packets conveyed by Express Delivery Service No. (1). Compensation in respect of money of any kind (coin, notes, orders, cheques, stamps, &c.) is only given when the money is sent by Registered Letter Post in one of the special envelopes sold officially (see next page); the maximum compensation for coin is £6. Compensation for jewellery, watches, &c., is only given on registered packets; for glass, crockery, greases, colour-powders, fish, meat, fruit, and vegetables only when sent as parcels. Compensation is not given for damage to (1) eggs, soft fruit, liquids and semi-liquids or exceptionally fragile articles, in any case; (2) registered packets other than parcels, unless "Fragile, with care" is written above the address.

CERTIFICATE OF POSTING unregistered parcels, free; other unregistered postal packets, ½d.

EXPRESS DELIVERY SERVICE.—There are five services of which (4) and (5) alone are available on Sundays:—(1) By special messenger all the way, from most offices which deliver telegrams. Inclusive charge, which must be prepaid, in cash or by stamps, 8d. per mile, or part of a mile, with 1d. on each separate packet after the first, up to ten, the maximum; also a special charge of 3d. on each packet over 1 lb. in weight. Live animals, liquids, and money may be delivered by this service, and persons may be conducted. The messenger may take back an inland telegram gratis. (2) By special messenger after transmission by post: (a) from the ordinary delivery office, if it is a telegraph office (maximum charge in London 8d.); or if so marked, (b) "Express Delivery from Head Office" in large provincial towns, and (c) in London "from Head District Office" or "from G.P.O." Charges as before (without weight fee) in addition to postage. (3) In advance of the ordinary deliveries upon previous application by addressee (6d. per mile for one packet, and 1d. for every ten or less additional packets). (4) and (5), see p. 417. For (1), packets must be handed over the counter with "Express" clearly marked in left-hand top corner; for (2), may be handed in or posted, and must be marked "Express," with a broad vertical line back and front. Waiting fees: 10 minutes free; each additional 15 minutes or part thereof, 2d. For Sundays and Holidays, see p. 417.

RAILWAY LETTERS.—On payment of 4d. extra at a Parcel or Booking Office of most railways, during such hours as the station is open, whether on week-days or Sundays, a letter not exceeding 3 oz. will be forwarded, and passed on from one company to another at a junction, by the next available train or steamship. The letter may be called for at the station of address, or posted there in the nearest letter-box, or (except on Sundays) delivered as an Express Letter under Service as (or from the first Express Delivery office it reaches), or (by telegraphing for a messenger to meet it) under Service 1.

DISPOSAL OF UNDELIVERED POSTAL PACKETS.—Inland packets chargeable with a postage of 2d. or more undelivered, are returned unopened if bearing sender's name and address; others are opened by the Returned Letter Office and returned to senders without charge, a registration fee of 2d. being charged should anything of value be inside. Packets containing neither sender's address nor any enclosure of importance are destroyed, except parcels which, if not applied for, are generally disposed of after 3 months; or if perishable are dealt with as requisite. Packets chargeable with postage not exceeding 1½d. are redelivered to sender on payment of a second postage, if his name and address, with a request for return in case of non-delivery, appear on the outside; those without such request are disposed of. Undelivered foreign letters, &c., are returned, unopened, after a short detention, to the countries whence received; parcels are disposed of after a reasonable time for inquiry. If containing sender's address, he is advised, and parcel will be returned on payment of fresh postage. Packets returned from abroad are generally dealt with similarly.

POSTS RESTANTE (solely for the accommodation of strangers and travellers and for three months only).—Correspondence of any kind may be addressed as a rule to all Post Offices except Town Sub-Offices. It should have the words "Poste Restante" or "to be called for" in the address. If addressed to initials, or fictitious names, or Christian name only, it is not taken in, but is at once treated as undelivered. All persons applying for "Poste Restante" letters must furnish sufficient particulars to ensure delivery to the proper owner. Poste Restante letters, parcels, &c., from abroad, or letters at a seaport for an expected ship, are kept two months; others, only one fortnight. After these intervals they are treated as undelivered (see above), unless bearing a request for return at end of the interval, or some specified shorter period.

Letter Post.

The Normal Post of the Country. Most things may be sent by it (except explosive, offensive or obscene matter, eggs, fish, game, rabbits, meat, fruit, and vegetables) (see p. 410).

Post Cards.

Postage, 1½d. The left-hand half of the address side may be used for correspondence, both inland and foreign. Plain cards (maximum size 5½ × 8½, minimum 4 × 2½ in.), like but not thinner than official cards, may also be used both inland and abroad. Reply cards, 3d. Reply halves are available for transmission to the country of origin, and to that country alone, and must bear the words "Post Card—Gt. Britain and Ireland," and "Reply."

Printed Papers Post (see p. 410).

This section takes the place of "Book Packet Post."

For printed or written matter not in the nature of a letter, and not exceeding 2 lb.

By this post may be sent books, printed commercial forms, e.g. invoices, receipts, estimates, share transfer notices, applications for employment; deeds and agreements; circulars; Christmas, etc., cards and "picture post-cards"; M.S. proofs and examination papers with corrections, drawings or photographic prints (when not on brittle or fragile substance); together with the legitimate binding or mounting, and anything necessary for safe transmission. The packet must be open at the ends, but may be tied with string, or in an unfastened envelope, or cover easily removed, and must contain no communication in the nature of a letter; any writing must refer solely to subject-matter of the document, or consist of formulas of courtesy or of a conventional character not exceeding five words or initials.

Circulars wholly or partly printed in imitation type-writing are only admissible by this post if at least so identical copies are handed together explicitly as such over the counter at a Head or Branch Post Office.

Newspaper Post.

This post is available for newspapers registered at the G.P.O., including any supplements thereof. Packing as for "printed papers" (see above). No writing or printing is permitted, other than the words "with compliments," name and address of sender, request for return if unde-livered, and a reference to a page. Newspapers not registered as such at G.P.O., and Christmas or special issues of registered newspapers, may be treated as printed papers.

Parcel Post.

For bulky and heavy matter (see p. 410). The parcel should be marked "Parcel Post" and handed across the counter or given to a rural postman; and the postage must be prepaid by stamps, affixed by the sender. The hours for Parcel Post business are the same as for general postal business. Parcels are neither accepted nor delivered on Sundays. The name and address of sender should be on the outside of every parcel. More than 11 lb. must not be accepted from one person by a rural postman on foot or bicycle, without notice on the previous day, and he may refuse parcels if already loaded; a mounted postman must accept what he can conveniently carry.

Parcels to or from the Channel Is. or I. of Man are liable to customs duty, which may not be evaded by Letter Post; the sender must, in the former case, declare contents when posting.

Literature for the Blind.

Papers, periodicals and books, if printed in special type and subject to certain conditions of posting, marked outside "Blind Literature," with name and address of sender: 1 lb., ½d.; 5 lb., 1s.; 6½ lb. (maximum), 2d. Maximum size, 2 × 1 × 1 ft. These rates also hold for postage abroad.

STAMPS, ENVELOPES, POST CARDS, &c.

POSTAGE STAMPS (used also for receipts, telegrams, and certain inland Revenue duties up to 2s. 6d.—for list of latter see p. 423) are sold of the respective values of ½d., 1d., 1½d., 2d., 2½d., 3d., 4d., 5d., 6d., 8d., 10d., 1s., 2s. 6d., 5s., and 10s. Books of 18 2d. stamps, 3s.; of 12 2d. with 6 each of 1½d., 1d., and ½d., 3s. 6d. Rolls of ½d., 1d., and 2d. stamps (480 joined sideways, 500 and 1,000 lengthwise) are also sold at 2d. and 4d. extra. Stamps may be purchased at most offices between 9 a.m. and 7 p.m., and at any office open for telegraph business. Rural postmen carry ½d., 1d., and 2d. stamps and registered letter envelopes.

REGISTERED LETTER ENVELOPES for foreign and inland letters, with a 5d. embossed stamp (for registration and postage), are of four sizes: F, 5½ in. × 3½ in., 5½d. each; G, 6 in. × 3½ in., 6d. each; H, 8 in. × 5 in., 6½d. each; K, 11½ in. × 6 in., 7d. each.

LETTER CARDS with 2d. stamp, one 2½d.; 3, 7½d.; 5, 1s.; 10, 2s.

POST CARDS impressed with a 1½d. stamp: Single (usable for abroad), Thin—one, 1½d.; 3, 5d.; 5, 8d.; 10, 1s. 4d. Stout—one, 1½d.; 4, 7d.; 7, 1s. Reply (inland and foreign patterns)—one, 3½d.; 5, 1s. 4d.; 10, 2s. 8d.

EMBOSSSED ENVELOPES with 2d. stamp; 1, 2½d.; 5, 11d.; 11, 2s.

NEWSPAPER WRAPPERS with 1d. stamp; 1, 1½d.; 2, 2½d.; 5, 5½d.; 25, 2s.

Spoiled Stamps.

Embossed or impressed postage stamps (except of Queen Victoria's reign) cut out of envelopes, post-cards, letter-cards, newspaper-wrappers, or telegram forms may be used as adhesive stamps in payment of postage provided they are not imperfect, mutilated, or defaced in any way. Stamps are considered defaced when marked on the face with any written, printed, or stamped characters. Stamps may, however, be perforated with initials for identification. Embossed or impressed Inland Revenue stamps cannot be used in payment of postage, and stamps indicating the payment of a registration fee may only be used for registered correspondence.

Applications for the recovery of the value of spoiled or unused stamps, whether postage, revenue, or insurance, can be made to the Postmaster at most large Post Offices (see also p. 408).

LONDON POSTAL ARRANGEMENTS.

The Metropolis is divided for postal purposes into eight Head Districts, each comprising a certain number of Delivery Districts as indicated below:—

East Central (E.C.)	4	North Western (N.W.)	30
West Central (W.C.)	4	South Eastern (S.E.)	27
Eastern (E.)	27	South Western (S.W.)	29
Northern (N.)	21	Western (W.)	24

To avoid delay in delivery, the initials of the Head District, and the number of the proper delivery office should appear in the address of all postal packets. Each Head District has a Head Office (addresses given on pp. 405-6), Branch Offices, and others, the total number of offices in the London Postal Area being about a thousand.

FOREIGN MAILS (dates and times of the latest times for posting at G.P.O.).—The more regular Letter Mails are (every week-day unless otherwise mentioned):—6.0 a.m. (exc. Wed.), Norway (via Newcastle-on-Tyne); 6.30 a.m., France, Switzerland, Italy, S.W. Europe, Algeria and Tunis; 6.45 a.m., Belgium, Germany, Austria and Russia; 9.0 a.m. (9.30 with 1d. late fee), France, Italy; 12.0 noon, Belgium, Germany; 1.0 p.m. (Mon. Th., Sat.), Denmark; 6.0 p.m. (7.0 with 1d. late fee), Malta, Syria, Balkans and almost all Europe (exc. Russia and Norway); 6.0 p.m. (exc. Wed.) Egypt, Cyprus, Palestine, Arabia; 6.30 p.m. (8.0 with 2d. 6.5 with 6d. late fee) (Th. only), Egypt, Aden, Seychelles, E. Africa (as far south as Tanganyika Terr., Persia, Mesopotamia, India and the East (as far as E. India, China, and Philippines); 7.30 a.m. (11.15 a.m. with 6d. late fee) (Fridays only), Madeira, S.W. South and southern E. Africa (as far North as Nyassaland, Mauritius). The less regular Letter Mails are:—Twice weekly to N., Central, and S. America (from Venezuela and Peru northward), Bahamas, Bermudas and Inner W. Indies, Japan and dependencies, Hawaii, Panning and Fiji; about weekly to Canada (direct packet), Canaries, Br. and Fr. W. Africa (exc. Gambia), Liberia; about thrice monthly to Australia and S.W. Brit. Oceania; about fortnightly to Gambia, Senegal and Niger; about monthly to Belgian Congo, St. Helena and Ascension; one to three times monthly to Port. W. Africa. Frequently to outer Br. W. Indies, S. America (from Guiana, Bolivia and Chile southward), Irregular to New Zealand, Newfoundland (direct packet). To other parts of the world letter mails are irregular or uncertain. Printed Papers, etc., must be posted half hour earlier (for Thursday 6.0 p.m. mail, by 5.30 p.m.). (See also Air Mail Service, p. 424). Parcel Mails are rather less frequent in general, except to N. America. The mail for S. Africa leaves Th. morning; for India, Egypt, and the East, Tu. nights.

INLAND MAILS (Letters and Cards).—The latest time of posting without late fee for Provincial Mail, at G.P.O. and Head District Head Offices, Charing Cross, Paddington (Spring St. and London St.), and certain E.C. Offices, is 6 p.m., elsewhere in Head Districts, 5.30 p.m. Registered letters must, as a rule, be posted half-an-hour earlier than ordinary letters; but the times at G.P.O. are 5.30 p.m. for General, 7.30 for Late Night Mails, 9.0 for Midnight, Early Morning, and Scotch Day Mails (8.0 on Saturdays), and 9.0 p.m. for London first morning delivery, and Irish and N. Wales Day Mail.

LATE FEES.—Letters and cards bearing an extra stamp ($\frac{1}{2}$ d. inland, 1d. for abroad), if posted in special boxes at certain offices or termini, after the ordinary hour of collection, but before the times given below, are included in certain mails.—Foreign Mails: at G.P.O. (see also above); Inland: General Night Mails at G.P.O. and Head District Head Offices, 7.30 p.m. (except E. and S.E. 7.15); at Railway Termini (platform box or box on Sorting Carriage) up to departure of the following mail trains: Cannon St. (S.E.) 11.45 p.m.; Liverpool St. (G.E.) Ipswich line 6.55 a.m., Cambridge line 10.15 p.m.; King's + (G.N.) 4.55 a.m., 8.25 p.m.; Euston (N.W.) 3.30 p.m., (N.W. & Irish) 8.30 a.m., 8.50 p.m., (N.W. & Scotch) 8.30 p.m.; Paddington (G.W.) 8.30 a.m., 8.5 p.m.; Waterloo (S.W.) 10 p.m. Registered letters can be received at the Sorting Carriage of the trains up to the same times, on payment of 1s. 6d. late fee, or at G.P.O. up to 7.30 (1s. 6d. for Night, 8 p.m. (8d.) for Late Night Mails. For Sunday arrangements, see p. 427.

POSTAGE, &c., ABROAD.

N.B.—In certain colonies and foreign countries the rates of postage to the United Kingdom are higher than those from the United Kingdom given below.

Letters.

The letter rate from the United Kingdom to the British Possessions generally,* and to the United States (but not dependencies, except Hawaii); also to H.M. Forces in the Rhine, Black Sea, and Palestine Armies; and to H.M. Ships in Foreign Waters (addressed c/o G.P.O., London, E.C. 2) is 2d. the first ounce and $\frac{1}{2}$ d. for each succeeding ounce or fraction. The charge to all other destinations is 2d. the first ounce and $\frac{1}{2}$ d. per ounce afterwards. Limits of size, 2 x 1 x 1 ft.

Post Cards.

$\frac{1}{2}$ d. single, 3d. reply. (See also p. 421.)

Reply Coupons.

Coupons exchangeable for stamps of the value of 25 centimes ($\frac{1}{2}$ d.) each in any country participating in the arrangement can be purchased at any Money Order Office in this country at the price of 3d. each for the purpose of preparing replies to letters. The coupons can be exchanged by the addressee at the Post Office of the place of destination for local postage stamps.

Books, Newspapers, Samples, &c.

(a) PRINTED PAPERS: Newspapers, Books, Catalogues, Photographs, Engravings, Music, and other wholly printed matter, $\frac{1}{2}$ d. per 2 oz. There is also a special Magazine Post for magazines, newspapers, and trade journals sent to Canada by direct packet, and thence (or direct) to Newfoundland, if properly registered for such post (this is frequently indicated on the outside of the magazine) and packed without a cover, or with cover open at both ends, otherwise complying with conditions for Inland Newspaper Post mentioned on p. 422. Rate: 4-6 oz., 1d.; $\frac{1}{2}$ lb., $\frac{1}{2}$ d.; and $\frac{1}{2}$ d. per $\frac{1}{2}$ lb. up to 5 lb., 8d. For Literature for the Blind, in other respects considered as a Printed Paper, the rate of postage abroad is the same as inland.

(b) COMMERCIAL PAPERS: Legal and mercantile documents, MSS., invoices, etc., partly written, $\frac{1}{2}$ d. per 2 oz.; minimum charge of 3d.

(c) PATTERNS (bond fide), SAMPLES, AND SCIENTIFIC SPECIMENS, keys, fresh-cut flowers, etc., $\frac{1}{2}$ d. per 2 oz.; minimum charge of 1d.

To the British Empire, or countries not in the Postal Union,† the limits are: Size, (a) and (b) 2 x $1\frac{1}{2}$ x $1\frac{1}{2}$ ft., (c) 2 x 1 x 1 ft.; weight, generally 3 lb. To countries in the Union: Size, (a) and (b) $1\frac{1}{2}$ x $1\frac{1}{2}$ x $1\frac{1}{2}$ ft., (c) 12 x 8 x 4 in.; weight, (a) and (b) 4 lb., (c) 12 oz. If in the form of a roll, the limits of size in all cases are: (a) and (b) 30 x 4 in., (c) 12 x 6 in. Postage must be prepaid. Wholly unpaid packets are stopped. Double the deficit (minimum, 30 centimes gold equivalent) is charge on underpaid packets. Regulations as to packing, writing, etc., are similar to those for inland packets.

Parcels from abroad.

These are subject to British Customs examination and duties (if any), with a fee of 6d., must be paid before delivery to addressee.

* Including all places in the Red under "Imperial British Parcel Rates" below (except that this rate applies only to Bahrain, Dubai, Kowst, and Muscat in Persia or on the Persian Gulf with Wai-hai-wai and British zones in Cameroons and Samoa.

† Afghanistan, Bahrain, Friendly Is. (Tonga), Johore, Muscat, Nigeria, Nyassaland, N. Rhodesia, Trengganu.

Parcels sent abroad.

Enquiries should always be made at a P.O., or the P.O. Guide consulted, before packing. Parcels can be insured for many countries, but not registered. They are subject to Customs, and contents and value must be declared on special forms; undervaluation or other inaccuracy may lead to confiscation and heavy fines (especially U.S.A.). (Rebate of Customs Duty is allowed on British goods by the chief Colonies.) The Customs charges of certain countries can be prepaid by sender, on depositing generally one-fifth to one-half of declared value, otherwise they are collected from addressee. Packing must be substantial, and sometimes special kinds of packing are insisted upon. Delivery in many countries is only to a post office, station, or customs house, whence addressee, who is notified of its arrival, must arrange conveyance. In Belgium, France, and Spain parcels are delivered by the railway companies. Where addressee cannot be found, one alternative address is allowed in the case of the chief British Colonies (except New Zealand), together with Argentine, Belgium, Denmark, France, Sweden, and Venezuela. Certain articles are prohibited; among them letters nearly everywhere.

To most countries the maximum length is 3 feet 6 inches, or length and girth combined 6 feet (New Zealand, Tonga, and Apia, 4 feet). Parcels for Canada except umbrellas, etc., must not be longer than 3½ feet. To Italy and Greece and their Colonies, to Argentina, Argentine, Brazil, most French Colonies, Honduras Rep. (Pacific Coast), the independent W. Indies, Portuguese Timor, Pitcairn I., and Paraguay, the maximum length is 3 feet, length and girth combined 4 feet; in many cases, however, narrow parcels (umbrellas, sticks, etc.) may be longer.

everywhere with a private mark, can be insured by letter post, except as below:—

INSURED BOX POST.—Jewellery and similar articles (not money, securities, letters, or commercial papers) may be sent in strong boxes by letter mails to Austria, Belgium, Denmark, Egypt, France, Germany, Holland, Italy, Luxembourg, Norway, Portugal, Switzerland. Postage 2d per 2 oz. (minimum 6d.); maximum weight 5 lb., size 15½ x 4½ in. Customs declarations must be filled in. Insurance rates and limits as above.

CASE OF DELIVERY.—A reciprocal service of "cash on delivery" of parcels has been established between the U.K. and the following: Aden, Algeria, Bahamas (Nassau only), Barbados, Bermuda, Brit. Guiana, Brit. Honduras, Brit. Somaliland, Ceylon, Corsica, China (Shanghai and Wei-hai-wei only), Cyprus, Denmark, Egypt, Falkland Is. (Port Stanley only), Fiji Is., France, Gambie (S.20), Gibraltar, Grenada, Hong Kong, Jamaica, Leeward Is., 4 Malay States, Malta, Mauritius, Morocco (Tangier only), New Zealand, Norway, N. Borneo, Nyasaland (S.20), N. Rhodesia (4 places), S. Rhodesia, Sudan (S.20), St. Lucia, Sarawak (S.20), Seychelles, Str. Settlements, Sweden, Switzerland, Tobago, Trinidad, Zanzibar. Fees for collection ½d. for Trade Charge (amount to be collected) not exceeding £1. with ½d. extra for each additional £1 of Trade Charge up to the maximum, which is £40 (fee 8s. 6d.) where not otherwise shown in above list. Addressee has generally also to pay, besides Customs, if any, 4d. (as in U.K.) or 6d. fee (not repayable) on delivery. If Trade Charge cannot be collected at first or one alternative address, parcel is returned at sender's expense unless abandonment is definitely requested.

INTERNATIONAL EXPRESS SERVICE.—Delivery by special messenger of correspondence (locally including parcels) to or from certain colonies and foreign countries, or certain towns in the same, has now been arranged. 6d. extra is paid by the sender. Any further charge is collected from the addressee.

AIR MAIL SERVICES convey registered and unregistered, but not insured, correspondence (except parcels), provided it is fully prepaid. Packets may be posted in the usual manner, but must have "By Air Mail" prominently marked in top left-hand corner (preferably on special blue labels, obtained gratis from Head Post Offices or by writing to Secretary (Air Mails), G.P.O., London, E.C. 3). Fees are paid by postage stamps in top right-hand corner. Express delivery is obtained by further stamps (6d. per packet), the word "Express" being written just below "By Air Mail." Enquiry as to services, which change from time to time (and are liable to failure in bad weather), should be made at above addresses. The Summer Services for 1921 were as follows:—(1) London—Paris: 11.0 a.m. week-days, France, Switzerland, Italy, Spain and Portugal; Egypt, Palestine, Syria (exc. Wed. & Th., saving 1 or more days); India and the East (Fri. only, saving 1 week); Australia (some Frids, saving up to 14 days). Fee, 2d. per oz. (2) London—Brussels: 8.15 a.m. week-days, Belgium. Fee, 4d. per oz. (3) London—Amsterdam: 8.15 a.m., week-days, Holland, N. and Central Germany, Sweden, Finland (saving up to 24 hours). Fee, 4½d. per oz. (4) Rotterdam—Bremen, Hamburg, Copenhagen (for Denmark, Sweden, Finland) and Berlin (for other E. Baltic countries, and E. and Central Germany) saving about 1 day: 5.30 p.m. week-days. Fee, 4½d. per oz. (5) Toulouse—Narbonne: 6.30 a.m., Tu., Wed., Fri.: 6.0 a.m., Sun., Morocco (saving 1 or 2 days). Packets must be marked "par Avion de Toulouse" immediately under the "Air Mail." Fee, 1 oz., 6d.; 3½ oz., 1½d.; and 6d. each further 2½ oz. up to maximum, 17½ oz., 3s. 1½d.

MONEY AND POSTAL ORDERS.

The Chief Money Order Office is at Manor Gardens, Holloway, N. 7.

ADVISE OF PAYMENT: 2d. for inland, 3½d. for foreign and colonial orders (to certain countries).

Inland Ordinary Money Orders.

The poundage charged is, for sums not exceeding £3, 4d.; £10, 6d.; £20, 8d.; £30, 10d.; £40 (maximum), 1s. No order may contain a fractional part of 1d. The rules and regulations are on the forms issued. No poundage is charged for M.O. in payment of many Customs, Excise and Inland Revenues (including Income Tax) if the official "notice to pay" is produced, or of Savings Certificates.

General Regulations: Foreign and Colonial Post.

REGISTRATION (except of parcels) is in force to almost all countries. Fee, 3d. Compensation up to 50 francs is paid in the case of entire avoidable loss while in the custody of a country in the Postal Union (see p. 412), if claimed within a year.

INSURANCE (including, except for parcels, REGISTRATION) may be effected on packets to many countries at the following rates:—5d. for £15; and 2d. for every additional £15 up to £110. COMPENSATION up to £1 is also given on uninsured parcels to or from Egypt, Newfoundland, India and the smaller colonies, with many larger foreign countries, except U.S.A. A certificate of posting is produced. Only securities, bank notes, etc., properly packed, and sealed

* See Morocco, India*, under Imperial British Rates.

Inland Telegraph Money Orders.

Money may be transmitted by Telegraph Money Order from any Money Order office which also despatches telegrams, and may be made payable at any Money Order office which also delivers telegrams.

Poundage at the same rate as for Ordinary Inland Money Orders, plus supplementary fee of 2d., and cost of official Telegram of Advice. If the order is to be delivered at payee's address any charge for portage must be prepaid.

Postal Orders.

British Postal Orders are issued and paid at nearly all post offices in the United Kingdom during the ordinary hours of business on week-days. They are also issued and paid in almost all parts of the Empire, in Egypt, and at the British Agencies in China (p. 416, note f), and Morocco, except Babat. They are paid (but not issued) at 52 Canadian offices, and paid in Australia only when issued to soldiers. They are issued, with a counterfoil to be retained by the sender, for every 6d. up to 20s., and for 21s.; cost: 6d. to 2s. 6d., 1d.; 2s. to 15s., 1½d.; 15s. 6d. upward, 2d. The name of payee must be inserted. They must be presented for payment within 3 months from last day of the month of issue, or a fresh commission will be charged. Adhesive British Postage Stamps (not perforated, and not exceeding 3 in number) may (except for Canada) be affixed to the face of an order, to increase its value by 1. 2, 3 or 4 pence.

Ordinary Money Orders Abroad.

Orders payable in British Dominions, Colonies, Protectorates, and Postal Agencies, or in Belgium, France, Italy, Japan, Portugal, Rumania, and most of their colonies, 3d. every £1 or fraction; elsewhere, 4d. every £1. Limits of amount, £20-£40.

Telegraph Money Orders Abroad.

Only to some colonies and foreign countries, e.g., to Canada and U.S.A. (also New Zealand and Union of South Africa, certain towns only), but not Australia. Poundage at same rate as for Ordinary Money Orders abroad, plus cost of official Telegram of Advice (at deferred rate if desired, in British Possessions only), plus supplementary fee of 6d. for foreign countries, Canada and Newfoundland, for other British Possessions, 1s.

TELEGRAMS.Inland.

Telegrams may be handed in at a telegraph office, or, if prepaid, posted or handed to a rural postman. Rate throughout British Isles, 12 words or less 1s., each further word 1d.; the address, which may be telephonic, is charged for; payment in stamps affixed to the form by the sender. Original, redirected, or reply telegrams handed in on Sundays, and (except in Scotland) Good Friday, or Christmas Day are charged 6d. extra. Replies may be prepaid up to 40 words; the voucher issued to addressee may be used, or its value refunded to sender, within 12 months. Receipt for charges 1d. Certified copy 6d., sometimes more. The charge includes delivery within three miles of the nearest telegraph office, or, if this be a head office, within the town postal limits—beyond that limit the charge is 6d. per mile, calculated from the free delivery limit, to be paid by sender. Telegram forms are issued gratis. Usual hours 9 a.m. to 7 p.m. Larger Offices 8 a.m. to 7 p.m. (see below and p. 417). For Sunday and Holiday telegrams, see above, below, and p. 417.

LATE FEES.—A telegram may usually be got through from an office which is open to one which may, perhaps, be closed for telegraphic business by payment of the following extra fees: 1s. for the telegraphist, 1s. for the messenger, and 6d. an hour for the telegraphist if he has to wait for a reply. In the same way postmasters may accept telegrams after the usual hours on payment of 1s. for the postmaster, 1s. for the telegraphist, and 1s. for a messenger if it be necessary to call the telegraphist.

COUNTING. &c.—Plain language, i.e., Latin or any modern European language, is charged for according to the number of words; all other words or unintelligible combinations of letters are charged one word per 3 letters. The following count one word:—(1) All names of towns and villages in U.K. (not of branch or sub-offices or districts in towns, unless in addition to street name); (2) all names of railway and coast-guard stations (not in towns) with public telegraph; (3) words ordinarily written as one or with hyphen, including "couldn't," etc.; (4) Names with prefix "St.," "De," "De la," "O'"; "Mac," but not hyphenated surnames; (5) each five figures; (6) each initial, except London Postal Districts (p. 418)—a.m.—p.m.—m.m.s. (in address), which are one word each group; (7) signs of punctuation, etc.

NIGHT TELEGRAPH LETTERS in plain language, for delivery by first morning post, may be sent before midnight between towns whose Head Telegraph Offices are open always (see below), at 1s. for 30 words or less, and 1d. per 3 words beyond 30.

URGENT TELEGRAMS at triple full rates are accepted via Imperial or other routes (except Marconi and North Atlantic Cable Cos.) for all places or regions in the above list, except those followed by the sign nu (see footnote N.B.). The word "Urgent" must be inserted before address, and paid for. Minimum charge, 3s. 6d.

DEFERRED TELEGRAMS.—Telegrams in plain English (indication LCO, charged one word) or French (LCF), or sometimes language of country of destination (LCD), for certain Extra-European places, marked thus: † in the above list (see footnote N.B.), are accepted at (unless otherwise mentioned) half rates on condition that they may, if necessary, be deferred during transmission in favour of Full-rate Telegrams. This deferred service is at present suspended on certain routes.

PREPAID REPLY, minimum 10d. ("RP—", charged one word, must precede the address, are allowed; they are charged at full rate in all cases.)

THE NIGHT LETTER TELEGRAM SERVICE is suspended, the WEEK-END DO. revised to the following places. The rate for 20 words or less (including the chargeable indication TWT) is in each case followed by that for each further word. Australia 15s., 8d.; New Zealand, Norfolk I. and Suva (Fiji) 13s., 4d., 8d.; other Fiji Is. 13s., 4d. to 14s., 7d., 8d. to 9d.; Fanning I. 12s., 6d., 7½d.

SUNDAY AND HOLIDAY ARRANGEMENTS.

On SUNDAY throughout the U.K. no Parcel Post, Money and Postal Order, or Savings Bank business is transacted, nor is there now any delivery whatever of letters, etc., except by Express Services (4) and (5) below. In London, all but 37 post offices are closed. These open in the morning, 21 of them (including those on pp 265-6, also in evening (stamps, telegrams). About 67 stations, chiefly 8 off the Thames, send telegrams, mostly at train times (see also p. xxi). EXPRESS (SUNDAY) DELIVERY (Service 4) is available only in and to London and a few Head Offices in the Provinces. The offices marked x on p. 475, together with the following in London, complete the list of P.O., S. and S.P. District Offices:—London Branch Offices: Chancery Lane, Chancery Common, Hammermith Broadway, Holloway, Stratford, and Swiss Cottage. Parcels (other than parcels) are accepted up to time of posting for general Saturday night mails; fee 1s., besides postage and usual express fees (calculated in London from G.P.O.—4d. to 5s., 6d.). EXPRESS DELIVERY (Service 5) of a message dictated by telephone to an express delivery office (30 words for each express fee, besides the usual telephone charge), available on week-days generally, is on Sundays restricted to the London Postal District.

There is no general collection until between 10 p.m. and midnight, nor any "late fee" despatch of letters; but subject to a special fee of 1s. in addition to ordinary postage, letters are accepted up to 5.30 p.m., at the London offices open for Service 4 above, for EXPRESS DELIVERY to the provincial Head Offices there referred to, but not elsewhere. Outside London all Head Offices and most Country telegraphic Sub-offices open from 8.30-10 a.m. for stamps, telegrams (Scotland 9-10 a.m.). Many railway stations send telegrams at train times. Express Delivery (Service 4 only) and Despatch are available in and to a few chief towns only (see above under In London).

CHRISTMAS DAY AND GOOD FRIDAY.—In London there is one morning delivery of letters, parcels, etc. When Christmas Day falls on a Sunday, parcels and express letters only are distributed. Offices open on Sundays are usually opened on these days also for the same kind of business, but in some cases for shorter hours. Outside London: In Scotland business is as on week-days; in England and Ireland there is one delivery of letters and parcels. Offices open as Sundays.

BANK HOLIDAYS.—London: One morning delivery of letters and parcels. Collection of letters, evening (from Head District and Branch Offices only) and late (general); of parcels, morning only. G.P.O. and Head District Offices (pp. 265-6) open for all business except Savings Bank, Old Age Pensions, and non-telegraphic Money Order business. Outside London: In Scotland, business is generally as usual. In England and Ireland only one letter and parcel delivery, and generally one despatch; no Savings Bank, ordinary Money Order, or Pension business is transacted. Smaller offices are closed; the more important open in morning (Postal orders), some also in evening. Telegraph offices nearly all open 10.30 a.m. to noon and generally at the same hours, if any, as on Sunday evenings.

PUBLIC HOLIDAYS in Scotland: Telegraph as usual, other business as English Bank Holidays. One delivery only on Local Holidays and Ecclesiastical Fast Days. On New Year's Day one delivery of letters and parcels, no parcel, M.O., P.O., etc., and hours as on Sundays.

PROPERTY AND INCOME TAX. In the £

The tax is chargeable under five Schedules, A, B, C, D, and E, and the standard rate is Schedule A: Lands, Tenements, &c.

Owner must allow deduction from next payment of rent when tax paid by tenant.

Relief is given in certain cases in respect of Income Tax under Sch. A to the extent of either $\frac{1}{4}$ or $\frac{1}{6}$ part of the assessment.

Allowance to Owners of Land and Houses, for average cost of maintenance, repairs, insurance and management, may be claimed in addition. This special allowance does not apply to houses of annual value exceeding £105 in the Metropolitan Police District, including the City of London; £90 in Scotland; £78 elsewhere. Five years' average taken.

A Clergyman or Minister using part of his house mainly for his duties may obtain an allowance not exceeding the tax on one-eighth of the rent, or annual value.

Schedule B: Nurseries & Mark. Gardens

In respect of the Occupation of Farms, &c., on twice the Annual Value; or (by special request, if made before 5th June (5th August in Scotland) in the current income-tax year) on profits of husbandry, as in case of Trades, under Schedule D.

Schedule C: Dividends or Annuities from public revenue (Government Stocks, &c.)

Schedule D: Trades, Professions, Remittances from Abroad, Interest, &c.

Schedule E: Salaries, pensions, and other emoluments of Officers of Army, Navy, Civil Service, Ecclesiastical Bodies, Corporations, Public Companies, &c.

LIFE INSURANCE.—Allowance of duty may be claimed on the amount of premiums paid for insurance of self or wife in approved Companies legally carrying on business in the United Kingdom, if not exceeding one-sixth of the net personal income; but the amount allowable in respect of any premium for securing a capital sum on death not to exceed 7 per cent. of the actual sum assured, nor in respect of any premium for securing any other benefits, more than £100 in all.

RESIDENTS ABROAD.—No exemption or other relief is given to persons not residing in the United Kingdom. Exceptions: British subjects, present or former servants of the Crown, widows whose late husbands were in the service of the Crown, missionaries, servants of native States under British protection, residents in the Channel Islands or the Isle of Man, and persons, previously resident in the United Kingdom, residing abroad for the sake of their health or the health of a member of their family.

DOMINION INCOME TAX.—Relief is granted under certain conditions in the case of a taxpayer who has paid, or is liable to pay, United Kingdom Income Tax on any part of his income, and who proves that he has paid Dominion Income Tax for the same year in respect of the same part of his income.

SCHOLARSHIPS.—Income from a scholarship held by a person receiving full-time instruction at a university, college, school, or other educational establishment is exempted from Income Tax (including Super-Tax).

TELEPHONE CHARGES IN THE LONDON AREA.

I. EXCHANGE LINES.

	Quarterly Payments.
(1) (a) Exclusive Line to premises within a radius of two miles from any Exchange	2 2 6
(b) Auxiliary Line to the same premises	1 17 6
(a) Private Branch Exchanges—
(a) 1st Exchange Line to premises within a radius of two miles from any Exchange	2 2 6
(b) Each additional Exchange Line to the same premises	1 17 6
(3) Local Calls, i.e. Exchanges within a circle of ten miles radius from Oxford Circus	0 0 1½

Calls to Exchanges outside these limits will be subject to the appropriate tariff for trunk calls in addition to the ordinary fee of 1½d. each, except that calls between Exchanges both of which are more than five miles, but not more than ten miles from the centre, will be charged either on the direct distance between the Exchanges or on the sum of the distances to the nearest points on the five mile circle, whichever is the less.

When a Subscriber makes more than 2,000 effective local calls a year a discount of 5 per cent. will be allowed on the fees for local calls in excess of 2,000.

II. SUPPLEMENTAL SERVICES.

- (1) Extra mileage charge. Where the distance of the Subscriber's premises from the Exchange, measured radially, exceeds two miles.

- (c) For each Extension Line connecting separate buildings

- (i) not more than 440 yards apart 1 3 9 |

- (ii) from 441 to 660 yards apart 1 10 0 |

- (iii) from 661 to 880 yards apart 1 16 3 |

The rental for an external extension exceeding 880 yards in length is calculated specially and may be ascertained on application.

III. TRUNK CALLS, i.e. calls not covered by the Local Message fee.

The charges are by distance, varying from 1½d. for 7½ miles to 3d. 6d. for 150 miles, and 1s. for each additional 50 miles or part thereof; these charges are in addition to the local fee (which will be included in the trunk fee account) and will be based on the distance, measured radially, between the Exchanges with which the Subscriber originating the call and the called Subscriber are connected, except that for long distance calls to or from Exchanges within the inner London five mile circle, the distance will be measured from Oxford Circus in all cases where it exceeds 30 miles.

In addition to the above fees a special charge of 2s. per message will be made for day calls between Great Britain and Ireland, and 6d. for each night call.

BIRTHS.

WHEN a birth takes place, personal information of it must be given to the Registrar, and the register signed in his presence, by one of the following persons:—1. The father or mother of the child. If they fail, 2. The occupier of the house in which the birth happened; 3. A person present at the birth; or, 4. The person having charge of the child. The duty of attending to the registration therefore rests firstly on the parents. One of them must, within 42 days of the birth, give to the Registrar by word of mouth the information needed to enable him to register, and must sign the register in his presence. If they fail to do this without reasonable cause, they will become liable to a penalty of forty shillings. In case of their failure, one of the other persons above named must give personal information and sign the register within the same period. If at the end of 42 days no one has given information and signed the register, the Registrar may write to any one of the above-mentioned persons, requiring him or her to come to him for that purpose, at a stated time and place. Any person who fails to comply with this regulation will become liable to a penalty of forty shillings. Not only will liability to a penalty be avoided, but the registration of a birth will be free when it takes place within 42 days (but in Scotland the period is 21 days), unless either of the persons above named sends to the Registrar a written request to come and register at his or her residence or at the house where the child was born, when the Registrar on so attending may claim a fee of one shilling. After three months a birth cannot be registered except in the presence of the Superintendent Registrar, and on payment of fees, amounting to five shillings, to him and the Registrar. After twelve months a birth can be registered only on the Registrar-General's express authority, and on payment of further fees, amounting to ten shillings. In Scotland, after the lapse of three months, it can only be registered on the authority of the Sheriff of the County. No birth occurring in England and Wales can be registered after the lapse of seven years from the date thereof. The only legal proof of age and place of birth is afforded by the civil registers, which the law now requires to be made as above described. In districts where the Notification of Births Act, 1907, has been adopted by the local authority, notice of every birth must (subject to a penalty in case of default) be given by the father, or person in attendance on the mother, to the district medical officer of health. The notice must be sent by post within 36 hours of the birth, and is to be in addition to, and not in substitution for the notices above mentioned.

[BRITISH NATIONALITY.]

The following is an abstract of the British Nationality and Status of Aliens Act, 1914, which consolidated and amended the common law and the statute law previously existing on the subject of British Nationality and Naturalization:—

BRITISH NATIONALITY.—The following are British subjects:—

1. Every person born, of whatever parentage, within His Majesty's Dominions and allegiance.

2. Every person born out of His Majesty's Dominions whose father was born within His Majesty's Dominions, and had not, at the time of the child's birth, lost the British nationality so acquired. As to the children of naturalized British subjects, see below at (7).

3. Every person born out of His Majesty's Dominions, before Jan. 1, 1905, whose father's father was born within His Majesty's Dominions, provided that the grandfather was, at the time of the father's birth, a British subject.

4. Every person born on board a British ship.

5. Every person to whom a Certificate of Naturalization under the Naturalization Act, 1870, or the British Nationality and Status of Aliens Act, 1914, or of Re-Admission to British Nationality has been granted, or who has acquired British nationality by special Act of Parliament or by conquest or annexation.

6. The wives (whatever their nationality of origin) of British subjects, save in certain cases where the man changes his nationality after marriage.

7. The children of naturalized British subjects born out of His Majesty's Dominions, provided that they comply with one of the following conditions:—

(a) in the case of a child born before January 1st, 1905,

(i) if a Certificate of Naturalization has been granted to his father or his mother (being a widow) before January 1, 1905, and he has become resident with such father or mother (being a widow) in the United Kingdom before that date while under age, or

(ii) if a Certificate of Naturalization is granted to his father or his mother (being a widow) after January 1, 1905, and his name is included therein.

(b) in the case of a child born after January 1, 1905,

(i) if before his birth a Certificate of Naturalization had been granted to his father or his mother, or

(ii) if a Certificate of Naturalization is granted to his father or his mother (being a widow) after January 1, 1905, and his name is included therein.

LOSS OF BRITISH NATIONALITY.—A British subject loses his British nationality:—

(a) if by any voluntary or formal act he becomes naturalized in a foreign country;

(b) if, in certain cases, he makes a declaration of allegiance. These cases are:—

(i) where a person is a British subject by reason of birth in His Majesty's Dominions and allegiance or on board a British ship and is also by birth or becomes during minority a subject of any foreign State,

(ii) where a person is a British subject, but was born out of His Majesty's Dominions, and

(iii) where a Convention has been made between this country and any foreign State, to the effect that any subject of that State who has been naturalized as a British subject may divest himself of that status;

(c) if during his minority his father loses British nationality in circumstances which involve the acquisition by the child of a new nationality;

(d) in the case of a woman, if she marries an alien;

(N.B. A woman who was originally a British subject and loses British nationality by marriage with an alien does not regain British nationality on the death of husband or the dissolution of her marriage. If in such a case she desires to resume British nationality she must apply for a Certificate of Naturalization.)

(e) in the case of a person to whom a Certificate of Naturalization is granted after January 1, 1915, if the Secretary of State revokes the Certificate;

(f) if the territory of which he is an inhabitant is severed from the Crown; cf., e.g., the cases of the inhabitants of Hanover and Heligoland.

ACQUISITION OF BRITISH NATIONALITY.—An alien may acquire British nationality:—

(a) by special Act of Parliament;

(b) by the conquest, annexation, or cession of the territory of which he is an inhabitant;

(c) in the case of a woman, by marriage with a British subject, and

(d) by naturalization.

Naturalization.—All Certificates of Naturalization granted in the United Kingdom between May 13, 1870, and December 31, 1914, were granted in accordance with the provisions of the Naturalization Act, 1870. And this Act did not secure that a Certificate granted in any part of the Empire should be valid throughout the Empire.

Under the British Nationality and Status of Aliens Act, 1914, every person to whom a Certificate of Naturalization is granted in accordance with its provisions after Jan. 1, 1915, is a British subject, not only in that part of the British Empire where the Certificate is granted, but also in the United Kingdom and in any Dominion which has adopted the Act, and in any other British Possession.

Persons naturalized prior to January 1, 1915, may, after that date, apply for a fresh Certificate of Naturalization under the new conditions.

In order to be eligible for the grant of such a Certificate in the United Kingdom, an alien must:—

(a) during the eight years preceding his application have resided for not less than five years in His Majesty's Dominions (of which not less than one year immediately preceding the application must have been spent in the United Kingdom) or have been for not less than five years in the service of the Crown;

(b) be of good character and have an adequate knowledge of the English language; and

(c) intend to reside in His Majesty's Dominions or to enter or continue in the service of the Crown.

Instructions for the guidance of persons desiring to apply for a Certificate of Naturalization may be obtained free on application to the Home Office, Whitehall, London, S.W.

The fee payable to the Home Office in respect of the grant of a Certificate of Naturalization is fixed by the Government of the day, and is at present £3, of which £1 is payable on submission of the application and the remainder on the grant of the Certificate. The £1 payable on submission of the application is not returnable, whether or not a Certificate is granted.

N.B.—In the case of a woman who was a British subject previously to her marriage to an alien, and whose husband has died or whose marriage has been dissolved, the above requirements, both as to residence and as to fee, are relaxed.

STATUS OF ALIENS.—Property may be held by an alien in the same manner as by a natural-born British subject, but the title to such property does not confer any right on an alien to hold real property out of the United Kingdom, or qualify him for any franchise.

Aliens are not entitled to be tried by a jury de medietate lingue, but are triable in the same manner as if they were natural-born subjects.

UNDESIRABLE ALIENS.—An undesirable alien—e.g., one who is without means, or who is a lunatic, or an idiot, or who has been guilty in another country of an extraditable offence—may be prevented landing in the United Kingdom. An alien may also be expelled from this country if he prove to be "undesirable" within the meaning of the Aliens Act, 1905. His Majesty may by Order in Council impose further restrictions on aliens (see Aliens Restriction Act, 1914 as extended and amended 1919).

BUSINESS NAMES REGISTRATION.

REGISTRATION OF BUSINESS NAMES ACT, 1916.

This Act received the Royal Assent on 22 Dec., 1916, and its provisions were explained on pp. 414-415 of the 1916 "WHITAKER."

CERTIFICATES

OF BIRTHS, MARRIAGES, OR DEATHS.

England and Wales.—Certificates of Births, Deaths, or Marriages can be obtained at the General Register Office, Somerset House, on payment of fees amounting to 3s. 7d., viz., 1s. for search, 2s. 6d. for the certificate, and 1s. for the stamp affixed thereto. They can also be obtained from the registration officer having the legal custody of the register book containing the entry of which a certificate is required. Certificates of marriages in churches of the Church of England can also be obtained from the incumbent of the church in which the marriage took place.

Certificates at reduced rates can be obtained for the purposes of certain Acts of Parliament: Friendly Societies Act, 1866, Birth or Death, 1s.; Factory and Workshop Act, 1901, and for purposes of Elementary Education, Birth, 6d.; Savings Banks Act, 1887, Birth, Death, or Marriage, 1s.; National Insurance Acts, 1911 and 1913, Birth, 6d., Marriage, 1s.; Industrial Assurance Companies Act, 1866, and Trade Unions Amendment Act, 1876, death of child under 10 years of age, 1s., but only from the local Registrar.

English Registers.—Birth registration exists at Somerset House from 1837. An index to 2,000,000 earlier entries can be consulted at the Society of Genealogists at 5 Bloomsbury Square, London, W.C. 1.

Scottish Registers of Births, Marriages, and Deaths.—Parish registers were instituted for these in 1551, but until the Registration of Births, &c. (Scotland) Act, 1854, they were not properly kept in many cases. Extracts may, however, be obtained from them on payment of ss. 1d. for each entry, but to be valid evidence it must be shown that the registers from which the entries are taken were regularly kept. Lists of the old parish registers may be consulted in the offices of the Registrar-General, H.M. General Register House, Edinburgh, or of local Registrars. These old registers are in the charge of the Registrar-General, and since 1854 local registers have been transmitted to him at stated periods. Registers up to the end of 1919 are now in his possession. There is a general index to the registers which may be searched on payment of ss. A search of the index of a particular parish is 1s. A fee of 20s. is payable for a search of all the Scottish registers, and 1s. is payable for a search of a particular parish. An extract of an entry may be obtained on payment of ss. 1d. The office of the Registrar-General is open on weekdays between 10 a.m. and 4 p.m.

COPYRIGHT.

The law of copyright is contained in the Copyright Act, 1911, which repeals all the earlier acts. It should be stated that no registration of copyright at Stationers Hall is now necessary; copyright arises from mere authorship. The provisions of the Copyright Act, 1911, were explained on pp. 415-416 of the 1921 "WHITAKER."

DAYS OF GRACE.

Bills of Exchange or Promissory Notes, payable at any time after date, have three days of grace allowed; thus, a bill dated 3 Jan. at two months' date is not due until March 4. If a bill or note is payable by instalments to be paid "punctually," this does not exclude the days of grace (Schaverien v. Morris, 37 T.L.R. 366). There is, however, no such extension in the case of bills drawn at sight, or on demand, and these must be paid on presentation. In the United Kingdom, bills falling due on Sunday are payable the previous Saturday, and in England and Wales and in Ireland bills falling due on Good Friday or Christmas Day are similarly payable on the previous day. Bills falling due on Bank Holidays are payable the day after.

DEATHS.

In England and Wales.—When a death takes place, personal information of it must be given to the Registrar, and the register signed in his presence, by one of the following persons:—1. A relative of the deceased present at the death, or in attendance during the last illness. If they fail, 2. Some other relative of the deceased. In default of any relatives, 3. A person present at the death; or, the occupier of the house in which the death happened. If all the above-named fail, 4. An inmate of the house, or, the person causing the body to be buried. Relatives present or in attendance are first required to attend to the registration. One of them must, within five days of the death, give to the Registrar by word of mouth the information needed, and must sign the register; or must within the same time send him written notice of the death, accompanied by a certificate of the cause of death, signed by a registered medical practitioner, if any such attended the deceased during his last illness. The written notice will be useless without a legal medical certificate. If notice is sent, information must nevertheless be given and the register signed within fourteen days from the death. If relatives present or in attendance fail without reasonable cause to carry out these provisions, they will become liable to a penalty of forty shillings. In case of their failure, one of the other persons above named must give personal information and sign the register in their stead. It is important that every death should be registered and a certificate of registry be obtained from the Registrar before the funeral. This certificate should be delivered to the clergyman or other person who performs the funeral or religious service. Failure to obtain this certificate need not, however, delay the funeral, as it is the duty of the clergyman, if the certificate is not produced to him at the burial, to notify the Registrar thereof within seven days. If at the end of fourteen days one of the persons above mentioned has not attended to the registration, the Registrar may, by written application, require any one of them to come to him and do so at a stated time and place. Any person failing to attend on this application will be liable to a penalty of forty shillings. Whenever the deceased has been attended during his last illness by a registered medical practitioner, a certificate of the cause of death, signed by him, must be delivered to the Registrar. Any person receiving such a certificate from the practitioner and not so delivering it will incur a penalty of forty shillings. The registration of a death is free of charge when it takes place within the above-mentioned periods, unless on request it is effected at an informant's house, or at the house where the death happened, when a fee of one shilling will be payable to the Registrar. After twelve months a death can be registered only on the Registrar-General's express authority, and on payment of fees amounting to ten shillings.

In Scotland, the rules of registration are similar, but (1) the death must be registered within 8 days; (2) the medical man concerned must give a certificate of death to the Registrar in terms of the Registration of Births, etc. (Scotland) Act, 1854, within 7 days; (3) the informant of a death receives from the Registrar a certificate that the death has been registered. This is given to the undertaker, who delivers it to the keeper of the cemetery. Failure to comply is under penalty in all cases.

CORONERS' INQUESTS.—Sudden deaths are supposed by the law to demand inquiry, and Coroners' inquests are held in cases of violent and unnatural deaths, such as the case of a person slain or drowned, or dying suddenly, and of any person dying in prison. Coroners do not intrude into the houses of persons for the purpose of holding inquests, but are sent for by the peace officers, to whom it is the duty of those in whose houses violent or unnatural deaths occur to make immediate communication, whilst the body remains in the same situation as when the death occurred. Inquests are not to be held on Sunday. When the Coroner receives due notice of a violent death, casualty, or misadventure, he issues his warrant or precept to summon a jury to appear at a particular time and place for the purpose of instituting the inquiry, when, how, and by what means the deceased came by his death. The jury must consist of at least twelve lawful and honest men, "probi et legales homines," and the number is immaterial provided twelve agree. The jury is usually summoned from the householders residing in the neighbourhood in which the death took place. Any person summoned as a witness is bound to attend, or renders himself liable to be fined in any sum not exceeding £5, the fine for defaulting jurymen being £5.

In Scotland there is no Coroner. In ordinary cases of sudden death a private inquiry is held by the Procurator Fiscal (a Crown official who is the Public Prosecutor in criminal cases in every County, see p. 530). The result of such inquiry is reported to the Lord Advocate. In the case of a death occurring in the course of an industrial employment, and in every case in which the Lord Advocate may so order, a public enquiry is held before the Sheriff and a jury.

DIVORCE.

Preliminary.—Matrimonial suits may be conveniently divided into three classes, viz. (1) those in which a declaration against marriage is sought; (2) those in which the marriage is sought to be upheld; and (3) those in which, the marriage being admitted, partial or complete divorce is sought.

(1) Nullity of Marriage.—Marriage is void ab initio if the parties were in the prohibited degrees of affinity, if it was bigamous, if there was no consent, or if one of the parties was insane; but it is only voidable if one of the parties was under the age of consent (14 in the case of males and 12 in the case of females). Inability to consummate a marriage may also be a ground for avoiding it. In such a case a decree of nullity may be obtained.

(2) Restitution of Conjugal Rights.—This is a form of relief generally sought by a spouse who has been deserted. Disobedience to a decree of restitution of conjugal rights, although two years have not elapsed, at once constitutes desertion (as to the significance of which see paragraph (6) infra); and such desertion, if coupled with the husband's adultery, whether committed before or after the decree of restitution, is a ground for granting to the wife a decree of dissolution of marriage.

(3) Judicial Separation and Divorce.—The third class of suit mentioned in paragraph (1) supra includes the suit for judicial separation (which does not dissolve a marriage), and the suit for divorce proper (which, if successful) dissolves the marriage contract altogether and leaves the parties at liberty to marry again). Either spouse may petition for judicial separation on the ground of adultery, or cruelty, or of desertion without cause for two years or upwards. In such a petition a husband may claim damages from the co-respondent. A decree of judicial separation is often made the ground of a petition for divorce. A petitioner who has committed adultery which has not been condoned cannot obtain a judicial separation or a decree of restitution of conjugal rights unless there has been condonation. The fact that a petitioner has been guilty of cruelty or desertion does not, however, debar him from a decree of judicial separation on the ground of adultery unless his conduct has conduced to the adultery.

Divorce.—Where partial or complete divorce is sought, relief can only be obtained upon proof of certain offences which fall under two heads, namely (1) those which are offences under ecclesiastical law, e.g., cruelty, adultery, and unnatural offences; (2) those which are offences by statute, e.g., incestuous adultery, bigamy with adultery, rape, and desertion.

If a husband seeks divorce, it is sufficient for him to prove the wife's adultery, in which case he may obtain damages from the adulterer. If a wife seeks divorce it is not sufficient that she prove mere adultery. It must be coupled with desertion or cruelty. But a wife can obtain divorce if the husband has been guilty merely of incestuous adultery, or bigamy with adultery, or of rape or certain other criminal offences. "Cruelty" is conduct of such a character as to have caused damage to life, limb, or health (bodily or mental), or as to give rise to a reasonable apprehension of such danger. It is cruelty to wilfully and recklessly communicate a venereal disease; and a course of conduct calculated to break the spirit of the sufferer (generally the wife), continued until health breaks down or is likely to break down under the strain, is also a ground for relief. To prove a charge of adultery the evidence of the wife or husband must be corroborated either by a witness or at least by strong surrounding circumstances especially where a respondent has made admissions. Even if the co-respondent has confessed, the Court will have to be satisfied that there is no ground for suspicion.

If a wife gives birth to a child of which her husband could not possibly be the father, that is sufficient proof of adultery.

It is desertion in the legal sense if one party to a marriage, without the consent or against the will of the other, wilfully without cause or reasonable excuse makes the other live apart for two years or more. Formerly the only remedy for desertion was a suit for the restitution of conjugal rights; but now desertion without cause may enable the deserted spouse to obtain a decree of judicial separation. If coupled with adultery, it enables a wife to obtain a divorce.

When the decree will be refused.—A decree must be refused, even if the suit is undefended, if the allegations in the petition for divorce are not proved. There is no such thing in the Divorce Court as judgment by default. Other absolute bars to relief are (i) connivance at the adultery of the respondent; (ii) collusion, as where the initiation of the suit is procured by agreement or bargain (but this does not prevent a fresh suit being brought free from collusion); (iii) condonation, i.e. complete forgiveness which restores the status quo. Forgiveness, without restoration of the wife to her former position, cannot amount to condonation (Crocker v. Crocker (1921), P. 15). There are also certain discretionary bars, as, e.g. where the petitioner has been guilty of unreasonable delay, or has been guilty of such wilful neglect or misconduct as has conduced to the adultery.

Intervention by King's Proctor.—At any time during the progress of a suit for dissolution or nullity of marriage, and before the decree visi is made absolute, the King's Proctor may intervene to show cause against making a decree absolute.

Decree Absolute.—Every decree of dissolution or nullity is in the first instance a decree nisi, and is not made absolute until the expiration of six calendar months. The marriage subsists until the decree is made absolute. After that date either spouse may marry again; but a man may not marry the sister of his divorced wife whilst the divorced wife is alive. A divorced wife may call herself by her late husband's name. Persons who have been divorced may re-marry.

Children.—When a suit has been commenced, the children should not be removed from the person in whose custody they are de facto. Until a suit for judicial separation, nullity, or dissolution of marriage has been dismissed, the Court may make orders for the custody, maintenance, and education of children. Either spouse may make applications for access to the children.

Alimony.—A wife may in any cause file a petition for alimony (i.e., means of support) pending suit, provided prima facie evidence of the marriage is adduced. The right to alimony continues until there is a decision against the wife in the court of first instance. The amount may be agreed between the parties, otherwise one-fifth of the joint incomes is generally allowed. An order for permanent alimony may be obtained by a wife who has obtained a final decree of judicial separation.

Protection Orders.—A deserted wife may apply to a court of petty sessions or to the Divorce Division for an order to protect any money which has come to her after such desertion against her husband and his creditors. Disobedience to the order renders a party retaining the property liable to restore it and to pay twice the value thereof.

Costs.—Where a suit is about to be set down for hearing, the wife, if she has not sufficient separate estate, may obtain payment from her husband of a sum sufficient to cover her costs to date; and where a decree has been obtained against her for judicial separation on the ground of adultery, she may defend herself at his expense should he afterwards bring a suit for dissolution of marriage. If a suit be decided against a wife who has separate estate, she may be condemned in costs. A co-respondent may be ordered to pay the whole or any part of the costs of the proceedings.

SEPARATION BY AGREEMENT.

Husband and wife may agree, with or without consideration, to separate and live apart, but the agreement, to be valid, must be followed by an immediate separation. Although usually made by deed, a mere oral agreement is binding. If made, however, with a view to facilitating divorce proceedings it is void. A wife is not bound by a separation agreement if she was forced to make it by threats of violence. A clause which binds the husband to give up the custody of the children will be enforced, unless the Court is of opinion that it is not for their benefit. The agreement usually contains mutual covenants not to sue for the restitution of conjugal rights—a covenant by the husband not to molest the wife, and a covenant by the wife or her trustee to indemnify the husband against debts contracted by her during the separation. The remedy for a breach of the agreement is specific performance.

SUMMARY JURISDICTION.

When a husband has been guilty of assault or has deserted his wife, or has been guilty of persistent cruelty, or of wilful neglect to maintain her or her infant children, and by such cruelty or neglect has caused her to leave him, or where he is an habitual drunkard, the wife may obtain relief from a Court of Summary Jurisdiction. Relief may also be obtained by a husband whose wife is an habitual drunkard. The Court may declare that the applicant is no longer bound to cohabit with the other spouse. Where a wife is the applicant, the legal custody of children under sixteen may be given to her, and the husband may be ordered to pay a weekly sum not exceeding £2. Where the husband applies, the custody of all the children of the marriage may be given to him, and the wife may be committed to an infirmary home. If the wife has been guilty of adultery, no order will be made on her application unless there was condonation; and if, having obtained an order, she commits adultery, the order may be discharged. An order may be altered, varied or discharged at any time on cause being shown. All applications for relief must be made within six months of the ground of complaint.

DIVORCE STATISTICS.

England and Wales.

The number of matrimonial suits in the High Court of Justice of England and Wales during the seven years 1913-1919 is shown below:—

Year.	Poor Persons.	Other Suits.	Total.
1913.....	—	1,267	1,267
1914.....	88	1,260	1,348
1915.....	255	1,117	1,372
1916.....	340	1,073	1,413
1917.....	494	1,214	1,708
1918.....	1,034	1,655	2,689
1919.....	2,341	3,422	5,763

Decrees Nisi.—In 1920 the number of decrees nisi made absolute was 3,090, as against 1,654 in 1919 and 577 in 1913.

In the occupation groups of husbands professional employments account for 1,903 cases, manufactures 1,581, trade 1,174, inland transport 468, mining 198, agriculture 133, navigation and fishing 78, and domestic service 64. Among the professions are included:—

DIVORCE FOR THE POOR.

England and Wales.—A special department in the High Court of Justice for the assistance of poor persons in litigation, including divorce, was established in 1914. The official name of the department is "London Prescribed Officers (Poor Persons)."

Under the procedure of this department, Solicitor and Counsel are provided for a litigant who is not possessed of the means to employ legal assistance.

Although no fees are payable for the help given by the department, the applicants must find the solicitor's out-of-pocket expenses, and those incidental to witnesses—a point which has been criticised by the adherents of divorce law reform. However, if witnesses are not brought from a long distance, the whole proceedings need not cost more than £20, and can in some cases be completed for less, compared with from £50 to £60 necessitated by the normal procedure. Before a case is taken up, the applicant has to satisfy the department that he or she is really poor—not possessed of more than £50, exclusive of wearing apparel and trade tools. If this condition is fulfilled, and if he has reasonable grounds for bringing or defending a suit in the Divorce Court, he may apply to the Court for leave to do so. An application for leave is submitted to and is reported on by counsel and solicitor, who give their services voluntarily. If the report is favourable the Court may give the necessary leave, and thereupon another solicitor and counsel are assigned to the poor person to act for him. Such a litigant is not liable for Court fees, nor (generally) is he liable to pay costs to any other party. Counsel acting for him must charge him no fee, while the solicitor assigned to him generally gets nothing but his out-of-pocket expenses. Where, however, property of value is recovered for such litigant, the solicitor may (under the rules) get his usual costs. Numbers of persons take advantage of this procedure in forma pauperis. This explains the very large number of cases in the Divorce Court.

Scotland.—In every town there are Solicitors for the Poor, and in the Court of Session there are Counsel for the Poor, all of whom act gratuitously. Any class of litigation may be undertaken for poor persons, but the operation of the "Poor's Roll" is chiefly important in matrimonial and bastardy cases. Legal services are rendered free of charge, and no Court dues are payable. In cases of divorce application must be made to the Court of Session. In cases of separation simply, application may be made to the Sheriff Court. The means that preclude a person from the benefit of the Poor's Roll are not fixed, and each application depends on its own circumstances. The Poor's Roll was established in 1434.

THE FRANCHISE.

The Representation of the People Act, 1928, abolishes the voting qualifications of property owners, freemen, and lodgers, but extends the franchise to women, subject to certain limitations. To be entitled to be registered as Parliamentary or as Local Government electors, the following conditions are now required:—

PARLIAMENTARY.

MEN.—21 years of age. Residence only, for the qualifying six months in any one constituency or in any contiguous constituency or county. The occupation of land or premises of £10 annual value, for business purposes, for the same period.

A man of full age who has received a degree at any university forming, or part of, a constituency, is entitled to be registered as a voter for that constituency. Honorary degrees do no qualify.

WOMEN.—30 years of age, must be entitled to be registered as a Local Government elector for the occupation of land or premises of £5 yearly value, or of a dwelling house, or is the wife of a husband who is entitled to be so registered.

A woman is entitled to be registered as a parliamentary voter for a university constituency if she is of the required age, and has been admitted to a degree, or has passed the final examination and followed the conditions required of a woman by such university which did not at the time the examination was passed admit women to degrees.

LOCAL GOVERNMENT.

MEN.—21 years of age. Must have occupied for the qualifying six months, as owner or tenant, any land or premises in a local government electoral area. A person who occupies rooms as a lodger is entitled, provided the rooms are let unfurnished.

WOMEN.—21 years of age. Is entitled to be registered as a local government elector where the conditions of her occupation of property would entitle her if she were a man.

Thirty years of age where she is the wife of a man who is entitled to be so registered in respect of premises in which they both reside.

REGISTRATION.

The qualifying periods (at present fixed by Order in Council) are for six months ending 15 Dec. for the Spring Register, and 15 June for the Autumn Register. It is the duty of the Registration Officer (in counties, the clerk to the county council; in boroughs, the town clerk) to compile the Spring and Autumn Registers containing the names of all persons entitled to vote. For this purpose instructions may be issued to the overseers of parishes, who cause house-to-house enquiries to be made to ascertain the names of all qualified voters. A householder's return may be issued, and the failure of the householder to give the required information renders such person liable to a penalty of £50. The prepared lists are publicly exhibited by the Registration Officer, together with a notice specifying the mode in which, and the time within which, claim and objections are to be made. Subsequently the Registration Officer shall make all necessary corrections of the electors' lists, and carry out all that is required to form those lists into a register, with a separate index letter and a separate series of numbers for each polling district.

ILLEGITIMACY.

England and Wales.—A man may be summoned to petty sessions on the application of the mother of a bastard child, or by the Guardians of the Poor where the child becomes chargeable to the Union or Parish; and the Justices, on his being proved to be the father of the child, may make an order requiring him to pay for its maintenance and education a sum not exceeding 5s. a week. By the Act which came into force on Jan. 1, 1919, the putative father may be ordered to pay 20s. a week, instead of 5s. as hitherto. The mother has the custody of her bastard children. No person is required as father of an illegitimate child to give information concerning the birth of such child, and the registrar is forbidden to enter in the register the name of any person as father of the child unless at the joint request of the mother and father. Such person is in that case required to sign the register, together with the mother. A domestic servant found to be enconcinate may be peremptorily dismissed without notice; but any attempt to examine without her consent a servant supposed to be enconcinate renders the employer liable to an action.

Scotland.—The mother of an illegitimate child may obtain a decree of affiliation and aliment against the father. The process may be raised either in the Court of Session or the Sheriff Court, but usually is in the Sheriff Court. The father pays half of the inflying expenses, the amount usually decreed being £5 ss. The rate of aliment varies, but in 1919 it was settled by a decision of the Court of Session that £11 14s.

per annum was a proper amount. The mother has the custody of the child until the age of 7 if a male and so if a female.

An illegitimate child is legitimated by the subsequent marriage of its parents provided there was no impediment to the marriage of the parents at the time of the conception of the child. Such legitimation is recognised by International Law so far as the laws of particular countries allow it. It is valid in England except that such a child cannot succeed to real estate in England on intestacy. After the marriage of the parents such a child may be registered as legitimate by warrant of the Sheriff.

INFECTIOUS DISEASES.

PRECAUTIONS NECESSARY TO BE OBSERVED.—By the Public Health Act, 1875 (as amended by the Public Health Act, 1907), it is provided that any person who—(1) While suffering from any dangerous infectious disorder wilfully exposes himself without proper precautions against spreading the said disorder in any street, public place, shop, inn, or public conveyance, or enters any public conveyance without previously notifying to the owner, conductor, or driver thereof that he is so suffering; or, (2) Being in charge of any person so suffering, so exposes such sufferer, or causes or permits such sufferer to be so exposed; or, (3) Gives, lends, sells, transmits, or exposes, without previous disinfection, any bedding, clothing, rags, or other things which have been exposed to infection from any such disorder, shall be liable to a penalty of £5. A person suffering from such disorder who enters a public conveyance is liable to a fine of 40s.; and if he so enters without notifying to the owner or driver that he is so suffering, shall be ordered by the Court to pay the owner and driver the amount of any loss and expense they may incur in respect of the disinfection of the conveyance. Every owner or driver of a public conveyance must provide for the disinfection of such conveyance after it has conveyed any person suffering from dangerous infection; but he cannot be required to convey any person so suffering until he has been paid a sum sufficient to cover any loss or expense incurred in disinfecting the conveyance. No person may knowingly let for hire any house, &c., in which any person has been suffering from any dangerous infectious disorder without having the same disinfected to the satisfaction of a medical practitioner, as testified by a certificate signed by him—penalty not exceeding £50, or imprisonment with or without hard labour, not exceeding one month. By the Public Health Act, 1907, the Local Government Board (i.e. the Ministry of Health), since the passage of the Ministry of Health Act, 1909 has power to declare that this Act shall be in force in any specified district. Under this Act, a person suffering from an infectious disease must not engage in any trade unless he can do so without spreading the disease; nor may he take any book from a public or circulating library, or allow any such book to be returned after it has been exposed to infection. Clothes exposed to infection must not be sent to a public laundry unless they have been disinfected. A child who has been suffering from an infectious disease must not attend school without a medical certificate. Dairy men must notify infectious diseases existing among their servants, and the owner or driver of a public vehicle which has conveyed an infectious person must notify the same to the district medical officer. No wake may be held over the body of a person who died of an infectious disease. Where the Infectious Disease (Prevention) Act, 1890, is in force, where any suitable hospital is provided, any person who is suffering from any dangerous infectious disorder, and is without proper lodging or accommodation, or is lodged in a room occupied by more than one family, or cannot be effectually isolated, may, on a certificate signed by a medical practitioner, and with the consent of the hospital, be removed by order of any justice to such hospital. Similar provisions apply to the Metropolis. The occupier of a house in which there has been infectious disease within six weeks before he ceases to occupy it, must have the premises disinfected and inform the owner of the disease. Where it appears to any District Council that any house is in such a condition that the health of any person is affected or endangered thereby, or that whitewashing, &c., would tend to prevent or check infectious disease, they may give notice in writing to the owner or occupier of such house to whitewash, &c., the same.

NOTIFICATION OF INFECTIOUS DISEASES.

By the Infectious Disease (Notification) Extension Act, 1899, the provisions of the Infectious Disease (Notification) Act of 1889 were extended to the whole of England and Wales on the January 1, 1899. Every case of infectious disease, as defined by the Act, is to be notified to the Medical Officer of Health of the district in which it occurs. The notice may be by letter or even verbal, and must be given by the head of the family, or by the nearest relatives present in the building or in attendance on the patient, or any other person in attendance, or by the occupier of the building. In addition to this, the medical man in attendance is required to send a certificate to the Medical Officer of Health. Failure to send the notice or certificate renders the defaulter liable to 40s. fine. No payment is made for the notices required to be given by persons in the house, but the medical man gets ss. 6d. for every case in his private practice and rs. 10 for every case in a public institution of which he is officer.

The diseases to which the Act applies are small-pox, cholera, diphtheria, membranous croup, erysipelas, scarlatina or scarlet fever, and the following fevers: typhus, typhoid, enteric, relapsing, continued, or puerperal. Plague must also be notified, in consequence of an Order issued in 1900. The local authority may order that the Act shall apply to any infectious disease other than those just mentioned, but such an order must be approved by the Local Government Board. In some districts the following have been declared infectious: measles, röteln or German measles, whooping cough, chicken-pox, mumps, and yellow fever. In the case of London the provisions of the Public Health (London) Act, 1891, are similar to those now extended to the rest of the country.

JURY SERVICE.

Preliminary.—The juries with which the public are most concerned are, first and foremost, the grand juries; secondly, those which are summoned to try causes in the High Court, at assizes and county courts; and thirdly, those summoned to try criminal cases at assizes, the Old Bailey, and courts of Quarter Sessions, and to assist at coroners' inquests.

Qualifications.—All natural-born subjects of the King and aliens domiciled for ten years or more, being men or women between 21 and 60, are liable to serve as jurors.

Although women could not formerly serve, the sex disqualification was removed in 1919, and women are now liable to serve, subject to this, that a judge may make an order that the jury shall be composed of men only or of women only, or may, on an application made by a woman to be exempted from service on a jury in respect of any case by reason of the nature of the evidence to be given or of the issues to be tried, grant such exemption.

The qualification of a juror is a property one—that is to say, he or she must be a person who owns property or pays rates. A householder or shopkeeper in the City of London who owns personal estate worth £100; a resident in a county or borough owning £10 a year in real estate or rent charge, or £20 in leaseholds; or a householder in a county or borough assessed to the poor rate at not less than £30 a year in Middlesex and the County of London, or £20 in other counties, and occupiers of houses with not less than fifteen windows, are all compellable to serve as jurors unless exempted or disqualified.

Exemptions and Disqualifications.—Aliens (subject as above), felons, lunatics, imbeciles, deaf or blind persons are disqualified from serving on juries, while the following classes of persons (amongst others) are exempt—peers, members and officers of both Houses of Parliament, clergymen and priests, ministers of any congregation of protestant dissenters and Jews, whose meeting place is duly registered, judges, barristers, solicitors (if practising), officers of the supreme court, magistrates, clerks of the peace, sheriffs' officers and servants of such officers, justices of the peace, members of local bodies, governors of prisons and gaolers, superintendents, etc., of lunatic asylums, doctors and chemists (if actually practising), dentists, officers and men in Army, Navy, and Territorial Forces, licensed pilots, postal, custom and inland revenue servants.

Grand Juries.—The function of the grand jury is to make presentments on oath to judicial bodies or personages, mainly of accusation against persons against whom criminal proceedings are pending. The jurors have to say in effect whether there is a prima facie case against the accused, against whom an indictment has been prepared, and if they are satisfied of this they find "a true bill"; if not, they "ignore the bill" and the accused is discharged. During and as a consequence of the War, the employment of grand juries was suspended, but they will presently be revived.

Lunacy Juries.—A jury is sometimes summoned by the judge in lunacy to enquire whether a man is or is not of sound mind.

Juries in Criminal and Civil cases.—An accused person against whom a true bill has been found is tried by a "jury sworn." A "panel" of jurors are summoned to attend the court on a particular day, and it is from amongst them that the jury who are to try the prisoners are selected at random (an interesting note on the selection of jurors will be found in Halsbury's Laws of England, Vol. 28, p. 246). In a criminal case the prisoner has a right of challenge which is of two kinds—a challenge to the array—i.e., the whole number of jurors summoned (which is so rare that it need not be further considered) and a challenge to the poll, i.e., to individual jurors, which may be peremptory or for cause. Peremptory challenge, or challenge without cause, exists only as of right in treason and felony, and the prisoner can only challenge a limited number without reason. In the exercise of this right prisoners frequently object to the women on the jury. "Challenge for cause" sometimes takes on the ground that the proposed juror is a peer or is alleged to have committed some crime which makes him infamous.

Except upon trials for murder, treason, and treason felony juries after being sworn may separate, e.g., for lunch and at night. The verdict must be given in open court in the presence of all the jurors, and in cases of treason and felony in the presence of the defendant. It must be unanimous, except that in civil cases the parties may agree to take a majority verdict.

Special Juries.—Special Jurors are selected from persons having larger property qualifications, e.g., the occupier of dwelling house in a large town rated at not less than £100. Trial is generally by Common Jury, but in any cause or matter at Assizes or in the High Court an order for a Special Jury may be obtained in certain cases.

Payment of Jurors.—A Special Juror is entitled to a fee of one guinea for each case in which he is sworn to act, whereas a Common Jury is only entitled to 2s. on each case tried in the High Court or a County Court; and on Circuit, 8d. In Criminal Cases the jury is entitled to and, in fact, receives nothing. At Inquests, held before Coroners, the jurors are entitled to such fee as the local authority may permit the coroner to pay.

A juror is not accountable for, nor will any action lie against him, in respect of anything said or done by him in discharge of his office. If he fail to appear in the High Court or at assizes when duly summoned he may have to pay a fine of £10, while non-appearance at a county court may involve a fine of £5.

Coroners' Juries.—A coroner who has decided to hold an inquest must summon a jury to inquire into the cause of death. This absolute duty, however, was suspended during the War and for six months thereafter by an Act passed in 1918. As the War came officially to an end on September 1, 1918, it is presumed that after March 1, 1922, all inquests will have to be held before juries. A coroner's jury may be fined £5 for non-attendance. Broadly speaking, any "good and lawful" man or woman may be summoned on a coroner's jury. Although there is no age limit fixed by statute, the custom is to summon only persons of full age. Not less than twelve must be summoned, and at least twelve must agree on a verdict.

MARRIAGES.

BY Banns OR LICENCE.

Banns of Marriage.—"Banns" formerly applied to any public kind of proclamation, and now refer only to marriages, so that the word signifies the public announcement in the parish church, the object being to ensure notoriety, and exclude clandestine marriages. The Marriage Act, 26 Geo. II. c. 33, prescribes audible publication according to the rubric, on three Sundays preceding the ceremony, after the Second Lesson. The law is now chiefly contained in the Marriage Act, 4 Geo. IV. c. 76, which repealed most of the laws then in force (see also 5 & 7 Will. IV. c. 85, and 1 Vict. c. 25). Where the parties reside in different parishes, the banns must be published in both, the minister giving his certificate of the same to be handed to the minister of the parish where the marriage takes place. The law provides specially for the case where one of the parties resides in Scotland, the publication being then in the parish church. In like manner in Scotland the publication takes place in the parish church, in whatever church the parties are married. It may be noted that, by Scottish law only, omission to publish the banns does not invalidate the marriage, because it would still stand as an irregular marriage carried off by consent before witnesses (see sub-tit., "Marriages in Scotland," post). The names by which the parties are known are sufficient for publication of banns, so that a variance from the strict baptismal name is not important. But where wrong names are designedly given, for the purpose of concealment or otherwise, the case is different, and the marriage may be null and void (Midgeley v. Wood, 4 Sw. & Tr. 259). Where a wrong and fraudulent name is given by one party only, and the other party is innocent, the validity of the marriage is not affected.

The Bishop may license a Chapel of Ease for the celebration of marriages; but where a district has been assigned to a chapel, and it becomes a vicarage, or "ecclesiastical parish," the option ceases, and the banns must be proclaimed and marriage celebrated therein, and not in the "mother church" or that of the civil parish.

If three months be permitted to elapse, the banns become useless, and the parties must either obtain a licence, or submit to the republication of banns. The minister ought to satisfy himself that the parties are of full age, or that the consent of parents is obtained, and it is usually on the score of insufficiency of age that banns are "forbidden." By the Act 6 & 7 Will. IV. c. 85, a marriage may be performed in church on the superintendent registrar's certificate without banns, provided that the incumbent's consent is obtained. One of the parties must be resident within the Ecclesiastical parish of the church in which the marriage is to take place.

Marriage licences are of two kinds—(1) the Common or Ordinary Licence granted by the Archbishops and Bishops, through their Surrogates, for marriage in any church or chapel duly licensed for marriages; (2) the Special Licence granted by the Archbishop of Canterbury for marriage at any time or in any place on good reason being shown (see p. 353). The Act of 1833 is severe on the clergy, making it a felony for any clergyman to marry the parties in the absence of banns or licence; and every Registrar or other person who knowingly unduly solemnizes a marriage is also guilty of felony. By a subsequent alteration in the law, the hours for marriage were extended, and they are now from 8 a.m. to 3 p.m.

The minister should be careful that there are two or more witnesses present, and that two witnesses attest the entries in the register books, which are kept in duplicate.

All civil jurisdiction over marriage was taken away from the Ecclesiastical Courts by the Divorce Act of 1857. An incumbent may, under Section 54 of this Act, refuse to marry a divorced person whose marriage has been dissolved for his or her adultery, but must allow another clergyman of the diocese to perform the service.

Marriage with a deceased wife's sister—Including a sister of half blood—was legalised in 1907. No clergyman, however, can be compelled to solemnize such a marriage, but he can allow his church to be used for the purpose by another minister.

A marriage certificate is nothing more than a copy of the entry in the church register; and the customary fee is 2s. 6d., and a stamp duty of 1d. Searches in the register-books may be made on payment of small fees, viz., 1s. for a single year, and 6d. additional for every other year. There are small fees, regulated by custom, on the certificate given of banns in one parish for marriage in another. Marriage fees are not uniform, and if excessive there is power with the Diocesan Chancellor to moderate them. With those who are in a position to afford it, it is usual to pay a guinea to the clergyman, and 5s. to the clerk; and the usual fees are paid although a stranger-clergyman be invited to perform the service.

MARRIAGE LICENCES.

MARRIAGE LICENCES can be obtained in London by application at the Faculty Office, at the Vicar-General's Office, and at the Bishop of London's Registry, all within the old area known as Doctors' Commons, by one of the parties about to be married. In the country they may be obtained at the offices of the Bishops' Registrars, but licences obtained at the Bishop's Diocesan Registry only enable the parties to be married in the diocese in which they are issued; those procured at the Faculty Office, 23 Knight-riding Street, Doctors' Commons, E.C., are available for London and all England and Wales; those procured at the Vicar-General's Office, 3 Creed Lane, Ludgate Hill, E.C. (hours in both offices 10 to 4; Saturdays 10 to 1), are available for London and all England and Wales, except the Province of York. No instructions, either verbal or in writing, can be received, except from one of the parties. Affidavits are prepared from the personal instructions of one of the parties about to be married, and the licence is delivered to the party upon payment of fees amounting to thirty shillings, in addition to the cost of stamp, 10s. 6d. No previous notice is required and the licence is available as soon as it is issued. The cost of licences through a clerical surrogate in the country varies, according to the diocese, from £1 15s. to £2 12s. 6d. By the 4th George IV. c. 76, it is enacted, in order to avoid fraud and collusion in obtaining licences for marriage, that before any such licence be granted one of the parties shall make a declaration, on oath, that there is no legal impediment to the intended marriage; and also that one of such parties hath had his or her usual place of abode for the space of fifteen days immediately preceding the issuing of the licence within the boundary of the parish church, or the district parish in the church of which the marriage is to be solemnized.

It may be added that in the country there may generally be found a parochial clergyman who is also a surrogate, before whom the above-mentioned affidavit may be taken, and whose office it is to procure the licence from the Bishop's registry, the surrogate delivering the same personally to the applicant.

SPECIAL MARRIAGE LICENCES.

SPECIAL LICENCES are granted by the Archbishop of Canterbury, under special circumstances, for marriage at any place with or without previous residence in the district, or at any time, &c.; but the reasons assigned must meet with his Grace's approval. Application must be made to The Faculty Office, 23 Knight Rider Street, Doctors Commons, E.C. 1 (tel., 6034 Central). Fees for licence stamp, &c., £55.

BEFORE A REGISTRAR AND IN NON-CONFORMIST BUILDINGS.

Marriages can take place in a District Register Office or in a Nonconformist building registered for marriages, (1) by Certificate, (2) by Licence. Notice of such marriages must be given personally to the Superintendent Registrar, a Registrar of Births and Deaths, a Registrar of Marriages, or the deputy of such officer. A marriage at a register office takes place in the presence of the Registrar of Marriages and the Superintendent Registrar; a marriage at a registered building takes place in the presence of the Registrar of Marriages, unless it is had under the provisions of the Marriage Act, 1898, respecting which see below. In each case the presence of at least two witnesses is necessary.

NOTICE OF MARRIAGE BY CERTIFICATE.

If both parties reside in the same registration district, they must both have resided there for seven days before the notice can be given. It may then be given by either party.

If the parties reside in different registration districts, notice must be given by each to a registration officer in the district in which he or she resides, and the preliminary residential qualification of seven days must be fulfilled by each before the notice can be given.

NOTICE OF MARRIAGE BY LICENCE.

One notice only is necessary, whether the parties live in the same or in different registration districts, and either party may give the notice.

If both live in the same district, one of them must have lived there for fifteen days before the notice can be given.

If they live in different districts, and both have fulfilled the necessary residential qualification, notice may be given in either district. If one only has fulfilled the qualification, the notice must be given in the district in which the residence has been fulfilled, and the other party must be resident in England or Wales when the notice is given.

The notice contains particulars as to names, ages, residence, length of residence, and the building in which the marriage is to take place. It also contains a declaration that there is no legal impediment to the marriage, and, in the case of minors, that the consent of the person whose consent to the marriage is required by law, has been duly given. A person making a false declaration renders himself or herself liable to prosecution for perjury.

ISSUE OF CERTIFICATE (WITHOUT LICENCE) FOR MARRIAGE.

After the lapse of twenty-one clear days from the date of the entry of the notice in the notice-book, the Superintendent Registrar may, provided no impediment is shown, issue his certificate for the marriage, which can then take place at any time within three calendar months from the date of the entry of the notice.

ISSUE OF CERTIFICATE AND LICENCE FOR MARRIAGE.

After the lapse of one week-day (not Christmas Day or Good Friday) from the date of entry of the notice, the Superintendent Registrar may, provided no impediment is shown, issue his certificate and licence for the marriage, which can then take place on any day within three calendar months from the date of entry of the notice.

DOCUMENTS TO BE PRODUCED AT THE MARRIAGE.

(1) Marriage by Certificate.—

- a. If both parties live in the same district:—The certificate of the Superintendent Registrar of that district.
- b. If they live in different districts:—A certificate from the Superintendent Registrar of each district.

(2) Marriage by Licence.—The certificate and licence of the Superintendent Registrar of the district in which the notice is given.

PLACE OF MARRIAGE.

The marriage must generally take place at a building within the district of residence of one of the parties, but there are exceptions, as follows:—

a. Section 24 of 29 & 30 Vict. cap. 22, provides that, if the usual place of worship of either of the parties is outside the district of his or her residence, the marriage may take place in such usual place of worship, provided that it is not more than two miles distant from the boundary of the district in which the notice is given.

b. The Act 3 and 4 Vict. cap. 75, provides that, if there is not within the district of residence of either party a registered building within which marriages are solemnized according to the rites and ceremonies of the religious denomination to which the parties belong, the marriage may take place in a registered building of the required denomination in the nearest district.

A marriage which has been duly celebrated in a register office in Ireland may be proved by the certificate of such marriage (Guillet v. Guillet, 27 T.L.R. 416).

MARRIAGE CEREMONY.

The marriage must be solemnized between the hours of 8 a.m. and 3 p.m., with open doors. Each of the parties must declare as follows:—“I do solemnly declare that I know not of any lawful impediment why I, A. B., may not be joined in matrimony to C. D.”; and each of the parties must say to the other, “I call upon these persons here present to witness that I, A. B., do take thee, C. D., to be my lawful wedded wife [or husband].” A wedding-ring may be, and is generally, used at a marriage at a register office.

MARRIAGE ACT, 1898.

The presence of a Registrar of Marriages is not necessary at marriages at Nonconformist registered buildings which have adopted the provisions of this Act. The Act (which does not apply to Scotland or Ireland, or to marriages according to the usages of the Jews or of the Society of Friends) provides for the appointment of an “authorised person” (a person, usually the minister or an official of the building certified by the trustees or governing body as having been duly authorised for the purpose) who must be present at and must register the marriage. If the presence of a Registrar is required at a marriage at a building at which the provisions of the Act have been adopted, the fact must be stated when notice of the marriage is given, and the consent of the minister or trustees to the Registrar's attendance must be obtained.

The parties must at some time during the ceremony make the following declarations:—

"I do solemnly declare that I know not of any lawful impediment why I, A. B., may not be joined in matrimony to C. D."

Also each of the parties must say to the other:—

"I call upon these persons here present to witness that I, A. B., do take thee, C. D., to be my lawful wedded wife [or husband]"; or, in lieu thereof:—

"I, A. B., do take thee, C. D., to be my wedded wife [or husband]."

Rules and Regulations relating to this Act were published in October, 1909. (See Statutory Rules and Orders, 1909, No. 1332.)

NAVAL MARRIAGES ACT, 1908.

This Act, which came into force on January 1, 1909, was framed with the object of relieving sailors of the Royal Navy of the difficulties under which they laboured as regards fulfilling the necessary residential qualification for the purpose of marriage.

It provides that any officer, seaman, or marine borne on the books of one of His Majesty's ships who wishes to marry may, if the marriage is to take place at a register office or a Nonconformist registered building, give notice to his commanding officer, who, after the lapse of twenty-one clear days, can issue a certificate for the marriage. The other party must give notice in the usual way to a registration officer in the district in which she resides.

If the marriage is to take place at a church of the Church of England, the chaplain or commanding officer must publish the banns on board the ship on three successive Sundays: he can then issue a certificate of publication of banns. The banns must also be published in the church in which the marriage is to take place.

No marriage by licence can take place under this Act.

FEES.

For entering notice of a marriage by certificate in the marriage notice-book	s. d.
For entering notice of a marriage by licence in the marriage notice-book.....	1 0
For a certificate for marriage without licence.....	1 0
For a certificate for marriage by licence	1 0
For a licence for marriage	30 0
Stamp duty on a licence for marriage.....	10 0
For a marriage by certificate in the presence of a Registrar	5 0
For a marriage by licence in the presence of a Registrar	10 0

Exclusive of the fee for a certificate of the marriage (marriage lines), the total fees for a marriage by certificate, when the parties live in the same district, amount to 7s. ; if they live in different districts, to 9s.

For a marriage by licence the total fees are 12s. 6d.

MISCELLANEOUS INFORMATION RESPECTING MARRIAGES.

Parties should be married in the name in which they are generally known.

A marriage may take place at a registered building before a Registrar without religious ceremony if the consent of the trustees is obtained.

If parties who have been married at a register office desire to go through a religious ceremony at a church, they may do so on production to the incumbent of a certificate of the register office marriage, but this ceremony is not recorded as a marriage in the register books.

A divorced person desiring to marry again in a register office or registered building must give notice to the Superintendent Registrar, to whom a copy of the divorce decree must be produced.

In Wales, and in places where the Welsh tongue is used, the declaration and contracting words may be said in Welsh, as provided by Section 23 of the Marriages and Registration Act, 1837.

If both parties are Jews, they must give notice to a registration officer in the usual way, and may marry according to their usages in a synagogue or private dwelling-house at any hour; the marriage must be registered by the secretary of the synagogue of which the man is a member.

If both parties are members of the Society of Friends (Quakers), or if, not being in membership, they have been authorised by the Society of Friends to solemnize their marriage in accordance with its usages, they must give notice to a registration officer, and may be married in a Friends' meeting-house; the marriage must be registered by the registering officer of the Society appointed to act for the district in which the meeting-house is situated. The presence of a Registrar of Marriages is not necessary at such marriages of Jews or members of the Society of Friends.

Marriage with a deceased wife's sister was rendered legal by the Deceased Wife's Sister Act, 1907. The marriage of a woman with her deceased husband's brother is still illegal, and the Act forbids the marriage of a man with the sister of his divorced wife during the wife's lifetime.

MARRIAGE IN ENGLAND OR WALES WHEN ONE PARTY LIVES IN SCOTLAND OR IRELAND.

Notice for a marriage by a Superintendent Registrar's certificate in a register office or registered building may be given in the usual way by the party resident in England. As regards Scotland, the party there, after a residence of fifteen days, should apply to the session clerk to publish banns; as regards Ireland, the party there, after a residence of seven days, must give notice to the District Registrar of Marriages. Notice cannot be given for such marriages to take place by the licence of the Superintendent Registrar.

Marriage of such parties may take place in a church of the Church of England after the publication of banns, or by Ecclesiastical licence.

MARRIAGES OF BRITISH SUBJECTS ABROAD.

Act passed June 27, 1896; came into force Jan. 1, 1897. Order in Council dated Nov. 22, 1913, whereby previous Orders are repealed and regulations for marriages under the Act are laid down.

British subjects may contract a valid marriage in a foreign country provided they conform to the provisions of the Foreign Marriages Act, 1824. One of the parties to the marriage only need be a British subject.

Where a marriage according to the local law of a foreign country is valid by English law, then, before the marriage is solemnized in that country under the Act, the marriage officer as defined by the Act must be satisfied—

- (a) That both the parties are British subjects; or,
- (b) If only one of the parties is a British subject, that the other is not a subject or citizen of the country; or,
- (c) If only one of the parties is a British subject and the other a subject or citizen of the country, that sufficient facilities do not exist for the solemnization of the marriage in the foreign country in accordance with the law of that country; or,
- (d) If the man is a British subject and the woman a subject or citizen of the country, that no objection will be taken by the authorities of the country to the solemnization of the marriage under the Act.

In the case of any marriage under the Act, where the woman is a British subject and the man a foreigner, the marriage officer must be satisfied—

- (a) That the marriage will be recognized by the law of the country to which the foreigner belongs; or,
- (b) That some other marriage ceremony in addition to that under this Act has taken place, or is about to take place, between the parties, and that such other ceremony is recognized by the law of the country to which the foreigner belongs; or,
- (c) That the leave of the Secretary of State has been obtained.

The marriage must be solemnized by or before a marriage officer as defined by the above-named Act.

It is necessary for one of the parties to the intended marriage to sign a notice stating the name, surname, profession, condition, and residence of each of the parties, and whether each of the parties is or is not a minor, and to give the notice to the marriage officer within whose district both of the parties have had their residence not less than one week then next preceding, and the notice must state that they have so resided.

If the parties reside in different districts, such notice must be given to the marriage officer of the district before whom the intended marriage is to be solemnized, by the party who has resided for a period of not less than one week within the district of such marriage officer.

If one of the parties resides (a) in the United Kingdom, or (b) in a Colony or India (a) notice must be given in like manner as if the party so resident were about to be married in that part of the United Kingdom in which he or she resides, and in England or Ireland must be given to the superintendent registrar or registrars, and in Scotland must be given by proclamation of banns, and (b) such notice must be given by the party dwelling in such Colony or in India as may be provided by any law of that Colony or of the Governor-General of India in Council, or in like manner as if the party were about to be married in that place.

If the non-resident party has dwelt in the district of a marriage officer in a foreign country notice must be given by that party in like manner as if the marriage were to be solemnized by or before such marriage officer, or if the place in a foreign country at which the non-resident party has dwelt is not within the district of a marriage officer the notice may be given to any person authorised by the Secretary of State to receive such notices. Where neither party has resided for a period of not less than one week within the district of the marriage officer before whom the intended marriage is to be solemnized, and (a) the marriage cannot conveniently be solemnized at the place where either of the parties has had his or her usual place of abode, or (b) the permission of the Secretary of State has been obtained, notice must be given by each of the parties in the place where he or she has had his or her usual place of abode for a period of not less than one week immediately preceding the giving of such notice in the prescribed manner, and a certificate of the giving of such notice obtained.

If the Secretary of State is satisfied that for some good reason the party has not been able to give the required notice and that the marriage is not clandestine and that adequate notice has been given he may permit the marriage to be solemnized.

Before the marriage is solemnized each of the parties must make an oath

- (a) That he or she believes that there is no impediment
- (b) that both the parties have had their usual place of residence in the district of the consular marriage officer for three weeks immediately preceding, or if they have not both resided there during three weeks then that one of them has so resided, and stating the place where the party who has not so resided has within three months immediately preceding had for three consecutive weeks his or her usual place of abode, and the notice that has been given in that place, or, if neither party has resided there, stating the place or places where each party has within three months immediately preceding had for three weeks his or her usual place of abode, and the notices that have been given in those places.

After the expiration of 14 days after the notice of an intended marriage has been entered, then if no lawful impediment to the marriage is shown, and the marriage has not been forbidden in manner provided by the Act, the marriage may be solemnized. A consular officer holding a warrant for a district can only solemnize a marriage at his own official house. Parties residing within a consular district who may wish to be married under the Act must go to the consular officer provided with a warrant for that district; two or more witnesses are required to be present.

The following fees for marriages under the Foreign Marriage Act are leviable under the Consular Fees Order in Council of August 18, 1824, and are payable to His Majesty's Government:—

For receiving notice of an intended marriage.....	£ s. d.
For receiving notice of a caveat.....	0 10 0
For every marriage solemnized by or in the presence of a Marriage Officer and registered by him	1 0 0
	0 10 0

For certificate by a Marriage Officer of notice having been given and posted up, in case of one of the parties residing outside the consular district in which the marriage is to take place..... £ s. d. 0 5 0

For attendance by consular officer at a marriage solemnized in accordance with the local law and for registration of the same..... 1 0 0

Marriages may be solemnized 8 a.m. to 3 p.m.

No religious ceremony is required, but any form according to the creed of the contracting parties may be used. The presence of the duly authorised Marriage Officer is, however, necessary to render the marriage valid. If the ceremonial be that of the Church of England, it can only be performed by a clergyman of that Church.

Marriages solemnized under the Foreign Marriage Acts are legal by English law when both parties are British subjects, and also when only one of them is a British subject, but such marriages are not necessarily valid out of His Majesty's dominions. In cases where one of the parties is a subject of the country where the marriage is proposed to take place, or of a third country, the party in question must previously comply with the requirements of the marriage law of the country to which he or she belongs, so far as it may be possible to do so, in order to render such marriage also valid by the law of that country.

An Englishwoman married to a foreigner follows the nationality of her husband.

In Germany and Switzerland marriages by any foreign consular officer are, in the absence of any treaty stipulations, strictly prohibited.

A marriage which would not be valid in England would be equally invalid if solemnized in an embassy, legation, or consulate abroad. For instance, marriages within the prohibited degrees of consanguinity or affinity would not be valid.

A marriage between Christians in India may be proved in England by an India Office certificate (Braid v. Braid, 1909, 25 T.L.R. 646).

Marriages may also be solemnized under the "Foreign Marriages Act, 1892," before the commanding officer of any of His Majesty's ships on a foreign station provided he be of such rank and of such vessel as is for the time being authorised for that purpose by Admiralty instructions.

MARRIAGES ABROAD WITH FOREIGNERS ACCORDING TO FOREIGN LAW.

ACT OF 1906. — Under the Marriage with Foreigners Act, 1906, any British subject desiring to be married in a foreign country to a foreigner according to the law of the country may, after giving notice of the marriage, obtain a certificate from the registrar that there is no legal impediment to the marriage. In order to obtain the certificate, the rules set out in the schedule to the Act must be complied with. Any persons may enter an objection to a certificate, the validity of which will be decided by the Registrar-General.

A marriage by repute which is valid by the law of the domicile in a foreign country will be recognised as valid by the English courts (re Green Noyes v. Pitkin, 1909, 25 T.L.R. 222).

MARRIAGES IN SCOTLAND.

According to the law of Scotland marriage is a contract which is completed by the mutual consent of parties. No formalities are required and no consent of parents or guardians is necessary. It can be contracted by a male over 24 years of age and a female over 12. Marriages may be "regular" or "irregular."

A regular marriage is one which is celebrated by a Minister of religion after due notice by the publication of banns or publication by the Registrar. Any Minister of any denomination (including a person officiating at a Quaker wedding) who performs the ceremony is reckoned to be a minister of religion. It must be performed before two witnesses and one of the parties must have resided in Scotland for at least 15 days before the ceremony. Public proclamation is made by (a) banns or (b) notice by the Registrar. Banns must be proclaimed in the parish church of both parties. In the case of one of the parties residing in England or Ireland a certificate of the proclamation of banns in the parish church of the residence of that party is accepted. It is ordered that the proclamation of banns should be made three times, but by immemorial practice proclamation on one Sunday is sufficient. The Clerk of the Kirk Session of the Parish takes in notices of banns and issues certificates of proclamation. The fee for proclamation may not exceed 2s. 6d. A certificate of proclamation of banns is only valid for three months.

Under the Marriage Notices (Scotland) Act 1878 a notice posted up in a conspicuous or accessible place on the board or outer wall of the Registrar's office is equivalent to the proclamation of banns. Exhibition is made for seven consecutive days. Objection may be made within other seven days. If no objections are lodged the Registrar issues a certificate: fee, 2s. 6d. Such certificate of publication is only valid for three months. Under the Naval Marriages Act 1908 banns may be published on board one of His Majesty's ships where an officer, seaman or Marine on the ship's books wishes to contract a marriage in Scotland. A declaration under the Marriage Notices (Scotland) Act already referred to may also be filled up and the officer commanding the ship may grant a certificate.

Irregular Marriages are survivals of modes of marriage which were general throughout Europe in mediæval times, Scotland having disregarded the decrees of the Council of Trent invalidating irregular marriages; Scotland following the ancient Canon law. These marriages may be contracted in three ways: (1) by exchange of consent before two witnesses (called in legal language per verba de presenti); (2) by promise of marriage followed by intercourse on the faith of the promise (called marriage by promise, subsequente copula); the promise, however, can only be proved by the writing or the oath of the party when action is brought; (3) by constant living together as husband and wife (called marriage by habit and repute), i.e., the general repute of the neighbourhood supported by consistent conduct. Marriage by the first mode is only valid if one of the parties has been resident in Scotland for 21 days before the contract is entered into. (This is the result of legislation and not part of the common law of Scotland.) "Gretna Green" marriages were abolished in 1856 by the Act 19 and 20 Victoria, Chap. 96. Marriages thus contracted may be registered if the parties appear before the Sheriff with their witnesses and petition for registration within three months. On the Sheriff granting warrant the Registrar registers the marriage for a fee of 5s. 1d. The other two forms of marriage before they are held to be valid must be declared by a decree in the Court of Session.

Marriage with a foreigner may be solemnized regularly if one of the parties has a residential qualification and provided that if one party has resided in Scotland for 21 days and the minister agrees to dispense with the proclamation of banns in the case of the foreigner. Marriage of a Scottish person with a foreigner, or marriage of two foreigners, may be contracted irregularly if one or other of the parties has resided in Scotland for 21 days.

PASSPORTS.

Applications for Foreign Office Passports must be made in the form printed on the back of the Regulations (to be had on application), and must be accompanied by two copies of a photograph of the applicant, one copy being duly certified. Applications should be handed in personally at "The Passport Office, 1, Lake Buildings, St. James's Park, London, S.W. 1." but if the applicant does not reside in London, the Passport may be sent by post, and a Postal Order for 7s. 6d., made payable to the Passport Office, should in that case accompany the application. Postage stamps will not be received in payment. Applications should, if possible, reach the Passport Office not less than seven days before that on which the Passport is to be issued. The charge for a Passport is 7s. 6d. Passports are issued between the hours of 10 and 4 (Saturdays, 10 to 1), except on Sundays and Public Holidays, when the Passport Office is closed.

Foreign Office Passports are granted (1) to natural-born British subjects, viz., persons born within His Majesty's dominions, and to persons born abroad who derive British nationality from a father or paternal grandfather born within His Majesty's dominions, and who, under the provisions of the Acts 4 George II., cap. 21, and 23 George III., cap. 21, are to be adjudged and taken to be natural-born British subjects; (2) to the wives and widows of such persons; and (3) to persons naturalised in the United Kingdom, in the British Dominions or Colonies, or in India.

A married woman is deemed to be a subject of the State of which her husband is for the time being a subject.

Passports are granted (1) in the case of natural-born British subjects and persons naturalised in the United Kingdom, upon the production of a Declaration by the applicant in the form printed at the back of the Regulations, verified by a Declaration made by a member or official of any Banking Firm established in the United Kingdom, or by any Mayor, Magistrate, Prevost, Justice of the Peace, Minister of Religion, Barrister-at-law, Physician, Surgeon, Solicitor, or Notary Public, resident in the United Kingdom; the applicant's Certificate of Birth and other evidence may also be required. Applicants serving in His Majesty's Forces may have their declarations verified by their Commanding Officers; (2) in the case of children under the age of 16 years requiring a separate Passport, upon production of a Declaration made by the child's parent or guardian in a Form (B), to be obtained upon application to the Foreign Office; (3) in the case of persons naturalised in any of the British self-governing Dominions, upon production of a letter of recommendation from the High Commissioner or Agent-General in London of the State concerned; and in the case of natives of British India, and persons naturalised therein, upon production of a letter of recommendation from the India Office. Persons naturalised or ordinarily resident in any of the Crown Colonies must obtain a letter of recommendation from the Colonial Office.

If the applicant for a Passport be a naturalised British subject, his certificate of naturalisation must be forwarded to the Foreign Office with the Declaration or letter of recommendation. Naturalised British subjects, if resident in London or in the suburbs, must apply personally for their Passports at the Foreign Office; if resident in the country, the Passport will be sent, and the Certificate of Naturalisation returned, to the person who may have verified the declaration, for delivery to the applicant. Naturalised British subjects will be described as such in their Passports, which will be issued subject to the necessary qualifications.

Foreign Office Passports are not available beyond two years from the date of issue. They may be renewed for four further periods of two years each, after which fresh Passports must be obtained. The fee for each renewal is 2s.

A Passport cannot be issued on behalf of a person already abroad; such person should apply for one to the nearest British Mission or Consulate. Passports must not be sent out of the United Kingdom by post.

PAWNBROKERS' REGULATIONS.

For the TICKET on goods pledged for 10s. or less 1/2d.
On goods pledged for more than 10s. 1d.
For INTEREST on pledges not exceeding 40s., for every 2s. or part of 2s., per month 1/2d.
And after the first month any time not exceeding 14 days to be charged as half a month.
On pledges exceeding 40s., for every half-crown or part of half a crown, per month 1/2d.

FORFEITURE.—Pledges for 10s. and under must be redeemed within twelve calendar months and seven days from the date of pledging. After that they become the property of the pawnbroker.

Pledges above 10s., if not redeemed within twelve calendar months and seven days from the date of pledging, may be sold by auction by the pawnbroker, but may be redeemed at any time before the day of sale.

Within three years after sale the pawnbroker may inspect the account of the sale in the pawnbroker's books on payment of one penny, and receive any surplus produced by the sale. Should there be a deficit, the pawnbroker, or the person producing the ticket, is liable to pay the deficiency. Any deficit on sale of one pledge may be set off by the pawnbroker against surplus on another.

If any pledge is destroyed or damaged by fire, the pawnbroker will be bound to pay the value of the pledge after deducting the amount of the loan and profit—i.e., the loan and profit and 2s per cent. on the amount of the loan.

If any ticket is lost, mislaid, or stolen, the pawnbroker should at once apply to the pawnbroker for a form of declaration to be made before a magistrate, or the pawnbroker will be bound to deliver the pledge to any person who produces the ticket to him and claims to redeem the same.

When the loan is 5s. or under, the charge on form of declaration is one halfpenny; when the loan is above 5s., one penny.

SPECIAL CONTRACTS.—A pawnbroker may make a special contract with a pawnier in respect of a pledge on which the pawnbroker makes a loan of above 40s., provided always that—

(1.) The pawnbroker at the time of the pawning shall deliver to the pawner a special contract pawn-ticket, signed by the pawnbroker.

(2.) The duplicate of the special contract pawn-ticket shall be signed by the pawner.

The pawnbroker may also charge:—For ticket, profit per calendar month, for storage of the pledge, and payment to inspect account of sale, such sums and rates as may be agreed upon at the time of making the contract.

After the first calendar month any time not exceeding fourteen days will be charged as half a month, and any time exceeding fourteen days and not more than one month as one month.

The charge for storage of the pledge will be per calendar month, or any part of a month, in addition to the charges above mentioned.

Pledges may be pawned under special contract for a period of not less than three months.

In all other respects pledges under special contract are subjected to the same rules as to sale by auction, inspection of account of sale, payment of surplus produced by sale, and loss of ticket, as are set forth above in the case of ordinary pledges for more than 10s.

RECEIPTS.

RECEIPTS should be kept for six years from the date of payment, after which period no action can be brought concerning the goods, &c., received.

RENT RESTRICTION

AND OTHER MODIFICATIONS OF THE LAW OF LANDLORD AND TENANT.

The Increase of Rent and Mortgage Interest (Restrictions) Act, 1920, was dealt with on pp. 427-428 of the 1921 edition of "WHITAKER."

STREETS AND FOOTPATHS.

STREETS AND FOOTPATHS.—The scavenging of streets and the cleansing of footways and pavements is generally undertaken by the sanitary authorities. It is unlawful to place or leave on any footway any furniture, goods, wares or merchandise, or any cask, tub, basket, pall, &c.; or to place over any footway any blind, shade, covering, awning, or other projection less than eight feet in height from the ground; or to place any goods, wares, merchandise, matter, or thing whatsoever, so that the same project in such a manner as to obstruct or incommode the passage of any person over or along a footway; or to roll any cask, tub, hoop, or wheel upon any footway, except for the purpose of crossing the footway; or to throw or lay down any materials in any street, or beat or shake any carpet, rug, or mat in any street after the hour of eight in the morning.

VACCINATION.

The parent of every child born in England must within six months after the birth of the child, or the person having custody of a child must within six months after receiving it, have the child vaccinated by a registered private medical practitioner or by the Public Vaccinator for the district. If the vaccination is performed by a private medical practitioner a certificate in the form prescribed by the Vaccination Order, 1898, of successful vaccination must be sent to the Registrar of Births within seven days. The Public Vaccinator is required on the request of the parent or guardian of a child to visit the home of the child and vaccinate it free of charge with glycerinated calf lymph or with such other lymph as may be issued by the Local Government Board at the option of the parent. If a child is not vaccinated within 4 months of its birth, the Public Vaccinator is required to give 24 hours' notice to the parent and to visit the home of the child and offer to vaccinate it. No parent or other person will be liable to any penalty under the Vaccination Acts if within four months from the birth he makes a statutory declaration before a commissioner for oaths or one justice of the peace that he conscientiously believes that vaccination would be prejudicial to the health of the child, and within seven days thereafter delivers the statutory declaration (which requires no stamp) to the Vaccination Officer for the district. A conscientious objector can thus escape all penalties, but a person who does not obtain a certificate, or make the declaration, will still be liable to penalties for not having a child vaccinated, and by the Vaccination Order, 1898, issued under the Vaccination Act, 1898, by the Local Government Board, the due vaccination of every child not exempted is secured by a very complete system of registration, and in future the Vaccination Officers will be able to undertake prosecutions without directions from Boards of Guardians, and the Boards will have no power to prevent such prosecutions. [See also Vaccination Order, 1907.]

WILLS.

REASONS FOR MAKING A WILL.—Every man having a wife and family should make his will. However small his estate, it is an imperative duty in most cases, and is safer in every case, to protect the interest of the survivors by a will, and by the appointment of one or more trustworthy persons to carry his wishes into effect. When persons die intestate, having foolishly put off making a will until it is too late, their negligence may deprive those for whom they were most anxious to provide. Thus a widow may find that the estate, a life policy perhaps, is not all hers, but has to be shared with a distant cousin of her husband's. Negligence, or unreasoning dislike to making a will, becomes an irreparable crime against those who have the first claim to protection. The help of a lawyer in making a will is not in every case essential, but it is always advisable, particularly where there is a desire on a testator's part to provide for his property being "settled" as it is called—e.g., the income being paid to his widow for her life, or until remarriage, and on her death or remarriage the capital being divided among his children equally. The tying-up or postponing the enjoyment of income or capital requires the skill of a practised lawyer. Assuming that a lawyer is not employed, a person having resolved to make a will must not regard it as a light matter, to be got rid of in a few minutes, like writing a letter, but one demanding the most serious attention. It is only after a person is dead, and cannot explain his meaning, that his will can be open to dispute. It is the more necessary, therefore, to express what is meant in language of the utmost clearness, avoiding the use of any word or expression that seems to admit of another meaning than the one intended. The lawyers have a maxim that the unforeseen (i.e., the event not provided for) always happens. It is better to be prolix than to leave the smallest room for doubt or uncertainty, although the same name or word be repeated over and over again. Sounding phrases are entirely out of place. Avoid the use of "legal terms," such as "heirs" and "issue," when the same thing may be expressed in plain language. If in writing the will a mistake be made, it is better to rewrite the whole. Before a will is executed, that is, signed by the testator in presence of two witnesses, an alteration may be made by striking through the words with a pen, but opposite to such alteration the testator and witnesses should write their names or place their initials. Never scratch out a word with a knife or other instrument, and no alteration of any kind whatever must be made after the will is executed. If the testator afterwards wishes to change the disposition of his estate, it is better to make a new will, revoking the old one, or to add a codicil to the first, which must be duly executed and attested in the same manner as the original will. A will should be written in ink and very legibly on a single sheet of paper. Although, of course, forms of wills must vary to suit different cases, the following directions may be found useful to those who, in cases of emergency, are called upon to draw up wills, either for themselves or others:—

TESTATOR OR TESTATRIX.—The person who makes the will is the testator, or if the will-maker be a woman, the testatrix.

ESTATE.—By this word is to be understood property of all kinds, both real and personal. Real property includes tithes and advowsons, as well as freehold land and houses; while personal property includes debts due, arrears of rents, money, leasehold property, house furniture, goods, assurance policies, stock in public companies, and the like.

RESIDUARY LEGATEES.—It is well in all cases to leave to some person or persons "the residue of my estate and effects," although it may be thought that the whole of the property has been disposed of in legacies already mentioned in the will. It should be remembered that a will operates on property acquired after it has been made.

TO BEGIN A WILL.—A form in which a will may be commenced is:—"This is the last will of me, Thomas Smith, of Vine Cottage, Silver Street, Reading, in the county of Berks."

TO END A WILL.—After disposing of the property, the will may be ended as follows:—"And I hereby appoint the said — sole (or joint) executor(s) of this my Will, and I revoke all former wills and codicils. Dated this — day of —, 19—."

EXECUTION OF A WILL.—The testator should sign his name at the foot or end of the will, in presence of two witnesses, who will immediately sign their names in his and in each other's presence. A person who has been left a legacy or share of residue in the will, or whose wife or husband has been left a legacy, should not be an attesting witness. Their attestation would be good, but they would forfeit the legacy. It is better that a person named as executor should not be a witness. Husband and wife may both be witnesses, provided neither is a legatee. If a solicitor be appointed executor, it is lawful to direct that his ordinary fees and charges shall be paid; but in this case he (as an interested party) must not be a witness to the will.

ATTESTING EXECUTION.—Opposite to or beneath the testator's signature should be written the attestation clause. The following form of attestation will be found sufficient:—

Signed by the testator or testatrix, as the case may be, in the presence of us, both present at the same time who in his (or her) presence and in the presence of each other have hereunto set our names as witnesses.

THOMAS SMITH
[Signature of Testator.]

William Jones, of Vine Cottage, Silver Street, Reading, Tailor. Henry Morgan, of North Street, Reading, Esq.

It is desirable that the witnesses should be fully described, as they may possibly be wanted at some future time. If the testator should be too ill to sign, even by a mark, another person may sign the testator's name to the will for him, in his presence and by his direction, and in this case it should be shown that the testator knew the contents of the document. The attestation clause should therefore be worded: "Signed by Thomas Brown, by the direction and in the presence of the testator, Thomas Smith, in the joint presence of us, who thereupon signed our names in his presence and in the presence of each other, the will having been first read over to the testator, who appeared fully to understand the same." If the testator be blind the will should be read aloud to him in the presence of the witnesses, and the fact mentioned in the attestation clause. If by inadvertence the testator should have signed his will without the witnesses being present, then the attestation should be:—"The testator acknowledged his signature already made as his signature to his last will and testament, in the joint presence," &c. Any omission in the observance of these details causes delay and expense, and sometimes great difficulty is experienced in procuring an affidavit by one of the attesting witnesses before the will can be admitted to Probate.

CODICIL.—When any change is required to be made in the disposition of property as stated in the will, the change should be embodied in a codicil. A codicil should begin:—"This is a codicil to the will of me, Thomas Smith, of Vine Cottage, Silver Street, Reading, in the county of Berks, the said will bearing date," &c. A codicil must be dated at the end, and signed and witnessed with exactly the same formalities as the will.

EXECUTORS.—It is usual to appoint two executors, although one is sufficient. The name and address of each executor should be given in full, as follows:—"I appoint John Jones, of number twenty-one, London Street, Ipswich, and Edward Matthews, of number seventeen, Market Street, Lincoln, executors of this my will." An executor may be a legatee. Thus a child or wife to whom the whole or a portion of the estate is left may be appointed sole executor, or one of two executors. The addresses of the executors are not necessary; but it is desirable, here as elsewhere, to avoid ambiguity or vagueness.

APPOINTMENT OF TRUSTEES.—The form of appointment of executors will also serve when the estate is left in care of trustees, except that the persons should be designated "executors and trustees." The Public Trustee may be appointed executor or trustee of a will. See PUBLIC TRUSTEE, post.

TRUSTS OF THE WILL.—When the estate is wholly for the children, the will may read, after the appointment of the executors and trustees:—"I give and devise all my estate and effects, real and personal, of which I may die possessed or entitled to, unto the said John Jones and Edward Matthews, upon trust in equal shares for all or any my children or child living at my death who being sons or a son attain the age of 21 years or being daughters or a daughter attain that age or marry. And for all or any the children or child living at my death, who being male attain the age of 21 years or being female attain that age or marry of any child of mine who dies in my lifetime leaving children or a child living at my death, such last-mentioned children or child to take the share or shares which their parent would have taken if living at my death, and so that no grandchild of mine shall take whose parent is living and capable of taking." Where the widow is to have a life-interest use the following words: "upon trust for my wife during her life (or during her widowhood), and after her death (or second marriage, which first happens) upon trust in equal shares for all or any my children or child" &c. as before. The words in square brackets will only be used where the widow is to lose her interest if she marries again.

TESTAMENTARY CAPACITY.—A minor cannot make a will. A married woman (married since January 1, 1863) may dispose by will of any real or personal property as her separate property as if she were a feme sole (Married Women's Property Act, 1882, s. 1 (1)). As to the powers of a woman married before that date it is advisable to consult a solicitor.

REVOCATION.—A will is revoked by a subsequent will (but only so far as such subsequent will operates as a virtual revocation, as by making other provisions inconsistent with the previous will; for this reason a will should always have a clause revoking previous testamentary dispositions), or by burning, tearing, or otherwise destroying the same. It is not sufficient to obliterate the will with a pen. Marriage in every case acts as the revocation of a will: so that after marriage the old will should be re-acknowledged, or a new one made.

LAPSED LEGACIES.—If a legatee die in the lifetime of the testator, the legacy or share of residue lapses and falls into the residue, excepting only in cases where the legatee is a child or "other issue" of the testator and leaves issue living at the testator's death, and the will does not provide for the class of children or issue being ascertained at some period other than the death of the testator. For instance, if a share of residue is left to "all my children living at my wife's death," the share of a child who died in the wife's lifetime would lapse even though the child should leave issue.

TO ONE PERSON ABSOLUTELY.—When it is the intention to leave all the property to one person, as for instance a wife or child, the will may read:—"I devise and bequeath all my estate and effects, real and personal, which I may die possessed of or entitled to, unto my wife Mary Smith, absolutely."

TO CHILDREN UNDER AGE.—When estates are left wholly or in part to children under the age of 21 years, trustees should be appointed to hold the property in trust for those to whom it will ultimately belong. The trustees will have power to apply the annual income for their maintenance. A wife may be appointed a trustee, or may be sole trustee. It is also usual to appoint the executors or some near relative, guardians of children under age. By the Guardianship of Infants Act, 1866, the mother of a child, if she survives the father, becomes the guardian of such child, either alone, if no guardian is appointed, or jointly with any guardian appointed by the father.

ALL PROPERTY TO BE INVESTED.—Executors and trustees may be empowered to sell and dispose of an estate, and after the payment of all just debts and expenses to invest the remainder. For this purpose the section headed "Trust Investments" should be consulted.

The stringency of the law as to the due execution of wills is only relaxed in favour of sailors and soldiers while on service. The law of wills is mostly contained in the Wills Act, 1 Vict. c. 27.

DUTIES OF EXECUTORS.—After the death of the testator, the duties of the executor may be stated briefly as follows:—The first duty of the executors, or of one of them, is to see that the funeral takes place in a suitable and becoming way; then to make lists or schedules of the debts and the assets or property. For purposes of duty it is necessary to estimate the value of the real and personal property left, or get it valued. Under the Finance Act, 1894, duties are charged on all property in which the testator had a life interest, even though the property may not have been under his personal control. The executor must take the will to the Probate Registry, Somerset House, or to the Probate Registry of the district in which the testator had a fixed place of abode, or to a solicitor, and prove the will; to collect all the property of the deceased and pay all his just debts, and before distributing the estate, if it be a large one, it is necessary in order to relieve the executors from personal liability to duly advertise in certain London and local newspapers for all claims against the estate to be sent in before a specified date. Pay the legacy or succession duty. Dispose of the residue of the property as directed in the will. By the Land Transfer Act, 1897, all the testator's real estate becomes vested in the executors, who hold the same as trustees for the persons beneficially entitled under the will or otherwise, and such persons can only acquire a title to the estate through the executors, after payment of all charges and liabilities to which the same is subject. Executors are not obliged to act, neither is it necessary that all the executors should act: one alone is competent to prove a will and carry out its provisions. In small estates, probate and letters of administration may be obtained through an Inland Revenue Office.

ADMINISTRATORS.—If an executor has not been appointed in the will, or if the executor be dead, or does not wish to act, the residuary legatee nearest of kin to the deceased, or a legatee under the will, is entitled to act and administer the will, and is called administrator.

WHERE TO FIND A PROVED WILL.

To find a will proved before 1st January, 1858, the date on which the Court of Probate Act, 1857 (20 & 21 Vict. c. 77), came into operation, it is best to search first—if the testator was a man of substance—the index to the wills proved in the Prerogative Court of Canterbury, which is kept at Somerset House. Failing this, the will is probably to be found in the registry of the district in which it was proved. The wills proved prior to 1858 were all distributed among the district registries when these institutions came into existence. This is the only broad rule which can be laid down to guide a searcher. To find a will proved since 1858 is a far simpler task. It must have been proved either at the Principal Registry at Somerset House, or in the registry of the district in which the testator lived. In the former case the original will itself is carefully preserved at Somerset House, the copy of which probate has been granted is in the hands of the executors who proved the will, and another copy for Parliament is bound up in a folio volume of wills made by testators of that initial and date; the indices to these volumes fill a room of considerable size at Somerset House, where the indices may be examined and any will read on payment of a search fee of one shilling. In the latter case, the original will, proved in the District Registry, is there kept, and may be seen or a copy obtained, but a copy is sent to and filed at Somerset House, where also it may be seen. A general index of grants, both probate and administrations, is prepared and printed annually in lexicographical form, and may be seen at either the Principal or a District Registry. This index is usually ready by about June or July of the following year. The reader may not copy any part of the will except the names and addresses of the executors and the date and private number of the will. If he desires a copy, he can order one to be made, for which he will pay according to the length of the will, at the rate of sixpence a folio (ninety words) for an ordinary copy, and ninepence a folio for a certified copy, which, with a shilling stamp impressed thereon, can be produced and read in any court of law. The District Probate Registries were enumerated on p. 431 of the 1922 "WHITAKER."

SAFE CUSTODY OF WILLS.

There is a depository for the safe custody of the Wills of living persons at Somerset House. Since 1857 this depository has been provided by the State under sect. 91 of the Act 20 & 21 Vic. c. 77; but the provision has been almost a dead-letter. A will may be deposited through the Registrar of a District Registry, who will transmit the will to London in a registered letter on receiving a fee of 10s. for the deposit, of 2s. 6d. for entering a minute thereof, and 2s. for filing the affidavit which is required. A will once deposited will not be given up to anybody, but must remain in the registry until the testator dies, unless he goes to the registry with the original minute of deposit and other proof of his identity, and destroys his will in the presence of the Registrar. (See also PUBLIC TRUSTEE, post.)

PROBATE OF WILLS.

OBTAINING PROBATE OR ADMINISTRATION WITHOUT THE AID OF A SOLICITOR.

The entrance to the office for personal applications is in the south-east corner of the Quadrangle of Somerset House, Strand, Room 44. The applicant should bring the registrar's certificate of the death of the deceased, or an official certificate of burial, and the will, if there be one, and full details of the property and debts of the deceased.

If there be no will or no executor be appointed, or the executor will not act, two sureties must also attend and enter into a bond for the faithful administration of the estate, unless the whole personal estate does not exceed £50, or the husband is the applicant, when one surety only will be required.

The scale of probate duty as at present in force will be found in detail under "Estate Duty."

In no case can any correspondence be entered into; nor can an interview be given to any agent. The business of the department can be transacted only with the applicant in person.

Where the deceased resided within the district of one of the "District Probate Registries" (q.v.) application may be made at that registry instead of at Somerset House.

Where the whole real and personal estate, without the deduction of debts or funeral expenses, does not exceed £500, application may be made at one of the Inland Revenue Offices in the suburbs and many principal towns throughout the country.

Where the deceased has left no will, and the whole personal estate does not exceed £500, and the widow resides at more than three miles from any Probate Registry, application may be made to the Registrar of the County Court.

Scotland.—"Confirmation" is the Scottish equivalent of Probate. That is obtained in the Sheriff Court of the County in which the deceased was domiciled at the date of his death or where he had no fixed domicile or died abroad, in the commissariat of Edinburgh. Executors are either "nominate" or "dative." An Executor nominate is one nominated by the deceased in his will. An Executor dative is one appointed by the Court (1) in the case of intestacy or (2) where the deceased had failed to name an executor in his will. In the former case the deceased's next-of-kin are all entitled to be declared executors dative. An inventory of the deceased's estate and a schedule of debts, together with an affidavit, must be given up. If the deceased had personal property in England or Ireland it is shown in the inventory, and then the confirmation is produced in the principal Court of Probate in England or Ireland. It is then sealed in such Courts and has the effect of probate or letters of administration in England or Ireland. In estates under £500 confirmation is obtained at reduced fees.

SCOTS LAW OF WILLS.

The only formalities required by the Law of Scotland as regards due execution of a will are for purposes of authentication. A will must be in writing (except that a person may leave a legacy verbally if the amount of that legacy does not exceed 100 Scots (£8 6s. 8d. sterling). A will may be either (1) holograph, i.e., written by the testator himself, in which case no witnesses are necessary; (2) tested, which means that it is signed in presence of two witnesses. It is not necessary that these witnesses should sign in presence of one another, or even that they should see the testator signing so long as the testator acknowledges his signature to the witnesses. If the testator cannot write, his will may be authenticated by a notary and two witnesses. A parish minister may act as a notary for the purpose of subscribing a will in his own parish. Wills are registered for execution purposes in the Books of the County in which the deceased died domiciled, and in the Books of Council and Session, H.M. General Register House, Edinburgh, for preservation. The original deed may be inspected in the General Register House on payment of a small fee. A certified official copy may be obtained from either register on payment of stamp duties and writing fees.

TRUST FUNDS AND INVESTMENTS.

The Act of 1893 enacts that Trustees may invest in any Parliamentary Stocks or Government Securities of the United Kingdom: on real or heritable Securities in Great Britain or Ireland: in Bank of England Stock: Bank of Indian Stock: India 5½ per cent. and 5 per cent. stocks; any Stock hereafter issued by authority of Parliament charged on revenues of India: any Securities having interest guaranteed by Parliament: Metropolitan Board of Works or London County Council Stocks: Debenture Stock created by Metropolitan Police District Receiver: Debenture, Rent-charge, Guaranteed or Preference Stocks of any railway in Great Britain or Ireland that has paid not less than 3 per cent. per annum on Ordinary Stock for each of the 10 years preceding date of investment: any railway or canal Stock in Great Britain or Ireland leased for 100 years or more at a fixed rental to any railway specified above: Indian Railway Debenture Stocks of companies with interest paid or guaranteed by Indian Council: "B" Annuities, Eastern Bengal, East Indian, and Kinde, Punjab, and Delhi Railway, "C" and "D" Annuities of the East Indian Railway, and any like annuities of any other railway hereafter created: any Indian railway with fixed or minimum dividend paid or guaranteed by Indian Council: any Debenture, Guaranteed or Preference Stocks of any incorporated or chartered Water Company in Great Britain or Ireland that has paid not less than 5 per cent. per annum on Ordinary Stock for each of the 10 years preceding date of investment: any Corporation Stock of any borough having 50,000 inhabitants: any County Council Stock authorised by Act of Parliament or Provisional Order: any Water Stocks issued by incorporated Commissioners levying compulsory rates over areas containing 50,000 inhabitants, such rates not having exceeded 80 per cent. of authorised amount for 10 years: and in any Securities authorised by order of the High Courts of Justice of England or Ireland. Provided Stocks redeemable within 15 years are not purchased at a premium over the redemption price, or at more than 15 per cent. premium over such redemption price if redeemable after 15 years.

The Rule of the Supreme Court, 1883, authorises investment in:—Debenture, Preference, Guaranteed, or Rent-charge Stocks of railways in Great Britain or Ireland having for ten years next before the date of investment paid a dividend on Ordinary Stock or Shares, and in like Stocks if guaranteed by Railway Companies of the same description and in Nominal Debentures or Nominal Debenture Stock under the Local Loans Act, 1875, or under the Isle of Man Loans Act, 1880, provided such Stocks are not liable to redemption within fifteen years from the date of investment.

The Trusts Amendment Act, 1884 (Scotland only), excludes Irish real or heritable Securities or Stocks, and British Railway contingent Preference and Waterworks Stocks; admits all Railway Debenture Stocks and Guaranteed Stocks of railways that have paid Ordinary Dividends for the past ten years, and all Municipal Loans, and East India Stocks, and registered Colonial Stocks if approved by Court of Session.

The Colonial Stock Act, 1900, permits Trustees, both English and Scottish, to invest in certain Colonial Stocks registered in the United Kingdom which the Treasury publishes a list of in the London and Edinburgh Gazettes, but subject to the clause as to Redeemable Stocks in the Trustee Act, 1893.

THE PUBLIC TRUSTEE.

This is a Government Office (opened in 1891) by means of which the State acts as Executor and as Trustee under a Will, or as Trustee under a Settlement, whether new or old, and in other capacities of a like nature. The public demand for the services of the Public Trustee is well maintained. The value of the trusts accepted up to March 31, 1911, was £166,184,701.

The facts of any trust, new or old, in which it is desired that the Public Trustee should act may be brought to his notice by letter or by personal interview. Upon his assenting to act, his appointment is effected in the same simple way as in that of a private trustee, or he can be appointed by an Order of the Court. He can act solely or jointly with others.

In the case of a Will about to be made, all that the testator need say is, "I appoint the Public Trustee executor and trustee of this my Will"; or—the appointment may be a joint one with friends or relations. In the case of a Will already made, the appointment of the Public Trustee can be effected by means of a codicil. Executors who have obtained probate can transfer their duties to him under an Order of the Court. He can also act as Administrator with, or without, the Will annexed.

The Public Trustee being a permanent trustee, the expense of fresh appointments is saved. His integrity is guaranteed by the State, while the public demand for his services should ensure a valuable experience and skill in the execution of his office; and a wide knowledge in the work of investment.

The Public Trustee is not, as such, limited in his powers of investment to trustee securities, but, like a private trustee, he is bound by such powers of investment as may be given him in the Will or trust instrument under which he acts.

The progress of the Department may doubtless be ascribed to the wide public need for such an office; secondly, to the State guarantee which accompanies the remedy provided; and thirdly, to the endeavour which is made to keep the administration upon personal lines. The Public Trustee makes a point of giving the personal attention of himself or of his senior officials to the personal details of any trust. The statutory rules require that strict secrecy shall be observed in respect of all matters dealt with in the Department. Accounts of every trust, in simple form, are furnished to the beneficiaries as required.

The Public Trustee Act provides that the fees to be charged shall be arranged from time to time so as to produce an annual amount sufficient to discharge the salaries and other expenses of the Department and no more. A profit is not intended. Owing to the increase in general administrative expenses, and to the shrinkage of the capital values and the net income upon which the fees were assessed, it has been necessary to revise the scale prevailing since 1912. An important Committee of Investigation, presided over by Sir George Murray, G.C.S., was appointed by the Lord Chancellor in April, 1912, to inquire into the organisation of the Office and any alteration which might be required in the scale of fees.

An interview with the Public Trustee or with any of his senior officers can be arranged at any time by letter or telephone.

A pamphlet giving full particulars and details of the fees can be obtained free of cost upon application to the Office of the Public Trustee, Kingsway, W.C.2 (tel., Holborn 2,400), or at any Post Office.

A branch office has been opened in Northern Assurance Buildings, Albert Square, Manchester. (For list of Officers, see p. 267.)

SOLICITORS' CHARGES.

These are now usually regulated in conveyancing and non-contentious business by the Solicitors' Remuneration Act, 1881, and the Scale thereunder—we say "usually" because that Act allows an option to a solicitor of declining to adopt it. In practice, most solicitors (although some old-established firms are found to prefer the old system) are willing to adopt the Scale, and especially on mortgages and sales. Looking first at the old system, we find that an Act of 1843 made solicitors' charges on conveyancing liable to taxation by a public official; and in 1870 a further Act enabled the taxing officer to have regard to "skill, labour, and responsibility" as well as to mere length of documents. The Act of 1881 enabled the high legal authorities, with the consent of certain representative solicitors, to frame a Scale, and this has been done. It chiefly relates to sales, purchases, and mortgages, and is based upon the value of the property or amount of the money involved. Besides this, it is legal for a client to make a bargain beforehand for a fixed sum. The amount coming to the solicitor, whether under Scale or agreement, is intended to cover the services of himself and his clerks, while it is, of course, exclusive of actual outlay for stamps, &c. On purchase or mortgage money exceeding £300 and not exceeding £1,000, the Scale charge for each party's solicitor is 1½ per cent.; this does not apply to sales by auction. Where a negotiation fee is chargeable, in addition, by the vendor's, purchaser's, or mortgagee's (not mortgagor's) solicitor, the Scale charge on sums exceeding £300 and not exceeding £3,000 is 1 per cent. It should be noted that if the solicitor negotiates the purchase or mortgage, he is entitled to an additional fee of substantial amount under the Scale referred to. All charges (except scale and certain County Court matters) are now subject to an increase of 33½ per cent.

Scotland.—Solicitors' fees for Conveyancing and General business are regulated by a joint table approved by the different societies of Law Agents (Solicitors). Fees for litigation are regulated by the Court of Session. The tables of fees are published in The "Parliament House Book" and in "The Scottish Law Directory." When a solicitor sues for payment of a professional account it is remitted to the Auditor of the Court for taxation of his charges.

MEDICAL FEES.

Patients are charged according to their supposed incomes, the income being indicated by the rental of the houses in which they reside. The following are the charges usually made by general practitioners:—

GENERAL PRACTITIONERS.	RENTALS.
	£50 to £75	£75 to £100	£100 to £200
Ordinary Visit	5s. to 7s. 6d.	10s. to 12s. 6d.	7s. 6d. to 12s.
Night Visits	Double an ordinary visit.
Mileage beyond two miles from Home	2s. 6d.	3s.	4s.
Detention per hour	5s. to 7s. 6d.	5s. to 10s. 6d.	7s. 6d. to 12s.
Letters of Advice	Same charge as for an ordinary visit.
Attendance on accidents	2s.	2s. 6d.	10s. to 7s. 6d.
Midwifery	12s.	15 to 25	15 Ga. 40 to 25 Ga.
Administering Children	2s.	2s.	3 Ga.
CONSULTANTS.
Advice or Visit alone	5 Ga.	5 Ga.	5 Ga.
Advice or Visit with another Practitioner	15 Ga.	25 to 3 Ga.	15 to 3 Ga.
Mileage beyond two miles from Home	2s.	2s.	2s.

Special visits—i.e., of which due notice has not been given before the practitioner starts on his daily round, are charged at the rate of a visit and a half. Patients calling upon the doctor are charged at the same rate as if visited by him.

When the ordinary medical attendant is called upon to meet another in consultation, he is entitled to charge double his ordinary fee. When he himself is called in in consultation he is entitled to the minimum fee.

When more members of one family are ill at the same time, half a fee is charged for each beyond the first.

In midwifery cases the fee generally covers all charges for visits, &c., if all goes well, but if the illness be protracted, or if any special operation has to be performed, there is an extra charge.

If attendance on servants is paid for by employer or if he send for the doctor, the charge is the same as to himself.

Certificates of health are to be charged for same as visits, except where special investigation is needed, as in certificates for lunacy, insurance offices, &c., when the charge may be from half a guinea to two guineas.

Vaccination is usually charged for according to the number of visits required.

Medical bills are commonly rendered once or twice a year.

ACCOUNTANTS' CHARGES.

For preparing balance-sheet, investigating accounts, &c., principal's time, exclusively so employed, per day of seven hours, £1 1s. to £5 5s.

Chief clerk's time, 10s. 6d. to £1 12s. 6d.

Other clerks' time, per day of seven hours, 7s. 6d. to 12s.

These charges to include stationery, except the forms used.

When accountants are elected auditors of a Joint Stock Company by its shareholders the fee is usually mentioned in the resolution.

ARCHITECTS.

Fees on New Works.—For taking the Client's instructions, preparing sketch design, making approximate estimate of cost by cubic measurement, or otherwise, preparing drawings and specifications for the purpose of estimates, obtaining tenders, advising on tenders and in preparation of contract, selecting and instructing of consultants, furnishing to the Contractor one copy of the drawings and specification and such other details as are necessary for the proper carrying out of the works, general supervision as above defined, issuing certificates for payment, and passing and certifying accounts, a percentage on the total cost of all executed works as follows:—

(a) If the contract or order exceeds £5,000 the percentage is to be 6 per cent.

(b) If the contract or order does not exceed £5,000 the percentage is to be 10 per cent. in the case of works costing £100 graduated to 6 per cent. in the case of works costing £5,000 as the special character of such works may render appropriate.

Alterations and Additions.—A percentage not exceeding twice the amount due for new works of the same cost.

Fittings, Decorations, &c.—In works in which designs for fittings, appointments, decorations, or complex detail or construction are main features, special fees may be charged according to the circumstances, and also for designs for furniture.

Omitted Works.—In addition to the percentage on the total cost of executed works, the Architect is to be paid in respect of all works included in the tender or order, but not executed, two-thirds of the charge which would have been due upon them had they been carried out.

Partial Services.—If the project or part of it be abandoned, or if the services of the Architect cease or are dispensed with before a contract is entered into or order given, the charges in respect of the works abandoned or for which the Architect was employed (as the case may be) are as follows:—

(a) For making approximate estimate of cost by cubic measurement, or otherwise, one-fourth of the percentage on the estimated cost of such works.

(b) For making approximate estimate of cost by cubic measurement, or otherwise, and preparing drawings and particulars sufficient to enable quantities to be prepared or a tender obtained, two-thirds of the percentage on the estimated cost of such works.

Installments.—On a contract being entered into or order given for the works the Architect shall be entitled to an instalment of two-thirds of the charge calculated on the total amount of the contract or order, and no part of such payment shall be reclaimable from the Architect in the event of the subsequent abandonment of the works. The remainder of the Architect's remuneration shall be payable by instalments from time to time as the work proceeds.

Work Executed with Old Materials, &c.—In all cases where work is executed wholly or in part with old materials, or where material, labour or carriage is provided by the Client, the percentage shall be calculated as if the works had been executed throughout by a Contractor, and with new material.

Services Not Included in Percentage.—The foregoing percentages do not cover the following services, for which, and for any other services not covered by any payment herein provided for, additional charges may be made in accordance with the amount of work involved:—

Advising as to the selection and suitability of site. Negotiations relating to the site or building. Surveying the site or building and taking levels, and making surveys, measurements, and plans of existing buildings.

The preparation of further sketch designs necessitated by a material alteration in, or addition to the Client's instructions, or altering the working drawings and specification in consequence thereof prior to the commencement of the works. Altering drawings, or preparing new drawings, and other services involved in consequence of variations or additions desired by the Client after the commencement of the works. Making extra drawings for the Client's or Contractors' use, and making drawings for and negotiations with ground landlords, adjoining owners, public authorities, or others, and making applications for licences and consents.

Making arrangements in respect of party walls and rights of light and other easements, reservations or restrictions. Services in connection with litigation or arbitration. Services consequent upon or resulting from the death or bankruptcy of Contractors or the failure or neglect of Contractors from any cause whatever to carry out the works in accordance with the contract or order or consequent upon the fraud or negligence of the Clerk of Works. Services in connection with fire, flood, or tempest during the execution of the works, and services in connection with the planning of grounds or gardens.

Housing Schemes and Laying Out Estates.—The fees are those approved by the Ministry of Health, the Board of Agriculture and Fisheries, and the Scottish Board of Health.

Approval of Lessee's Plans.—For approving plans submitted by a lessee and for inspecting the work during its progress so far as may be necessary to ensure the conditions being fulfilled, and certifying for lease when required, the charge is as follows:—

For each £100 or part of £100 of the total cost up to £500, 2½ per cent. (minimum fee, £3 3s.).

For each £100 or part of £100 from £500 to £5,000, 1½ per cent.

For each £100 or part of £100 above £5,000, 1 guinea per cent.

Litigation and Arbitration.—For qualifying to give evidence, settling proofs, conferences with Solicitors and Counsel, attendances in Court or before Arbitrators or other tribunals, and for other services in connection with litigation and arbitration the charges are based upon the time occupied and the professional standing of the Architect.

Land Surveying and Levelling.—For surveying and making a plan of a town, village, street or road, estate or grounds, or any part thereof, for taking levels, setting out streets or roads, and for other services in connection with land not otherwise specifically provided for, the charges are by time in accordance with Clause 21.

Sanitary Surveys.—For inspecting, reporting and advising on the sanitary condition of premises, the charge is by time in accordance with Clause 21, the minimum fee being £3 3s., in addition to the cost of assistance and appliances.

Expenses.—The above-mentioned fees are, in all cases, exclusive of the cost of copies of documents, lithography, travelling and hotel expenses, and all other disbursements, which are to be charged in addition.

QUANTITY SURVEYORS.

A fee of 2½ per cent. upon the amount of the lowest tender received for the contemplated building, or upon its estimated cost should the work be abandoned before tenders are received, is charged by Quantity Surveyors for preparing Bills of Quantities.

FOR MEASURING AND ADJUSTING VARIATIONS the fees are 2½ per cent. on the amount of additions, and 1½ per cent. on the amount of omissions brought into account.

FOR SERVICES IN CONNECTION WITH LITIGATION OR ARBITRATION, a charge per day (dependent upon the Surveyor's professional position) is made.

The above charges are exclusive of the cost of printing, lithography, and fair copies of accounts, and in all cases travelling and other out-of-pocket expenses are payable in addition to the fees.

CONSULTING ENGINEERS.

On Constructional Work the payment is usually an agreed fee or a commission (which includes the necessary drawings, &c.) of 5 per cent. on the cost of the works where the contract exceeds £5,000 and 7½ to 20 per cent. where the amount does not exceed £5,000.

For Quantities and Accounts (the services which in architectural work would not be covered by the architect's fee but would be Quantity Surveyor's work) the usual charge is $\frac{1}{4}$ to a per cent. where the amount exceeds £5,000 and 2 to $\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. on amounts below £5,000.

AUCTIONEERS, SURVEYORS AND ESTATE AGENTS.

1. Sales by Auction.

Freehold, Leasehold, and Copyhold Properties, including the preparation of particulars, and advising as to reserves:—On the first £300, 5 per cent.; on the next £4,700, $\frac{1}{2}$ per cent.; on the residue, $\frac{1}{4}$ per cent.

In addition to the above charges:—On amounts paid by the purchaser for Chattels, Fixtures, Fittings, Trade Stocks, and other Movable Effects, Timber, and Tenant-right under the conditions of sale, in addition to the purchase-money of the property:—5 per cent. on £500, and $\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. on residue, to include inventory and valuation.

Sale before Auction.

After issue of advertisements, the same scale as by auction.

Non-Sale.

Charge equivalent to one-fourth of the commission which would have been earned on a sale up to £3,000 calculated on the reserve price, to include valuation for reserves; on larger amounts by arrangement.

Sale after Auction.

In the event of the property being sold within three months after the auction, the charges for non-sale would merge into the ordinary commission then payable.

Furniture, Trade Stocks, and Chattels.—5 per cent. on the amount realised, exclusive of preparation of catalogues.

Plant and Machinery.—5 per cent. on the amount realised, exclusive of preparation of catalogues.

Lives and Dead Farming Stock (except Horses and Pedigree Cattle).— $\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. on live stock, and 5 per cent. on dead stock, on the amount realised.

Horses and Pedigree Cattle.—5 per cent. on the amount realised.

On Lots referred to in the last four paragraphs, reserved or bought in by or on behalf of the vendor.—One half the commission on sale, calculated on the amount of reserve or buying-in price.

2. Private Treaty Sales.

Freehold and Copyhold Estates and Houses, and Ground Leases.—On the first £300, 5 per cent.; on the next £4,700, $\frac{1}{2}$ per cent.; on the residue, $\frac{1}{4}$ per cent.; and a commission, in addition, on the amount paid for Chattels, Fixtures, Fittings, Furniture, Trade Stocks, and other Movable Effects, Timber, and Tenant-right, of 5 per cent. up to £500, and $\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. on the residue, to include inventory and valuation.

3. Purchases.

Freehold, Copyhold, or Leasehold Property.—One-half of the scale for sale by private treaty, calculated upon the amount of the purchase-money, but including inspection, advising as to value, and negotiating or bidding. If no purchase is effected, the usual scale for valuation should be charged: one guinea per cent. on first £1,000; half a guinea on next £9,000; and a quarter of a guinea per cent. beyond on the value of the property. Minimum fee, £5 5s.

4. Lettings.

Business Premises, Unfurnished Houses, Flats, &c., or on Disposing of all Leases (other than Ground Leases) by assignment or otherwise.—

If the annual value be £200 or less 5 per cent. on one year's rent, where the term is for one year or less, and $\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. on one year's rent where the term is for more than one year. If the annual value be over £200 the above scale shall apply to the first £200 and on the excess rental over that amount, where the term is for three years or less, 5 per cent. on one year's rent; where the term is for more than three years, $\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. on one year's rent; in the case of repairing leases the commission is 10 per cent. on one year's rent. Upon the premium or consideration (in all cases), 5 per cent. up to £1,000, and $\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. on the residue; and the commission on any sum obtained for fixtures, furniture, or effects of any kind, of 5 per cent. up to £500, and $\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. on the residue. In the case of a progressive rent the commission is based on the average rent receivable. When a property, which an agent has been instructed to let or sell, is let by him, and the tenant afterwards purchases, the commission for selling, less the commission already paid on the letting, will then become payable.

For negotiating the Renting of Unfurnished Houses or Flats, excluding Survey or Valuation.

—Half the commission payable for a letting.

On Letting Furnished Houses or Flats in Town or Country, or Shootings, including Collection of Rent.—5 per cent. on the first year's rental, and $\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. for the remainder of the term.

For negotiating the Renting of Unfurnished Houses or Flats, excluding Survey or Valuation.

—Half the commission payable for a letting.

For Making or Checking Inventories of Furniture and Effects.—A minimum fee of two guineas per day, exclusive of expenses.

On Letting Land on Building Lease.—One year's ground rent on first £50; three quarters ditto on next £50; half ditto on next £500; quarter ditto on residue.

5. Collections or Receiverships.

10 per cent. upon gross rental of weekly property; 5 per cent. upon gross rental of other property or tithes; $\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. upon the gross rental for the management and collection of rents on agricultural estates; $\frac{1}{4}$ to 5 per cent. on ground rents, according to the amount of the rents and the number of collections.

6. Laying Out or Development of Estates.

For Road Construction, 5 per cent. upon the outlay, exclusive of expenses.

7. Valuations.

1. Valuation of Freehold, Copyhold, or Leasehold Properties.—A guinea per cent. on the first £1,000; half a guinea per cent. on the next £9,000; and a quarter of a guinea per cent. beyond on the value of the property, subject to a minimum fee of five guineas.

2. Of Property taken under Compulsory Powers.—The charge is on Ryde's Scale. The fee is exclusive of five guineas per day for attendances. Plans and disbursements extra.

3. Valuing for Annual Rental.—(a) Agricultural Property.— $\frac{1}{2}$ guinea per cent. up to £500, 5 guineas per cent. on the next £500, and $\frac{1}{2}$ guinea per cent. beyond. (b) Urban and Residential Property.—5 guineas per cent. up to £100, and $\frac{1}{2}$ guinea per cent. beyond. Minimum fee 3 guineas.

4. Valuation of Furniture, Pictures, and Effects.—5 per cent. up to £500, and 2½ per cent. on the residue.

5. Valuation of Plant, Machinery, and Trade Stocks.—5 per cent. on first £500, and 2½ per cent. on the residue.

6. Valuation of Live and Dead Farming Stock.—5 guineas per cent. on first £500, and 2½ guineas per cent. on the residue.

7. Valuation of Hotel and Public House Furniture, Fittings, and Stock.—5 guineas per cent. up to £1,000, and £3 3s. per cent. on the residue.

8. Valuation for Probate and Estate Duty Purposes.—(a) Freehold, Copyhold, and Leasehold Property.—One guinea per cent. on the first £5,000, half a guinea per cent. on the next £5,000, and one quarter-guinea per cent. on the remainder. Minimum fee, £5 5s. on each property.

(b) Of Furniture and Effects.—5 guineas per cent. on the first £500, and 2½ guineas per cent. on the next £500, and 1½ guineas per cent. of the remainder of the amount of valuation, to include inventory. Minimum fee, £5 5s.

9. Valuations under the Finance (1909-10) Act,

1910. For Survey, Completion of Government Returns, Valuation, and Report.

Country Residential Properties, Agricultural Land, and Undeveloped Land.—One half-guinea per cent. up to a "total value" of £50,000, and one quarter-guinea per cent. on the balance above that amount.

Urban Properties.—One quarter-guinea per cent. on a "total value" of £50,000, and one-eighth guinea per cent. on the balance above that amount. Minimum fee, £3 3s.

10. Preparing Specification of Dilapidations and settling the amount if required.—5 guineas per cent. on the amount. Minimum fee, £5 5s.

11. Valuation or Sale of Timber.—5 guineas per cent. on amount realised. When valuing only, 5 guineas per cent. on first £100, and 2½ guineas per cent. on the residue.

12. Valuation of Tenant-Right.—5 guineas per cent. on the first £100, and 2½ guineas per cent. on the next £500, and 1½ guineas per cent. on the residue.

Where one valuer acts between both parties the minimum charge shall be scale and a half, divisible between both parties.

Standard Gold contains twenty-two twenty-fourths (carats) of fine gold and two twenty-fourths of alloy; fineness, 916 66, or 22 carats; 240 troy ounces of standard gold are coined into 934 sovereigns and one half-sovereign; one troy ounce is, therefore, worth £3 17s 10½d., and one ounce of pure gold, on the same basis, £4 4s. 11½d. During 1921, the market price of gold has been above these figures.

Standard Silver formerly consisted of thirty-seven-fortieths of fine silver and three-fortieths of alloy; fineness, 925. Silver for coinage, by an Amending Act (10 Geo. V. ch. 3), consists of one-half silver, one-half alloy; or in millesimal fineness, 500; 12 troy ounces of silver are coined into 66 shillings. [Another Standard, called the "New Sterling" or Britannia, of the fineness 12 oz. 10 dwt. (958 33), is practically obsolete. It is occasionally used, however, for high-class plate.]

On account of the high price of precious metals, the melting of British gold and silver coin is prohibited, as well as their export. The Average Yearly Price of Silver per standard Troy Ounce in the London Market during the last ten years was as follows:—1911, 24½d.; 1912, 26½d.; 1913, 27½d.; 1914, 25½d.; 1915, 23½d.; 1916, 31½d.; 1917, 40½d.; 1918, 47½d.; 1919, 57½d.; 1920, 61½d. On Oct. 27, 1921, the price of silver was 40d. per oz.

In the United States the price of silver is quoted in cents per troy ounce fine. In order to convert an English quotation into cents per ounce fine, first express the pence as a whole number and decimal fraction and then multiply by 1 292; to express a United States price on the English system, multiply the cents by 0 4566.

†Bronze is an alloy of copper 95 parts, tin 4 parts, and zinc 1 part.

† It may be noted that the legal weight of a penny is one-third, of the halfpenny one-fifth, and of the farthing one-tenth of an ounce avoirdupois. Further, the halfpenny is one inch in diameter.

The "Remedy" is the amount of variation from standard permitted in fineness and in weight of coins when first issued from the Mint.

Tokens.—No person is allowed to coin any token to pass for, or as representing, bronze or other money, under a penalty of £50.

Light Gold.—Any person to whom it is tendered may break, cut, or deface any gold coin below the least current weight; but under the provisions of the Coinage Act, 1891, and an Order in Council of 16 March, 1892, light gold coin which has not been illegally dealt with is received by the Bank of England on behalf of the Mint at its full nominal value.

Bank of England Notes are issued for sums of £5, £10, £20, £50; also for £100, £200, £500, and £1,000.

Treasury Notes of the value of £1 and 10s. are issued, and are legal tender to any amount.

Bank Post Bills can be obtained at the Bank of England for amounts of £10 and over at seven days' sight. They are issued for the full sum named thereon, without allowance for discount. No charge is made for bills so drawn; they may be obtained at the Chief Office of the Bank of England in London, or at any of the branches.

Legal Tender of Money.—The tender of Bank of England Notes is legal in England and Wales for every purpose, and by anyone (except by the Bank of England). No one can be compelled to give change. Gold, if above the least current weight, and Treasury notes are legal tender to any amount. Silver is not a legal tender for sums over two pounds, nor bronze, including farthings, for sums over one shilling.

British Coinage Statistics.—During 1920 the number of coins struck at the Royal Mint was 262,072,104, of which 258,361,954 were Imperial and 3,710,150 Colonial.

JERSEY.—Special pence, halfpence, and farthings.

MALTA.—One-third of a farthing.

BRITISH WEST AFRICA.—Silver and also "alloy metal," 2s., 1s., 6d., and 3d., one penny, one halfpenny, and one-tenth penny (nickel-bronze).

In many cases silver coins are reduced in fineness, in others coins in low value metals are substituted, as a consequence of the War.

* The par value and rate of exchange of Foreign Monies and Sterling at certain dates in 1921 are shown on p. 487.

Mint Marks.—The designs adopted for gold coins are identically the same in the Mints of London, Sydney, Melbourne, and Perth, with minute "Mint Marks" immediately above the date on the reverse side—the letter S (Sydney), M (Melbourne), P (Perth), C (Ottawa, Canada), and I (Bombay, India); otherwise, all Imperial gold coins are of identical design.

The Weights and Measures Act of 1876, superseding all previous laws, enacts the legal measures for the United Kingdom, basing them upon the Standard Yard and the Standard Pound, in the custody of the Standards Department of the Board of Trade.

The YARD and the POUND are the only two independent standards for weights and measures. The GALLON, the capacity standard, wet or dry, is based upon the Pound. The Act of 1876 defines the Gallon as the volume of ten standard pounds of distilled water weighed in air against brass weights, both water and air at the temperature of 62° Fahrenheit, with the barometer at 30 inches.

Apothecaries' Weight.

Measures of Weight.

20 grains = 1 scruple (91) (= 1.296 Grammes).
3 scruples = 1 drachm (31) (= 3.888 Grammes).
8 drachms = 1 ounce (= 31.1035 Grammes)

Measures of Capacity

60 minims (min.) = 1 fluid drachm (= 3.552 Millilitres).
8 fluid drachms = 1 fluid ounce (= 28.4133 Centilitres).
20 fluid ounces = 1 pint (= 0.568 Litre).
8 pints = 1 GALLON (= 4.5459631 Litres).

The Apothecaries' grain is the Avoirdupois grain, and the Apothecaries' ounce is the Troy ounce, of 480 grains. The Apothecaries' drachm is not the same as the Avoirdupois dram, and is spelt differently. A fluid ounce of distilled water at a temperature of 62° Fahrenheit is equal in weight to the Avoirdupois ounce (437.5 grains). A fluid drachm (54.6875 grains) is equal in weight to two Avoirdupois drams.

Approximate Equivalents.

1 sovereign = 8 drams; 1 half-crown = 3½ drams; 1 florin = 3 drams; 1 shilling = 1½ drams; 1 3d. piece = ¾ dram; 1 "table-spoon" = ¾ fluid oz.; 1 "dessert-spoon" = ½ fluid oz.; 1 "tea-spoon" = ½ fluid oz.

Avoirdupois Weight.

7000 grains (gr.) = 1 pound (lb.).
16 drams (dr.) = 1 ounce (oz.) (= 28.350 Grammes).
16 ounces = 1 POUND (= 0.4539943 Kilogram).
14 pounds = 1 stone* (= 6.350 Kilograms).
25 pounds = 1 quarter (of a cwt.) (= 12.70 Kilograms).
100 pounds = 1 cental (= 45.35923 Kilograms).
4 quarters (25 lb.) = 1 hundredweight (cwt.) (= 50.802 Kilograms).
20 hundredweight (2,240 lb.) = 1 ton (= 1.016 Tonnes or 1.016 Kilograms).

Troy Weight.

24 grains = 1 pennyweight (dwt.) (= 1.555 Grammes).
20 dwt. = 1 ounce (= 31.1035 Grammes).

For gold and silver the ounce, divided decimally, and not into grains, is the sole unit of weight. The Troy ounce is the same as the Apothecaries' ounce, of 480 Avoirdupois grains (31.1035 Grammes) in weight. There is no Troy POUND.

Jewellers' Weight.

The metric carat of 200 milligrammes is the legal standard of weight for precious stones and pearls.

* The Smithfield stone (for dead meat) is 1 lb. only Measures of Capacity.

4 gills = 1 pint (= 0.568 Litre).
2 pints = 1 quart (= 1.136 Litres).
4 quarts = 1 GALLON (= 4.5459631 Litres).
2 gallons = 1 peck (= 9.0919 Litres).
8 gallons = 1 bushel (= 3.637 Dekalitres).
8 bushels = 1 quarter (= 2.909 Hectolitres).
A chaldron is 36 bushels = 4½ quarters.

Measures of Length.

12 inches (in.) = 1 foot (ft.) (= 0.30480 Metre).
3 feet = 1 yard (yd.) (= 0.914399 Metre).
6 feet = 1 fathom (= 1.8288 Metres).
5½ yards = 1 pole (= 5.0493 Metres).
22 yards = 1 chain (= 20.1168 Metres).
220 yards = 1 furlong (= 201.168 Metres).
8 furlongs = 1 mile (= 1.6093 Kilometres).
3 miles = 1 league (seldom used).
100 links = 1 chain (22 yards)
10 chains = 1 furlong.
8 furlongs = 1 mile.

A Pole of 5½ yards is a quarter of a chain.

A Cricket Pitch is 22 yards (one chain) between the stumps

A Lawn Tennis Court is 78 × 36 feet (double) and 78 × 27 feet (single)

A Croquet Lawn is 105 × 84 feet (full size) or a smaller multiple of 5 × 4 feet.

Birmingham Gauge.

The Weights and Measures Act of 1878 made standards on and after Nov. 1, 1914, certain new divisions of an inch. The equivalent of an inch is 15.0 B.G. The numbers proceed by units down to 1/10 B.G., which = 0.3964 inch, and from 1 B.G. (3533 inch) by units to 52 B.G. (0.0095 inch).

Square or Surface Measure.

144 sq. inches = 1 sq. foot (= 0.3023 Sq. Decimetres).
9 sq. feet = 1 sq. yard (= 0.836126 Sq. Metre).
30¼ sq. yards = 1 perch, or rod, or pole (= 25.293 Sq. Metres).
40 perches = 1 rood (= 10.117 Acres).
4 roods (4840 sq. yards) = 1 acre (= 0.40468 Hectare).
10 square chains = 1 acre.
640 acres = 1 square mile (= 2.58995 Sq. Kilometres)

Note.—The Anglo-Saxon acre's length is the furlong, and the acre's breadth the chain Cubic Measure.

1.728 cubic inches = 1 cubic foot (= 0.028317 Cubic metres).
27 cubic feet = 1 cubic yard (= 0.764553 Cubic metre).

Angular or Circular Measure.

60 seconds (") = 1 minute (').
60 minutes = 1 degree (°).
30 degrees = 1 sign.
90 degrees = 1 right angle or quadrant.
18 signs (4 quadrants) = 1 circumference.
Diameter of circle × 3.1416 = circumference.
Diameter squared × .7854 = area of circle.
Diameter squared × 3.1416 = surface of sphere.
Diameter cubed × .5236 = solidity of sphere.
One degree of circumference × 57.3 = radius.
Diameter of cylinder × 3.1416; product by length or height, gives the surface.
Diameter squared × .7854; product by length or height, gives solid content.

Note.—A circle of 7 yards diameter has, in practice, a circumference of 22 yards = 1 chain.

Miscellaneous Weights and Measures.

Ballast (Pig) = 36 lb.
Beef (Barrel) = 220 lb.
Biscuits (Bag) = 200 lb.
Blacklead (Cask) = 11½ cwt.
Butter (Barrel) = 4 firkins = 224 lb.
Camphor (Box) = 1 cwt.
Cloves (Matt) = 80 lb.
(Chest) = 200 lb.
Coal (Sack) = 224 lb.
(Bushel) = 80 lb.
(Chaldron) = 85 bushels.
(Ton) = 20 sacks.
Cocoa (Bag) = 112 lb.
(Cask) = 1 cwt. 28 lb.
Coffee (Bag) = 140 to 168 lb.
(Bale of Mocha) = 224 to 280 lb.
(Barrel) = 112 to 168 lb.
(Tierce) = 5 to 7 cwt.
Cotton (U.S. Bale) = 400 to 500 lb.
(Egyptian Bale) = 700 to 740 m.
(Indian Bale) = 500 to 600 lb.
Currants (Caroteel) = 5 to 9 cwt.
Flour (Peck) = 14 lb.
(Sack) = 280 lb.
(U.S. Barrel) = 196 lb.
Glass (Beam) = 24 stone of 5 lb. = 120 lb.
Gunpowder (Barrel) = 100 lb.
Hides (Last) = 12 dozen.
Honey (Gallon) = 12 lb.
Hops (Bag) = 280 lb.
(Pocket) = 1½ to 2 cwt.
Lead (Fodder) :-
London and Hull = 19½ cwt.
Derby and Newcastle = 22½ cwt.
Meat (Stone) = 8 lb.
Nuts (Barcelona, Bag) = 126 lb.
Oats (Barrel) = 14 stone.
Pepper (Bag of black) = 326 lb.
(Bag of white) = 268 lb.
Pork (Barrel) = 224 lb.
Potatoes (Sack) = 128 lb.
Raisins (Barrel) = 12 lb.
Rice (Bag) = 268 lb.
Sago (Bag) = 112 lb.
Saltpetre (Bag) = 268 lb.
Soft Soap (Barrel or Pack) = 256 lb.
(Firkin) = 64 lb.
Steel (Faggot) = 120 lb.
Sugar (Bag) = 112-196 lb.
(Hogshead) = 23 to 26 cwt.
(Tierce) = 7 to 9 cwt.
Tar (Barrel) = 26½ gallons.
Tob (Chest) = 84 lb.
Tobacco (Hogshead) = 12 to 18 cwt.
Turpentine (Barrel) = 224 to 280 lb.
Wood (Cord) = 128 cubic feet.
Wool (Sack) = 364 lb.

Wheat, Corn, and Flour.

Wheat and other cereals are commonly sold by weight, the bushel being thus reckoned :-

Wheat, English, 60 lb.	Foreign, 62 lb.
Barley, English, 56 lb.	French, 52½ lb.
Mediterranean, 50 lb.

Oats, English, 39 lb.	Foreign, 38 and 40 lb.
Rye and Malze, 60 lb.	Buckwheat, 52 lb.

Under the Corn Sales Act of 1892 the Corn Returns Act of 1888 is amended, and provision is made for the sale of cereals by weight in terms of the hundredweight of 112 imperial standard pounds.

220 lb. wheat produces 70 lb. flour.
220 lb. flour produces 130 lb. bread.

A quarter loaf = 4 lb.

A last of grain = 80 bushels.

NOTE.—A Quarter is a heaped measure of 8 bushels. A bushel of English wheat is reckoned as 60 lb. weight, and a Quarter as 480 lb.

Hay and Straw.

Truss of Straw, 36 lb. Truss of Old Hay, 56 lb.

Truss of New Hay (9 September 1st), 60 lb.

Load of hay or straw = 36 trusses

Ton of hay = 36 trusses.

An acre of grass should yield 1 to 2 tons of hay.

Sizes of Barrels and Bottles.

	Gals.
Firkin or Quarter Barrel.....	9 = 9 × 1
Kilderkin, Rundlet, or ½ Barrel	18 = 9 × 2
Barrel.....	36 = 9 × 4
Hogshead (1½ barrels).....	54 = 9 × 6
Punchoon (2 barrels).....	72 = 9 × 8
Butt of Ale (3 barrels).....	108 = 9 × 12
An Anter = 10 gallons; a Tierce = 42 gallons; a Pipe of Port or Madeira = 112 gals.; Teneriffe = 100 gals.; Marsala = 93 gals.; Madeira and Cape = 92 gals.; Sherry and Tent = 108 gals.;
Butt of Lisbon and Bucellias = 117 gals.; Aum Hook and Rhenish = 30 gals.; Hogshead of Brandy, 60 gals.; Claret, 46; Port, 57; Sherry, 54;
Madiera, 46 gallons; Punchoon of Brandy or Rum = 120 gals.

Bottles.—The customary glass bottle of wine or spirits should contain one-sixth of a gallon = 26½ fluid ounces.

In the drug trade two large bottles are used :-

Corbyn..... = 40 fluid oz. (quart).

Winchester quart = 80 „ (½ gallon).

Water.

The British Ton is the weight of a cubic British Metre of pure water at the temperature of melting ice, very nearly. At present, the following relations hold good :-

Cubic inch.....	= 252.458 grains.
Gallon (277.274 cub. in.) = 10 lb. (distilled).
Cubic foot.....	= 62.321 lb.
35.943 cubic ft. (224 gals.) = 1 ton.

Water for Ships: Tun, 220 gals., Butt 120, Punchoon 72, Barrel 36, Kilderkin 18 gals.

Cisterns: A cistern 4 feet by 2½ and 3 deep will hold brimful 126.963 gallons, weighing 16 cwt. 2 qrs. 21.6 lb. in addition to its own weight.

Railway Gauges.

In Great Britain = 4 ft. 8½ in.

„ Ireland = 5 ft. 3 in.

„ U.S.A. = 4 ft. 8½ in.

The 4 ft. 8½ in. gauge is also used in Canada, France, Germany, Netherlands, Belgium, Denmark, Austria, Hungary, Italy, Switzerland, Sweden and European Turkey.

„ Australia :-

N.S.W. = 3 ft. 6 in. and 4 ft. 8½ in.

Victoria and South Australia = 5 ft. 3 in.

Queensland and Western Australia = 3 ft. 6 in.

„ New Zealand = 3 ft. 6 in.

„ India = 2 ft. 6 in.; 3 ft. 3½ in. and 5 ft. 6 in.

„ South Africa = 3 ft. 6 in.

„ Egypt = 4 ft. 8½ and 3 ft. 6 in.

„ Ceylon = 5 ft. 6 in.

„ Japan = 3 ft. 6 in.

„ Russia = 5 ft. 6 in.

„ Spain and Portugal = 5 ft. 6 in.

„ Asia Minor = 4 ft. 8½ in. and 3 ft. 5½ in.

A single track of 4 ft. 8½ in gauge requires 12 ft. of roadway; a double track requires 23 ft. of roadway.

Electrical Measures.

It is customary to express electrical measurements in terms of the centimetre, the gramme, and the second (C.G.S. units), and the value of the units has been fixed by international agreement. The principal units are as follow:—

As a unit of resistance, the international Ohm, which is based upon the ohm equal to 10^9 units of resistance of the C.G.S. system of electro-magnetic units, and is represented by the resistance offered to an unvarying electric current by a column of mercury at the temperature of melting ice, 14.4521 grammes in mass, of a constant cross-sectional area, and of a length of 106.3 centimetres.

As a unit of current, the international Ampere, which is one-tenth of the unit of current of the C.G.S. system of electro-magnetic units and which is represented sufficiently well for practical use by the unvarying current which, when passed through a solution of nitrate of silver in water, in accordance with a certain specification, deposits silver at the rate of 0.001118 of a gramme per second.

As a unit of electro-motive force, the international Volt, which is the E.M.F. that, steadily applied to a conductor whose resistance is one international ohm, will produce a current of one international ampere, and which is represented sufficiently well for practical use by 1.10103 of the E.M.F. between the poles or electrodes of the voltaic cell known as Clark's cell at a temperature of 15°C , and prepared in the manner described in a certain specification.

As a unit of quantity, the international Coulomb, which is the quantity of electricity transferred by a current of one international ampere in one second.

As a unit of capacity, the international Farad, which is the capacity of a conductor charged to a potential of one international volt by one international coulomb of electricity. The unit generally used in practice is one-millionth part of this, or the microfarad.

As the unit of work, the Joule, which is 10^7 units of work in the C.G.S. system, and which is represented sufficiently well for practical use by the energy expended in one second by an international ampere in an international ohm. In practice the watt-hour is usually employed. It represents the work done by such a current in an hour, and equals $3,600$ joules.

As the unit of power, the Watt, which is 10^7 units of power in the C.G.S. system, and which is represented sufficiently well for practical use by the work done at the rate of one joule per second. 746 watts = 1 horse-power, and the value of a Board of Trade unit (B.O.T.U.) is $1,000$ watt-hours, or $3,600,000$ joules, or $1\frac{1}{3}$ horse-power hours.

As the unit of induction, the Henry, which is the induction in the circuit when the E.M.F. induced in this circuit is one international volt, while the inducing current varies at the rate of one international ampere per second.

Builders' Measurements.

Stock or kiln bricks ... $8\frac{1}{4}$ inches \times $4\frac{1}{2}$ \times $3\frac{1}{4}$
 Welsh fire-bricks ... 9 " \times $4\frac{1}{2}$ \times $3\frac{1}{4}$
 Paving bricks ... 9 " \times $4\frac{1}{2}$ \times $1\frac{1}{4}$
 Square tiles ... $9\frac{1}{4}$ " \times $9\frac{1}{4}$ \times 1
 Dutch water bricks ... $9\frac{1}{4}$ " \times 3 \times $1\frac{1}{4}$
 A Rod of Brickwork $16\frac{1}{2}$ feet \times $16\frac{1}{2}$ feet \times $1\frac{1}{2}$ brick thick = 306 cubic feet or $11\frac{1}{2}$ cubic yards, and contains about $4,500$ bricks with about 75 cubic feet of mortar. The rod being 5 British metres, a rod of brickwork is 25 square metres $1\frac{1}{2}$ bricks thick = very nearly 10 cubic metres.

Ordinary bricks weigh about $7\frac{1}{2}$ lb. each; a load of 500 weighs about 1 ton 11 cwt. 1 qr.

A Piece of Wall Paper is 12 yd. long \times 21 in. wide (English), and 9 yd. \times 18 in. (French).

Timber and Wood.

100 superficial feet = 1 square of flooring.

50 cubic feet of planks = 1 load.

42 do. timber = 1 shipping ton.

108 do. do. = 1 stack.

128 do. do. = 1 cord.

A standard hundred of deals contains 120 pieces. The Petrograd standard consists of 165 cubic feet, or 120 pieces $1\frac{1}{2}$ in. \times 11 in. \times 12 ft., or 120 pieces 3 in. \times 11 in. \times 6 ft.

A Batten is not more than 7 inches wide; a Deal not more than 9 inches; Planks are 2 to 4 inches thick, and 10 inches and up in width.

To find the weight of a cubic foot, multiply 62.35 lb. by the specific gravity. To find the number of cubic feet in one ton, divide $35,943$ by the specific gravity.

Weight of Cubic Foot and Cubic Yard.

A cubic foot of fresh water = $6\frac{3}{4}$ lb.; salt water $6\frac{3}{4}$ lb. Timber—ash 49 lb.; beech 43 lb.; birch 49 lb.; cork 15 lb.; elm 36 lb.; pine 41 lb.; oak 59 lb. A cubic foot of clay weighs 125 lb.; of loose earth 95 lb.

A cubic yard of anthracite coal, solid, weighs 2,160 lb.; bituminous 2,025 lb.; canal 1,400 lb. A cubic yard of compressed hay = 225 lb.; of hay in stack, 126 lb.; of compressed straw, 125 lb.; of straw in stack, 90 lb.; of grain, 20 bushels.

Fish.

In Scotland, and at certain places in England and Wales at which the Cran Measures Act, 1908, has been put into operation, fresh herrings must be sold by the Cran, containing $37\frac{1}{2}$ imperial gallons, or Quarter Cran of $9\frac{3}{4}$ imperial gallons. In the Isle of Man and in Ireland herrings are sold by the Maze, which contains 5 long hundreds of 126 each. On the East Coast of England, at places where the above-mentioned Act is not in force, they are sold by the Last, which contains 13,200 fish. They are counted by the Warp, which is 4 fish. 33 Warps = 1 Long Hundred, 126; 10 Hundred = 1 Thousand, 1,260; 10 Thousand = 1 Last, 13,200. Cured herrings are sold in barrels, the capacity of which, in Scotland, must always be $6\frac{3}{4}$ imperial gallons, or in half-barrels of $3\frac{3}{4}$ gallons. Herring barrels or half-barrels must be of corresponding capacity in England and Wales if they are presented for the Government Brand at any place at which the Herring Fishery (Branding) Act, 1913, is in force.

A Quintal of fish (Newfoundland, &c.) is 100 lb.; a barrel of anchovies = 30 lb.; a "box of fish" is about 90 lb.

Geographical Measures.

The North and South Poles are two points at the opposite extremities of that diameter of the earth round which it revolves. The Equator is a great circle, equally distant from the North and South Poles. For geographical purposes, the surface of the earth is divided by circles, called the circles of Latitude and Longitude. The circles of Latitude are small circles parallel to the Equator. The circles of Longitude are great circles perpendicular to the Equator, and passing through the North and South Poles. These circles are divided into Degrees, Minutes, and Seconds. Degrees of Latitude are numbered from the Equator to the North and South Poles. Degrees of Longitude are numbered from the primary circle of Longitude, or Meridian, which passes through the astronomical observatory of Greenwich (England).

A Geographical Mile is the length of one minute of Latitude. If the earth was a sphere, every minute of Latitude would be of the same length; but, as it is a spheroid, the length of a minute increases from 6,066 feet at the Equator to 6,168 feet at the Poles. The mean length of the geographical mile is 6,096 feet. The Nautical Mile is (strictly speaking) the length of a minute of the meridian, and is thus identical with the geographical mile. In practice, however, it is taken as the Admiralty Knot of 6,080 feet, divided into 20 cables, which are assumed to be 120 fathoms, or 600 feet.

The Polar diameter of the Earth is 7,926 English miles. The mean equatorial diameter is 7,926 miles. The circumference at the Equator is 24,902 miles.

NOTE.—The normal temperature of the human body is $98\cdot6^{\circ}$ F., or 36° C., or $28\cdot8^{\circ}$ R. Freezing 32° F. = 0° C. = 0° R.; Boiling point = 212° F. = 100° C. = 80° R. Let F = Number of degrees Fahrenheit, C = Number of degrees Centigrade, and R = Number of degrees Réaumur, then:—

$$F = C + R + 30 \quad F = \frac{9C}{5} + 32 \quad R = \frac{4(F - 32)}{9}$$

Nautical Measures.

6 feet = 1 fathom.

100 fathoms = 1 cable length.

10 cables = 1 nautical mile.

60 nautical miles = 1 degree.

The assumed length of the cable is 600 feet (=184·87 metres), but it is strictly 606·97 feet (=185 metres). The conventional Nautical Mile is 6,080 feet, assumed at 6,080 feet (strictly 6,069·7 feet), but the Nautical Mile is strictly the length of a minute of the meridian and differs according to latitude.

Ship Measurement.

The Ton-measurement of cargo was originally the space occupied by 4 hogsheads (= a Tun) of wine = 50 cubic feet. It is now 40 cubic feet, which is approximately the bulk of 4 quarters, or a short ton, of wheat.

The Ton-register, the unit of capacity of a ship, was originally the space occupied by a Last of 10 Quarters of wheat = 100 cubic feet. This cubic space is the Ton-register used by all maritime nations, 100 English cubic feet.

Gross tonnage is the sum in cubic feet of all the various enclosed spaces of a vessel, divided by 100.

Net tonnage is the gross tonnage less certain deductions on account of crew spaces, engine room, water ballast, and other spaces not used for passengers or cargo.

Dead-weight tonnage, or carrying capacity, is the number of tons (of 2,240 lb.) of cargo that a vessel is capable of carrying when charged to the load water line (q.v.).

Displacement tonnage is the number of tons of sea water displaced by a vessel when charged to the load water line (q.v.).

Load water-line is the line that would be made round the shell of a vessel when loaded as deep as the minimum freeboard regulations permit.

Draught is the distance in feet from the lowest part of the bottom of a vessel to the actual water line at which the vessel is floating. Thus the load-water-line marks the greatest, or loaded, draught of a vessel. A vessel without any cargo in her hold or passengers or their luggage aboard is said to be "light ship," or "light," or "in ballast."

Free Board is the distance from the main or upper deck to the load-water-line of a vessel. As a general rule the minimum free board provides an amount of reserve buoyancy that will keep a vessel afloat with two compartments holed.

Bells and Watches on Board Ship.

Bells.—Time is kept by means of a bell, which is struck every half hour, except at certain times towards the end of a watch, when the bell is struck 10 or 15 minutes before the expiration of the regular half hour, partly as a signal to the Commanding Officer that the watch is about to be changed, and partly as a signal to the Officer of the next watch to prepare for duty.

Watches.—For purposes of discipline, and to divide the work fairly, the crew is mustered in two divisions: the Starboard (right side, looking forward) and the Port (left). The day commences at noon, and is thus divided:—

Afternoon Watch	noon to 4 p.m.
First Dog	"	4 p.m. to 6 p.m.
Second Dog	"	6 p.m. to 8 p.m.
First	"	8 p.m. to midnight.
Middle	"	midnight to 4 a.m.
Morning	"	4 a.m. to 8 a.m.
Forenoon	"	8 a.m. to noon.

This makes seven Watches, enabling the crew to keep them alternately, as the Watch which is on duty in the forenoon one day has the afternoon next day, and the men who have only four hours' rest one night have eight hours the next. This is the reason for having Day Watches, which are made by dividing the hours between 4 p.m. and 8 p.m. into two Watches.

For TIME AT SEA see p. 95.

Speed of Ships.

The Knot is a measure of speed of ships; the expression "15 knots" indicates that the vessel in question is capable of steaming or sailing 15 nautical miles in one hour. The Nautical Mile is 6,080 feet (the Statute Mile being 5,280 feet and the Geographical Mile 6,076·8 feet). The following table shows the equivalents of 1 to 45 knots in land (statute) miles per hour:—

Knots	Miles	Knots	Miles	Knots	Miles
1	1·1515	15	17·2737	29	33·3939
2	2·3030	16	18·4248	30	34·5454

Measures of Energy.

In Physics the unit of force is the dyn, the amount that, acting for one second on one gramme mass, gives it a velocity of one centimetre per second. The British unit is the poundal (the force that gives one pound a velocity of one foot per second. One poundal = 13,825·5 dynes.

Horse power is energy measured at 550 foot-pounds per second; an alternative unit is the kilowatt (100 kilogram-meters per second) = 737·59 foot-pounds per second.

Thermal Unit.—The British thermal unit is the Therm, the amount of heat required to raise one pound of water one degree Fahrenheit. In gas heating the therm bears the relation of 17·6 to 44, i.e. the charge of 3s. 8d. per 1,000 cubic feet is rendered as 1s. 5·6d. per therm.

Yarn Measures.

Cotton and Spun Silk Count.—

Thread = 1½ yards.

Lea or Skein, skn. = 120 yards.

Hank, Ak. = 7 Skeins, or Leas = 840 yards.

Spindle, spdl. = 18 Hanks.

Counts = the number of Hanks in 1 lb.

Bundle Hanks, either of 5 lb. or 10 lb.

Reels of cotton vary from 30 to 1,760 yards; they must be marked correctly.

Bundles of Cotton are chiefly made up for export.

Worsted Count.—Wrap, 80 yards; Hank = 500 yards = 7 Wraps; Counts or Numbers are the number of hanks in 1 lb.

Linen Count.—The Hank or Lea is 300 yards, and the number of these in 1 lb. is the count of the yarn. A Spindle is 48 hanks; a Bundle is 200 hanks.

Wool of England Count.—The Hank is 300 yards, and the number of hanks in 1 lb. is the count of the yarn.

NOTE.—Books are usually bound up in sheets of 16 or 32 pages. Octavo books are generally printed 64 pages at a time (32 pages on each side of a sheet of quad); a crown octavo book of 320 pages will therefore require 5 sheets of quad crown, and a ream will provide 100 books, the odd 16 sheets being reckoned as waste. Newspapers (and books circulating in large numbers) are printed on rotary presses, for which the paper is supplied on reels (and not in cut reams) "Whitaker" is printed on a rotary press, 192 pages at a time, the paper being served to the press from a reel, and 6 sheets of 32 pages are delivered, printed and folded, at the opposite end of the press.

Sizes of Type.

All Founders cast their type to one uniform height ("type high"), which is 1½ inch, though the letters may vary considerably in their breadth.

The type chiefly used in "Whitaker" is named Nonpareil (6 point). The column contains 75 lines, and is 12 Pica ems wide; on an average every column contains about 3,000 letters, or 600 words.

The Point System.—The basic unit in American (and many British) type foundries is the "point" of 0.013837 inch (72 points to the inch), and the names of the various types in the point system are added in parentheses.

Brilliant (3½ point). A column the size of this in the Almanack if set in Brilliant would contain 124 lines, and about 7,500 letters.

Printing is the art of producing impressions from characters or figures.

Diamond (4½ point) is the next size; the column would contain 107 lines, and about 6,000 letters.

METRIC WEIGHTS AND MEASURES.

Tables for the conversion of British and Metric Weights and Measures will be found on page 454, headed: "Double Conversion Tables for Weights and Measures."

In addition to the Imperial standard weights and measures, the use of the French or Metric system of weights and measures was made permissive in the United Kingdom in 1867.

In the Metric system, the standard of length is the Metre, the standard of weight is the Kilogram, and the standard of capacity is the Litre. Accurate copies of the Metre, Kilogram, and Litre are kept in the custody of the Standards Office of the Board of Trade.

For the sake of comparison, the equivalent value of the nearest British measure is given

1.—MEASURES OF LENGTH.

10 millimetres = 1 centimetre	= 0.39370113 inch.
(mm)	(cm)
10 centimetres = 1 decimetre	= 3.9370113 inches.
(dm)
10 decimetres = 1 METRE (m)	= 1.0936143 yards.
10 metres ... = 1 dekametre	= 10.936143 yards.
(dam)
10 dekametres = 1 hectometre	= 109.36143 yards.
(hm)
10 hectometres = 1 kilometre	= 0.62137 mile.
(km)

A kilometre is approximately nine eighths of a mile, so that 8 kilometres may be regarded by pedestrians as 5 miles.

2.—MEASURES OF WEIGHT.

10 milligrams = 1 centigram	= 0.15432 grains.
(mg)	(cg)
10 centigrams = 1 decigram	= 1.5432 "
(dg)
10 decigrams = 1 gramme	= 15.4323 "
(gm.)
10 grammes = 1 dekagram	= 5.6438 drams.
(dag)
10 dekagrams = 1 hectogram	= 3.5274 oz.

10 kilograms = 1 myriagram	= 22.046223 lb.
10 myriagrams = 1 quintal (q.)	= 1.9584 cwt.
10 quintals ... = 1 tonne (t.)	= 0.9842 ton.

3.—MEASURES OF CAPACITY.

10 millilitres = 1 centilitre	= 0.0704 gill.
(ml.)	(cl.)
10 centilitres = 1 decilitre (dl.)	= 0.17598 pint.
10 decilitres = 1 LITRE (lit.)	= 1.7598 pints.
10 litres = 1 dekalitre	= 2.1997 gals.
(dal.)
10 dekalitres = 1 hectolitre	= 2.7497 bushels.
(hl.)

4.—MEASURES OF LAND.

100 sq. metres = 1 are (a.)	= 0.0088 rood.
100 ares = 1 hectare (ha.)	= 2.4711 acres.
100 hectares = 1 sq. kilometre	= 0.3651 sq. mile.

NOTES.

1 hectolitre.....	= 2.75 bushels.
1 hectolitre per hectare	= 1.12 bushels per acre.
1 quintal	= 3.67 bushels.
1 quintal per hectare	= 1.49 bushels per acre.
1 franc a hectolitre	= 3.67 a bushel (par).
1 " a quintal	= { 4.35 a cental (par).
	{ 10.31 a quarter (par).
7 francs " (duty).....	= 101.64 a quarter (par).

THE UNITED STATES.

The weights and measures are those of the United Kingdom, with the following differences:—
Weight.—In the short ton of 2,000 lb., the Cental of 100 lb. takes the place of the Cwt. in the long ton. There are Two tons, therefore, the long ton of 2,240 lb., the short ton of 2,000 lb.

Capacity.—For grain, the old bushel of 2,150 43 cubic inches; its gallon = 268.8 cubic inches. This is commonly called the Winchester bushel, though really of the slightly different London standard.

For liquids, the old wine-gallon of 231 cubic inches, five-sixths of the Imperial gallon and = 23.1278 grains of water. It is divided into 8 pints = 7.2697 grains of water = 16.6 Imperial ounces. In medicine the pint is divided into 16 fluid ounces = 455.6 grains of water, and the ounce into 8 fluid drachms of 60 minims.

BRITISH DEPENDENCIES.

Channel Islands.

The weights and measures in use in the Channel Islands are those of the United Kingdom, the cental of 100 lb. being used as well as the cwt. of 112 lb. The Old Island Measures are as follows:—

	Jersey.	Guernsey.
Vergee (Normandy rood)	= 44 acre	4 acre.
Bushel	= 8.9 gallons	5.8 gallons.
Pound	= 7.561 grains	7.623 grains.
Cwt. (104 lb.)	= 112.3 lb.	(100 lb.) = 108.9 lb.

Malta.

Piede	= 11.766 inches.
Canna	= 2.283 yards.
Libbra	= 12 oncia = 4866 Troy gr.
Rotolo	= 1.745 lb.

British India.

Ungul	= .75 inch.
Guz, usually 33 inches; also the yard.
Koss	= 2,000 yards.
Bigha (Bengal)	= usually = 605 acre.
Cawny (Madras)	= " = 1.33 "
Tola (rupee weight)	= 180 grains.
Chittak	= 1 oz. av.
Seer, 16 chittak, or 80 tolas	= 2.204 lb.
Maund, 40 seers	= 28.267 lb.
" (Madras)	= 24.68 lb.
Seer (Liquid)	= 1.760 pints.
Candy	= 500 lb.
Visham = 3 lb.; Daugali	= 3 pints.
Parah	= 15 gallons.
Catty (Singapore)	= 1 1/2 lb.
Pikul	= 133 lb.

Egypt.

The Metric System of Weights and Measures and the foot and pound and their multiples, are legal in Egypt. The foot and pound are rarely used and the Metric System is little known except in the large towns.

The Weights and Measures in common use, with their English equivalents, are as follows:—

Length—
Dira Baladi (used for piece goods)	= 29.83 inches
Dira Mamari, or Plo (used by architects)	= 29.13 inches
Qasaba (used for agricultural land)	= 21.65 feet
Area—
1 Qirat	= 209.3 sq. yards
1 Feddan (= 24 qirats)	= 1.936 acres

Capacity—

1 Kéla	= '454 bushel
1 Ardeb (= 12 kélas)	= 5'444 bushels

Weight—

1 Rotl	= '99 lb.
1 Oke	= 2'75 lb.
1 Qantar (= 100 rotls)	= 99'05 lb.
A Qantar of unginned cotton = 315 lb., of ginned cotton = 100 lb.; an Ardeb of wheat = 150 kilogrammes, of barley = 120 kilogrammes, of beans = 155 kilogrammes, of maize = 140 kilogrammes, of whole lentils = 157 kilogrammes, of split lentils = 132 kilogrammes.

South Africa.

Money, Weights, and Measures.—The Metric System is compulsory in the case of chemists, and is permissible (along with British standard of weights and measures) in other cases. In addition, the following old Dutch measures are still used:—Liquid Measure Leaguer = about 128 imperial gallons; half aum = 15½ imperial gallons; anker = 7½ imperial gallons. Capacity: Muid = 3 bushels. The general surface measure is Morgen, equal to 2'1165408 acres; 1,000 Cape lineal feet are equal to 1,033 British imperial feet. The short ton of 2,000 lb. is used.

FOREIGN WEIGHTS AND MEASURES.

The Metric System has been adopted by the whole of Europe (except the United Kingdom and Russia) and is permissible in all countries. In 1902 it was adopted in Japan, but the old weights and measures are permitted until otherwise determined.

China.

Tael weight	= 1'33 oz.
Catty "	= 1'33 lb.

EXAMPLE 1.—What is the present value of a Lease having 37 years to run of the net annual value of £500, interest being reckoned at 4 per cent? Answer.—£1,294 years purchase, or £1,924.

EXAMPLE 2.—A man, aged 54, in the receipt of a pension or annuity of £500 a year net, wishes to commute that for a present payment of interest being reckoned at 4 per cent. How much will he receive? Answer.—Looking at the Table of Expectation of Life (p. 2), it will be seen that the expectation for age 54 is about 27 years; and from the above table an annuity certain for 27 years, interest at 5 per cent., is worth 21.57 years purchase. The present payment required would therefore be £1,297 approximately.

Note to Example 2.—This method is only approximate. The values of annuities which depend on lives of a given present age, when properly calculated according to a given mortality table and a given rate of interest, are always somewhat less than those given by the method used in this example.

THE following table is compiled from a supplement to the Registrar-General's Annual Return, which refers to England and Wales only. The figures are based upon the mortality in the ten years 1891-1900.

AGE.	OF 1,000,000 BORN, THE NUMBER SURVIVING AT THE END OF EACH YEAR OF LIFE.		MEAN AFTER-LIFETIME (EXPECTATION OF LIFE)		AGE.	OF 1,000,000 BORN, THE NUMBER SURVIVING AT THE END OF EACH YEAR OF LIFE.		MEAN AFTER-LIFETIME (EXPECTATION OF LIFE).

When the annuity is payable at the beginning instead of at the end of the year, the amount for the following year, less £1, must be taken. Thus, for £1 at 4 per cent. for 25 years, take 2.535 and deduct £1—£1.535.

REPAYMENT OF PUBLIC LOANS.

LARGE sums of money are every year advanced to Local Government Authorities, for housing, improvements, public buildings, schools, harbours, bridges, &c., to be repaid in a given number of years, the amounts returned including both repayment of capital and payment of interest. The following scheme of tables for the repayments of Loans was compiled under the Local Government Act, 1888, and examined by the actuary of the National Debt Office. It gives the sums needed as the annual amount of principal combined with interest required for the liquidation of a debt of £100, at the stated percentage, in 10, 20, 30, 40, 50, 60 and 80 years:—

Years.	5 per Ct.	6 per Ct.	6 1/2 per Ct.
10	£ 2 s. 8.	£ 2 s. 8.	£ 2 s. 8.
20	£ 4 s. 10.	£ 4 s. 10.	£ 4 s. 10.
30	£ 6 s. 10.	£ 6 s. 10.	£ 6 s. 10.
40	£ 8 s. 10.	£ 8 s. 10.	£ 8 s. 10.
50	£ 10 s. 10.	£ 10 s. 10.	£ 10 s. 10.
60	£ 12 s. 10.	£ 12 s. 10.	£ 12 s. 10.
80	£ 16 s. 10.	£ 16 s. 10.	£ 16 s. 10.

If the loan be for £1,000, each annual instalment as shown above must be multiplied by 10 if for £1,000, then by 20, and so on.

A "state of emergency" was at once proclaimed by Royal Proclamation, coal exports were prohibited, and consumption regulated. Effort to resume negotiations on April 6 failed because miners refused to restart pumping as preliminary to meeting owners, and upon threat of Triple Alliance to call general strike, Government called out reserves and formed Volunteer Defence Corps. On April 10 men's executive agreed to allow steps to be taken to save the mines, and negotiations were opened on following day. The conference broke down, but threatened strike action of Triple Alliance was postponed until the 15th. A few hours before the time fixed, railwaymen and transport workers cancelled the general strike because miners disavowed proposal made by their secretary, Mr. Frank Hodges, that temporary wage settlement should be discussed apart from question of national pool of profits to assist poorer districts. Miners delegates, on April 22, rejected Government's offer involving grant of £10,000,000 to assist in tidying over period of depression and gradual and limited reduction of wages, and after further "conversations" new terms were rejected by 435,614 against 180,724. On June 27, however, owners and miners came to provisional agreement, and asked Government for financial help for temporary period. House of Commons sanctioned the grant of £10,000,000, and on the 28th terms were finally settled, and were endorsed by 232,820 to 105,716, miners returning to work on July 4 with few exceptions. Stoppage involved some 3,000,000 persons. Men obtained national and district wages boards, wages based on profits, and minimum of 20 per cent. over standard wages. By end of July normal output of coal was being secured. April 19. Reduction of wages in shipbuilding industry agreed to at conference between employers and men's representatives. May 3. Announced that agreement had been signed by railway companies and railwaymen's unions to prevent disputes resulting from decontrol. 6. Agreement reached in building trade for reduction of wages on national basis. June 6. Cotton mills in Lancashire ceased work through refusal of operatives to accept reduction of wages of 5s. in the £. 7. Engineering employers posted notices of proposed wage reductions. 15. Terms of settlement of cotton wage dispute reached by negotiating committees. THE TURF IN 1921.

(At the close of the Newmarket Second October Meeting.)

THE racing season was not allowed to run its usual course owing to the national strike of jockeys in the spring. After several meetings had been abandoned by order of the Government, including the Epsom Spring Meeting, executives were permitted to carry out their programmes on condition that no special railway facilities were provided for horses and the public. The abandonments included Newmarket, April 22, 23 and 24, while the second meeting was compressed into one day, April 29, when the Two Thousand and One Thousand Guineas were run.

As in the preceding year, the five classic races were won by five different horses as follows:—

Two Thousand Guineas, Craig an Eran; One Thousand Guineas, Battius; The Derby, Humorist; The Oaks, Love in Illness; St. Leger, Polemarch.

Lord Astor's Craig an Eran, reputed the best colt of his age, was unluckily beaten a neck in the Derby by Humorist, whom he had defeated in the Two Thousand. He started an odds-on favourite for the St. Leger, but failed to get a place. The winner, Lord Londonderry's Polemarch, who started at 50 to 1, like California, the previous year's winner, is sired by The Tetrarch.

Prices of bloodstock found a more normal level, the Slodmore yearlings at the Doncaster sales realising 8,000 guineas for seven colts and 29,500 guineas for nine fillies.

CRICKET IN 1930-31.

UNDER the captaincy of Mr. J. W. H. T. Douglas (Essex), an M.C.C. team visited Australia and lost all the five Test matches as follows:—

Dec. 17, 1930.—At Sydney, Australia won by 377 runs.

Dec. 31, 1930.—At Melbourne, Australia won by innings and 91 runs.

Jan. 14, 1931.—At Adelaide, Australia won by 219 runs.

Feb. 11, 1931.—At Melbourne, Australia won by 8 wickets.

Feb. 25, 1931.—At Sydney, Australia won by 9 wickets.

An Australian team, under Mr. W. W. Armstrong, visited England, where the five Test matches resulted:—

May 28.—At Nottingham, Australia won by 10 wickets.

June 11.—At Lords, Australia won by 8 wickets.

July 2.—At Leeds, Australia won by 219 runs.

July 23.—At Manchester, a draw.

Aug. 13.—At Kennington Oval, a draw.

The visitors were undefeated till the last week of the tour, when they were beaten by very small margins by a scratch England XI, of amateurs at Eastbourne and by C. J. Thornton's XI at Scarborough. The team was very strong in all departments of the game. They played, in all, 38 matches, of which they won 22, drew 14, and lost 2.

BILLIARDS IN 1921.

For the second year in succession there was a new Professional Billiards' champion, T. Newman, who gained successive victories over Tophill, Falkiner and Rees, W. Smith, the 1920 champion, and M. Inman declined to play under the scheme drawn up by the controlling body, and the contest was therefore robbed of much of its interest.

PROFESSIONAL CHAMPIONSHIP.—In the final, Thomas Newman beat Thomas Rees by 5, 256 in 26,000 up.

AMATEUR CHAMPIONSHIP.—Mr. S. H. Fry beat J. Graham Symes by 409 in 3,000 up. An Australian, J. R. Hooper, made a good show in this event.

VICTORY TOURNAIMENT.—W. Smith won, but there were several defaults through illness, &c., including that of T. Newman, the new champion.

During the year, E. Peall, son of the old spot-stroke champion, W. J. Peall, came to the front, winning the 81 Duntan's Tournament and eight matches of the reel. His first defeat came from a rising young player, Joseph Davies, of Chesterfield, who was in receipt of 1,000 in 8,000. Both these men will make their mark amongst the higher professionals.

BREAKS.—On Feb. 27, 1921, Falkiner made 575 with ivory balls. On May 6, 1920, T. Newman scored an all-round break of 1,000 with ivory balls, this being the largest apart from George Gray's (red ball) and anchor cannon "freak" efforts. T. Rees also made a break of 750.

Best "spot" break (exhibition match), 3,394, by W. J. Peall, 1920; match for money, 2,021, by W. J. Peall, 1899. Best spot barred breaks, 1,398, by John Roberts, 1899, and 1,467, by T. Taylor, 1899. With competition balls the highest breaks are 2,105 (1921) and 2,000 (of the reel), by George Gray, Oct. 1, 1905, by H. W. Stevenson (under B.C.C. Rules), Oct. 1920. Best breaks with ivory balls are 1,024, by George Gray (under B.C.C. Rules); 800, by H. W. Stevenson, Feb. 1905, recognised by B.A.; and last, made by John Roberts, in Scotland, in 1893. By means of the now abolished cradle cannon W. Cook, in June, 1907, scored 45,746. The highest freak break was 499,126 by T. Rees with the anchor cannon in 1907.

to political chiefs who are responsible, not merely or mainly to the Crown, but to the elected legislature. The Dominions thus governed are Canada, Newfoundland, Australia, New Zealand, and the Union of South Africa.

(b) Where there is government by legislative assembly wholly or partly elected, and an executive council nominated by the Crown or the Governor representing the Crown. In this class may be placed the Bahamas, Barbados, Bermuda, British Guiana, Jamaica, Leeward Islands, Mauritius, and Malta.

(c) Where there is government by a Governor acting with an executive and a legislative council, the councils being nominated by the Crown or a Governor representing the Crown. Dominions so governed include Ceylon, Falkland Islands, Fiji, Gambia, St. Vincent, Sierra Leone, Straits Settlements, Trinidad.

(d) Wherein both legislative and executive powers are vested in the Governor alone. In this class are Gibraltar, Labuan, and St. Helena, where power is also reserved to the Crown to legislate by Order in Council. In South Africa, Bechuanaland, Basutoland, and Zululand are governed in substantially the same way, but no power is reserved to the Crown.

(e) Protectorates. The protectorates are countries which, as regards their foreign relations, are under the exclusive control of the King-Emperor. The protectorates of the British Empire include Egypt, Kenya, Somaliland, Nyasaland, Uganda, Tanganyika, Swaziland, and Nigeria.

(f) Spheres of Influence. A sphere of influence may be described as an area wherein other Powers undertake not to attempt to acquire influence or territory by treaty or annexation; such British spheres exist in the Persian Gulf and in Arabia. In addition to the Spheres of Influence are

(g) Mandatory Spheres, where the responsibility for securing good government and a reasonable development of natural resources is confided to an already established government by mandate from the League of Nations. Such British spheres are parts of the former German Colonies in West Africa, and the former Turkish governments of Palestine and Mesopotamia.

SELF-SUPPORT.—With but few exceptions the Imperial Dominions are self-supporting, revenue being raised locally to meet the expenditure. Occasional grants are made by the Imperial Government to meet exceptional expenditure, or in aid of administration in the earlier stages of development. Certain capital expenses are also undertaken from time to time by the Central Authority, e.g., the Nigerian purchase, the Uganda Railway, &c. No taxes are imposed on the subjects of a Dominion or Colony by the Imperial Government, as such subjects are not directly represented in the Imperial House of Commons; this principle, "No taxation without representation," was the mainprinciple of the revolt in the North American Colonies at the close of the eighteenth century. Since that disastrous attempt to impose taxes without the consent of the taxpayers, the principle, which has for many years been accepted in Great Britain, had become an accepted maxim of British Overseas administration.

SELF-DEFENCE.—The Dominions, generally, provide for the defence of their immediate area, but the general strategical defence of the Empire is undertaken by the Imperial Government. Questions affecting the general strategical defence of the Empire are considered and determined by the Imperial Defence Committee, which co-ordinates the work of the sea and land forces of the Empire. In the War of 1914-1918 all the Dominions provided Armies or Contingents, which fought in every area and bore a full share of the sacrifices by which victory was achieved.

THE IMPERIAL CONFERENCE.—The origin of the Imperial Conference may be traced to the presence in London (in 1887) of the Premiers of the various self-governing Dominions, representing their countries at the celebrations of the Jubilee of Queen Victoria. Similar gatherings took place in 1897, 1902, 1907 and 1911, and in 1907 the title of "Colonial" Conference was changed to Imperial Conference. At the earlier meetings the Colonial Secretary presided, but with the change of title additional importance was given to the assembly by the assumption of the Presidency by the Prime Minister of the United Kingdom. In 1917 and 1918 the Conference was called the Imperial War Conference, and was held under the Chairmanship of the Secretary of State for the Colonies. In 1921, the Premiers' Conference, under the Presidency of the Prime Minister of the United Kingdom, discussed all matters of general interest to the Empire as a whole. The constitution of the Conference is as follows:—President, The Prime Minister of the United Kingdom; Chairman (in the absence of the President), The Secretary of State for the Colonies; Members, The Prime Ministers and other Ministers of Canada, Australia, New Zealand, Union of South Africa, and Newfoundland, the Secretary of State for India and other representatives of India; Secretary, Sir H. C. M. Lambert, K.C.M.G., C.B.; Assistant do., C. T. Davis, C.M.G.; E. J. Harding, C.M.G.

THE LEGISLATURE.—The Parliament of the United Kingdom is the supreme legislative authority of the Empire. This Parliament has, with the consent of the King-Emperor, delegated its legislative authority to other parliaments constituted by itself, while retaining a general supervision of Imperial affairs. The Secretary of State for the Colonies is a Cabinet Minister, his active participation in the government of the Imperial Dominions varying with the measure of self-government accorded to them. Parliament also exercises a control over Indian affairs through a Secretary of State. (See also "Self-Government" and "Imperial Conference," ante.)

THE JUDICATURE.—The Supreme Judicial Authority of the Empire is the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council, before which appeals may be brought (in the form of a petition to the Crown) from Consular Courts and Courts of Vice-Admiralty, and from the Courts of India and every British Dominion. The Committee (see p. 278) consists of such members of the Privy Council as have held or are holding high judicial office, provision being made for the inclusion of representatives of India and the self-governing Dominions. India and the Dominions have each a judicial system, with judges appointed by the Crown. The Supreme Judicial Authority for the United Kingdom is the House of Lords.

EDUCATION.—Educational systems, on a more or less uniform plan, are developed throughout the Empire under the control of the respective governments. Universities and University Colleges have been established and degrees are conferred. Under the will of Cecil Rhodes scholarships were founded at various colleges of Oxford University. These Rhodes Scholarships are tenable for three years, are of the annual value of £300, and are open to scholars of each Province of Canada, of each State of Australia, of New Zealand, Newfoundland, Natal, Cape of Good Hope (4), Jamaica, and Bermuda. Each State of the U.S.A. has a similar nomination, and 15 scholarships, each of £300, were formerly in the nomination of the German Emperor, but this provision was rescinded by an Act of Parliament, and in 1902 the 15 scholarships in question were allocated to the Empire of India. Organising Secretary, Rhodes Scholarship Trust, Geoffrey Dawson, M.A.

FINANCE.—Complete financial autonomy is enjoyed, in fact, by all British Dominions, and customs tariffs are in most cases the principal source of revenue. Until the close of the War of 1914-1918 the tariff of the United Kingdom was imposed without distinction on foreign and Imperial merchandise, but recent legislation foreshadows a general change of fiscal policy. The tariffs of the self-governing Dominions are generally lower for merchandise of British origin than for importations from foreign countries. There is no Imperial Debt, but certain obligations of Crown Colonies and Protectorates are met in the early stages of their development by the central Government, and occasional grants in aid of revenue are also made at need. In the Civil Service Estimates for 1921-22 the following "Grants in Aid of Local Revenues" were included:—Wei-hai-wei, £8,000; Somaland, £100,000; St. Helena, £3,200; Nyasaland, £100,000; Tanganyika, £914,000; Uganda, £250,000; and Cyprus £50,000; in addition, the sum of £10,000 is set aside for Scientific Research in connexion with the Development of the Economic Resources of the Colonies and Protectorates.

PRODUCTION.—In 1913 the wheat crop of the world was about 452,200,000 quarters, of which 83,750,000 quarters were produced in the British Empire. India, Canada, Australia, the United Kingdom, and Egypt are the principal wheat-producing units, and Mesopotamia (with irrigation) has great potentialities. Barley, oats and maize, and tea, coffee and rubber are largely cultivated. Cane sugar is produced in India (for local consumption), West Indies, Australasia, Natal, and Mauritius, and beet sugar in Canada and elsewhere. Australia and New Zealand are the greatest wool-producing countries of the world, and the output of coal in the United Kingdom exceeds that of every country except the U.S.A. Cotton is extensively grown in India (4,807,000 bales of 400 lb. in 1916-17), Egypt (632,000 bales), and its cultivation is increasing elsewhere—West Africa (11,500 bales in 1907), East Africa (30,700 bales), Sudan (23,000 bales), and West Indies (2,000 bales). Iron ore is found in many of the Dominions, and pig iron is largely produced; tin is produced mainly within the Empire (particularly in the Malay peninsula), while more than half the world's supply of gold is drawn from South and South-West Africa and Australasia; it is produced also in Borneo, British East Africa, British Guiana, Canada, Ceylon, India, Malay States, Sarawak, Sudan, and West Africa. The gold supplied by the principal producing countries during the last thirty years is shown in the following table:—

Period.	Fine Ounces
	Australasia.	Africa.	Canada.
1891-95	9,059,505	7,240,235	276,632
1896-1900	15,947,275	13,101,508	3,482,339

1906-10	17,769,547	39,008,836	2,430,685
1911-15	18,776,369	50,108,454	3,377,271
1916-20	7,560,784	49,160,253	3,902,682

Precious stones are found in various parts of the Empire, South Africa producing the principal supply of diamonds, and India of rubies and emeralds. Petroleum is produced in India (8,500,000 barrels of 42 gallons in 1917), Trinidad (1,600,000 barrels), Egypt (1,000,000 barrels), and Canada (200,000 barrels) and there are vast resources available at Mosul (Mesopotamia) and in the neighbourhood of the Persian Gulf.

EXTERNAL TRADE.—The total trade of the British Empire in 1920 was valued at £6,000,000,000 (Imports £3,100,000,000; Exports £2,900,000,000). The United Kingdom (Imports £2,000,000,000, Exports £1,670,000,000—Total £3,670,000,000), India (£437,000,000, exclusive of bullion and specie), Canada (£480,000,000), Australasia (£285,000,000), New Zealand (£84,000,000), South Africa (£103,000,000, exclusive of bullion and specie), and Egypt (£207,000,000) are the principal trading units of the Empire.

SHIPPING.—On June 30, 1921, there were 11,433 vessels (over 100 tons) flying the British flag, of which total 9,034 were registered in the United Kingdom, 615 in Australia and N.Z., 961 in Canada, 190 in India and Ceylon, and 633 in other parts of the Empire. These figures include 10,324 steam vessels of 21,988,606 tons (U.K., 8,579 vessels of 19,320,053 tons); and 1,109 sailing vessels of 482,192 tons (U.K., 455 vessels of 251,501 tons). In the War of 1914-1918 there were lost through enemy action 2,774 merchant vessels of 9,538,928 gross tonnage; of this total 2,197 (7,638,000 tons) were British, 230 (696,845 tons) French, 230 (742,365 tons) Italian, 29 (120,176 tons) Japanese, and 80 (321,512 tons) U.K.A.

TOWNS.—Capital, London (England). Population (1921), 4,483,249 (with suburbs, 7,476,166).

At the Census of 1921 there were in the British Empire 2 cities with over 1,000,000 inhabitants, 9 with 500,000 to 1,000,000 (see p. 110), and 84 others with over 100,000 inhabitants. Of these 97 cities 51 were in the United Kingdom (England 42, Wales 3, Scotland 4, Ireland 2), 29 in India, 4 in Canada, 4 in Australasia, 2 in Egypt, and 1 each in New Zealand, South Africa, Ceylon, Hong Kong, and the Straits Settlements.

FLYING THE UNION JACK.—In schools administered by the London County Council, where flagstaffs are provided, the Union Jack is flown from 8 a.m. until sunset on the following days:—April 23.—St. George's Day.

May 6.—Anniversary of the King's accession.

May 24.—Empire Day.

May 26.—The Queen's birthday.

June 3.—The King's Birthday.

June 4.—Do., Official celebration.

June 23.—The Prince of Wales's birthday.

October 21.—Anniversary of Trafalgar.

December 1.—Birthday of Queen Alexandra.

And on the occasion of the opening and closing of Parliament by the King.

to political chiefs who are responsible, not merely or mainly to the Crown, but to the elected legislature. The Dominions thus governed are Canada, Newfoundland, Australia, New Zealand, and the Union of South Africa.

(b) Where there is government by legislative assembly wholly or partly elected, and an executive council nominated by the Crown or the Governor representing the Crown. In this class may be placed the Bahamas, Barbados, Bermuda, British Guiana, Jamaica, Leeward Islands, Mauritius, and Malta.

(c) Where there is government by a Governor acting with an executive and a legislative council, the councils being nominated by the Crown or a Governor representing the Crown. Dominions so governed include Ceylon, Falkland Islands, Fiji, Gambia, St. Vincent, Sierra Leone, Straits Settlements, Trinidad.

(d) Wherein both legislative and executive powers are vested in the Governor alone. In this class are Gibraltar, Labuan, and St. Helena, where power is also reserved to the Crown to legislate by Order in Council. In South Africa, Bechuanaland, Basutoland, and Zululand are governed in substantially the same way, but no power is reserved to the Crown.

(e) Protectorates. The protectorates are countries which, as regards their foreign relations, are under the exclusive control of the King-Emperor. The protectorates of the British Empire include Egypt, Kenya, Somaliland, Nyasaland, Uganda, Tanganyika, Swaziland, and Nigeria.

(f) Spheres of Influence. A sphere of influence may be described as an area wherein other Powers undertake not to attempt to acquire influence or territory by treaty or annexation; such British spheres exist in the Persian Gulf and in Arabia. In addition to the Spheres of Influence are

(g) Mandatory Spheres, where the responsibility for securing good government and a reasonable development of natural resources is confided to an already established government by mandate from the League of Nations. Such British spheres are parts of the former German Colonies in West Africa, and the former Turkish governments of Palestine and Mesopotamia.

SELF-SUPPORT.—With but few exceptions the Imperial Dominions are self-supporting, revenue being raised locally to meet the expenditure. Occasional grants are made by the Imperial Government to meet exceptional expenditure, or in aid of administration in the earlier stages of development. Certain capital expenses are also undertaken from time to time by the Central Authority, e.g., the Nigerian purchase, the Uganda Railway, &c. No taxes are imposed on the subjects of a Dominion or Colony by the Imperial Government, as such subjects are not directly represented in the Imperial House of Commons; this principle, "No taxation without representation," was the mainspring of the revolt in the North American Colonies at the close of the eighteenth century. Since that disastrous attempt to impose taxes without the consent of the taxpayers, the principle, which has for many years been accepted in Great Britain, had become an accepted maxim of British Overseas administration.

SELF-DEFENCE.—The Dominions, generally, provide for the defence of their immediate area, but the general strategical defence of the Empire is undertaken by the Imperial Government. Questions affecting the general strategical defence of the Empire are considered and determined by the Imperial Defence Committee, which co-ordinates the work of the sea and land forces of the Empire. In the War of 1914-1918 all the Dominions provided Armies or Contingents, which fought in every area and bore a full share of the sacrifices by which victory was achieved.

THE IMPERIAL CONFERENCE.—The origin of the Imperial Conference may be traced to the presence in London (in 1887) of the Premiers of the various self-governing Dominions, representing their countries at the celebrations of the Jubilee of Queen Victoria. Similar gatherings took place in 1897, 1902, 1907 and 1911, and in 1907 the title of "Colonial" Conference was changed to Imperial Conference. At the earlier meetings the Colonial Secretary presided, but with the change of title additional importance was given to the assembly by the assumption of the Presidency by the Prime Minister of the United Kingdom. In 1917 and 1918 the Conference was called the Imperial War Conference, and was held under the Chairmanship of the Secretary of State for the Colonies. In 1921, the Premiers' Conference, under the Presidency of the Prime Minister of the United Kingdom, discussed all matters of general interest to the Empire as a whole. The constitution of the Conference is as follows:—President, The Prime Minister of the United Kingdom; Chairman (in the absence of the President), The Secretary of State for the Colonies; Members, The Prime Ministers and other Ministers of Canada, Australia, New Zealand, Union of South Africa, and Newfoundland, the Secretary of State for India and other representatives of India; Secretary, Sir H. C. M. Lambert, K.C.M.G., C.B.; Assistant do., C. T. Davis, C.M.G.; E. J. Harding, C.M.G.

Religion and Languages.

The inhabitants of the United Kingdom are almost entirely Christians, and mainly Protestants, the exceptions being 5 million Roman Catholics (principally in Ireland), 250,000 Jews, and a small number of non-Christian immigrants. In England the Church of England (with an Episcopal form of Government), and in Scotland the Church of Scotland (with a Presbyterian form of Government), are the "Established Religions." The Church was disestablished in Ireland in 1869, and in Wales in 1920. There has been no religious census since 1851, but many of the religious bodies publish estimates of membership. The language of the people is English, with a large proportion of Welsh-speaking people in Wales, many of whom are bi-lingual. Attempts have been made, under Sinn Féin auspices, to revive the Gaelic language in Ireland. Gaelic is still spoken in the Highlands and Islands of Scotland, there being 10,314 persons speaking Gaelic only, and 151,159 speaking Gaelic and English at the Census of 1921.

The number of Passengers from and to the United Kingdom and Europe in 1913 was, Outwards (to the Continent), 1,224,422, and Inwards (from the Continent), 1,301,874. The figures for 1920-22 were Outwards (1920) 222,222, (1921) 222,222, (1922) 222,222; Inwards (1920) 222,222, (1921) 222,222, (1922) 222,222.

CENSUS POPULATION OF THE BRITISH ISLES.

Previous to 1801 there existed no official return of the population of either England or Scotland; nor was it till 1823 that statisticians had anything more than surmise to guide them respecting Ireland, and the census then taken of that country was far from correct. The estimate formed of the English population at various periods, calculated from the numbers of baptisms, burials, and marriages, was in the years—

1570.....4,160,222	1670.....5,773,646
1600.....4,811,718	1700.....6,045,008
1630.....5,600,527	1750.....6,527,035

The first general Census of the United Kingdom was taken in 1801, and since the time named there has been a fresh numbering every ten years, with the following results:

1801.....16,345,646	1871.....31,845,379
1811.....18,509,116	1881.....35,241,482

1851.....27,724,056	1921.....48,767,530††
1861.....29,321,288

* * The population of the United Kingdom a month before the outbreak of the War of 1914-1918 was officially estimated at 46,089,249. The number of persons to the square mile was in 1921: England and Wales, 618.0; Scotland, 156.5; Ireland, 135.6.

POPULATION ENUMERATED AT EACH DECENNIAL CENSUS IN ENGLAND AND WALES AND SCOTLAND, 1801-1921, IRELAND, 1831-1921, AND ISLANDS IN THE BRITISH SEAS, 1871-1921.†

CENTRAL GOVERNMENT.

THE BRITISH CONSTITUTION.—The British Constitution is mainly unwritten and customary, but its development is marked by certain outstanding and fundamental laws, of which the principal are Magna Carta (1215), the Habeas Corpus Act (1679), the Act of Settlement (1701), the Act of Union with Scotland (1707), the Act of Union with Ireland (1800), the Parliament Act (1911) and the Government of Ireland Act (1920). The first secured annual parliaments and the equal administration of justice; the second established the liberty of the person; the third provided for the Protestant succession to the throne; the fourth and fifth created the United Kingdom; the sixth enabled the Commons to pass certain Acts without the adherence of the other Chamber, and the last "gives to Irishmen as a whole the right and, if they choose to exercise it, the power to manage their own affairs."

The constituent parts of the British Constitution may be thus briefly described:

1. The Sovereign.—The throne is hereditary in the British house of Windsor with mixed succession, the sons of the Sovereign and their descendants having precedence of daughters, but daughters and their descendants preference over lateral lines. The Monarchy is constitutional and limited. The King has a right to veto Bills passed by both Houses of Parliament, but in practice his veto is almost obsolete. "The King can do no wrong" is a maxim of the Constitution, and consequently no action for civil wrong will lie against the Crown. A petition of right, however, will generally enable an injured subject to obtain redress, while, if in the administration of an Act of Parliament a Government department exceeds its rights, a declaration of right may be obtained in an action against the Attorney-General.

a. The Legislature.—Parliament consists of two Houses, the Lords and the Commons.

(a) The House of Lords consists of peers. A peer may hold his seat by (1) hereditary right, (2) creation by the King, (3) official position or election. English bishops (24), Irish peers (28) elected for life, and Scottish peers (26) elected for duration of Parliament, also sit in the House of Lords.

The powers of the House of Lords were much restricted by the Parliament Act, 1911. Thus, if a Money Bill is not passed unamended by the House of Lords within a month of its being sent up, it becomes law upon the Royal assent being signified. A Public Bill other than a Money Bill will become law without the consent of the Lords if it is passed by the Commons, and sent up to the Lords, in three successive sessions, provided two years elapse between the date of the second reading in the Commons in the first session and the date when it is passed by that body in the third session. Passing a Bill with amendments by the House of Lords is equivalent to rejection, unless the Commons approve the amendments. Any Bill by which the maximum duration of Parliament is increased is excepted from this Act. Members of the House of Lords are unpaid.

(b) The House of Commons.—This body consists of 705 members, elected by the registered male and female electors in county, borough, and university constituencies. Roughly speaking, about one-third of the population are electors. The maximum duration of Parliament is five years. Members of the House of Commons receive annual salaries of £400.

3. The Executive.—The Crown (the King in Council) "makes peace and war, issues charters, increases the peerage, is the fountain of honour, of office, and of justice." The Cabinet, under the presidency of the Prime Minister, consists of Ministers, drawn from the ranks of the party in power and appointed by the Sovereign on the advice of the Prime Minister; Ministers receive salaries of varying amounts (see page 523). The Cabinet has no corporate existence. Ministers are severally responsible to Parliament for their actions, and the Cabinet as a whole is responsible to Parliament for its joint and several administration. Ministers hold their office during the Sovereign's pleasure; they may be dismissed at any moment.

4. The Judiciary.—(a) England and Wales.—The laws in England and Wales are administered by judges appointed by the Crown, who hold office for life, and cannot be removed save on petition presented by both Houses of Parliament. Two Courts of Appeal hear appeals from the High Court, the ultimate Court of Appeal from all the courts in the United Kingdom being the House of Lords. Civil cases arising in London and Middlesex are tried at the High Court in London, but civil cases arising in the country are tried on circuit by judges of the King's Bench (Assizes). The Chancery division has exclusive jurisdiction to try certain classes of actions. To the County Courts is relegated the duty of trying actions where the sum in dispute does not exceed a certain amount. The County Courts, too, have jurisdiction to try cases arising under certain special Acts of Parliament, e.g., the Workmen's Compensation Act. Bankruptcy cases arising in London are heard in the London Bankruptcy Court; those arising out of London are dealt with in the County Courts.

With regard to criminal law it is a general principle that, except for certain minor offences, every person charged is entitled to be tried by a jury. Courts of criminal jurisdiction in England are: (1) The judges of the High Court sitting at Assizes for the trial of cases out of London; and at the Central Criminal Court ("The Old Bailey," see p. 528) for the trial of cases arising in and around London. (2) Courts of Quarter Sessions, holden for every county, and formed of justices of the peace, presided over by a chairman who is unpaid. The recorders of certain cities and boroughs have a jurisdiction similar to that of courts of Quarter Sessions. (3) Courts of Petty Sessions, consisting of at least two justices of the peace or a stipendiary magistrate. (4) The Court of Criminal Appeal has power to hear appeals against convictions and sentences.

(b) Scotland.—Scottish civil law is administered by the Court of Session, which is a court of law and equity. The High Court of Judiciary is the supreme criminal court in Scotland. It consists of all the judges, and as a rule it is confined to the trial of serious cases. The Sheriff of the county (see p. 528) exercises functions which correspond to those of the English County Court Judges and the Chairmen of Quarter Sessions. Burgh magistrates and justices of the peace have jurisdiction in petty cases.

(c) Ireland.—The higher courts in Ireland are very similar to the English courts, but the County Court Judges are also the Chairmen of Quarter Sessions, and there are Resident (stipendiary) Magistrates (see p. 528) who have jurisdiction in petty cases.

LOCAL GOVERNMENT.

Local Government is carried out under the central control of the Ministry of Health (which superseded the various Local Government Boards in 1929). The subjects which local bodies administer are, inter alia, the poor law; the laws relating to public health; the maintenance of the police; the control of the sale of intoxicating liquors; the provision of lunatic asylums. Local authorities also have to administer and carry into effect the laws as to elementary and other schools. The ruling principle has been to entrust special interests to those specially interested. In England and Wales there are elective Councils for each County (under Chairmen), for each City and County Borough (under Lord Mayors or Mayors), and for Urban and Rural Districts (under Chairmen), every parish being thus included. Scotland has elective County Councils under a Convener, Burgh Councils under a Lord Provost or Provost, or Parish Councils with Chairmen. Ireland has a more elaborate system of local government than Great Britain with popularly elected Councils for Counties, Boroughs, and Rural Districts, the municipalities having Lord Mayors or Mayors.

POLICE.

The strength of the Police force in 1929 was 56,166 in England and Wales, 6,124 in Scotland, and 10,754 in Ireland. The Police of England and Wales are administered by the Home Office, those of Scotland by the Scottish Office, and those of Ireland by the Irish Secretary's Office. The LONDON POLICE consists of the City Police and of the Metropolitan Police. The City Police district comprises an area of 675 statute acres, and contains two courts of justice, those of the Guildhall and Mansion House, where the Lord Mayor and the Aldermen are the magistrates (see p. 273). Although the area is comparatively small, the rateable value is enormous, and there are 19,657 night residents. The Force comprises: Assistant Commissioner, 2 Superintendents, 6 Chief Inspectors, 25 Inspectors, 17 Sub-Inspectors, 103 Sergeants, and 1,006 Constables; also 22 Constables on private service duty. The cost of the maintenance of the City Police in 1921-1922 was £439,000.

The Metropolitan Police district embraces an area of 447,626 statute acres, with a population of about seven millions. There are within this area fourteen Police Courts, viz., Bow Street, Clerkenwell, North London, Lambeth, Marlborough Street, Marylebone, Old Street, Thames, Tower Bridge, Westminster, West London, Greenwich and Woolwich, South Western, and West Ham (see p. 282). The Force on Oct. 2, 1921, consisted of 39 Superintendents, 686 Inspectors, 3,030 Sergeants, and 17,512 Constables, making a total of 21,267, with 30 horses. The strength of the Metropolitan Special Constabulary Reserve and its Auxiliary Force on Sept. 24, 1921, was 12,605. The cost of the maintenance of the Metropolitan Police in 1920-1921 was £7,924,122 (the fines at Metropolitan Police Courts reduced the gross amount by £30,000). On March 31, 1921, there were 20,841 Police pensioners, and 266 widows.

The Women's Division of the Metropolitan Police, consisted of 122 (all ranks) in 1922.

DEFENCE.

The Royal Navy (see pp. 286-291) is recruited by voluntary enlistment, and is administered by the "Commissioners for executing the office of Lord High Admiral of the United Kingdom."

The Army (see pp. 292-7) is recruited by voluntary enlistment in normal times, but was raised to the requirements of the War by the Military Service Act of 1916. It is administered by the Army Council (similar in membership to the Board of Admiralty).

The Royal Air Force (see pp. 298-9) is recruited by voluntary enlistment, and is administered by the Air Ministry.

EDUCATION.

I.—ELEMENTARY.

Statutes require parents in England and Wales to cause their children to receive efficient elementary instruction or to attend school from 5 to 14 years of age; in Scotland, to provide efficient education up to 15 years; in Ireland, to cause their children to attend school from 6 to 14 years.

In order to give effect to these requirements Local Authorities are empowered to make free provision for school accommodation, attendance of pupils and teaching-staffs, whilst the State supplies nearly one-half of the maintenance funds conditionally upon receipt of satisfactory reports from government inspectors appointed by the Board of Education for England and Wales, by the Committee of Council on Education for Scotland, and by the Commissioners for National Education in Ireland. In 1926 attendance was not enforced in 27 per cent. of the Urban Districts and Towns, and in 43 per cent. of the Rural Districts. It may be remarked—(i.) that there is no definition of "school" in the Acts; (ii.) that efficiency of instruction given is not tested except in publicly-managed schools; (iii.) that Local Authority schools increase in number though still fewer than voluntary (non-provided) schools. The latter are maintained by the Authorities whilst the responsibility for the buildings remains with the foundation-managers. Of such schools there are about 23,000 in all, including some designed for particular purposes, e.g., Higher Elementary and Central for older pupils, special for "defectives" and the like.

Teachers number 200,000, women preponderating. Except in Scotland there is a considerable proportion of teachers who are not fully qualified. The war has lessened the number of male teachers which was already diminishing. State grants for pensions on a more liberal scale than formerly are now offered under the Superannuation Act of 1918, by which it is hoped to render the profession more attractive.

Twenty per cent. of the population are of the pupil age. School life is over in the great majority of cases after about seven years of schooling, the minority proceeding to some other kind of day-school. Recent legislation requires Local Authorities in England, Wales and Scotland to make schemes for consideration by the Board of Education to provide suitable practical instruction, to give advanced instruction to those pupils who stay beyond 14, and to improve the facilities towards preparing pupils for higher education and the teaching profession: also nursery-schools for children under five.

Elementary school education includes teaching in practical matters—needlework, drawing, gardening, handicrafts, cookery, &c.—and the sections upon health, medical attendance, physical training, evening play centres, home study, future employment, etc., show that the schools are valuable agencies in child-welfare generally.

II.—EDUCATION BEYOND ELEMENTARY.

The Education Act, 1918, has in view powers for compulsory, and therefore free, education of a continuative kind in part-time day schools up to 16 and ultimately 18 years; and implies free secondary education of some type hereafter.

Secondary.

The aims, methods, and instructions are in marked contrast to the comparative simplicity of those in Elementary Education. In all the four countries it is now felt that although technical instruction was the first branch to be promoted by statute, undifferentiated 4-year secondary (intermediate) courses should be gone through before pupils proceed to specialisation for industrial, commercial, etc., employments.

(i.) England.—The number of Secondary schools deemed efficient by the Board is 1,073, containing 243,000 pupils, of whom about one-fourth come up from elementary schools with "free places," others with scholarships. Nine-tenths of these schools receive State grants, and nearly one-third are controlled by Local Authorities. Fees are charged to most of the pupils. Most secondary schools are excess full. Of these "efficient" schools about 40 per cent. receive boarders (about 27,000) in varying proportions and drawn in many cases from distant areas. Most of them are endowed or under-trusts, and their trust incomes and property form a considerable asset in secondary school finance. The Authorities aim at securing graduate teachers as far as possible. As in Elementary schools, there is a shortage of fully-qualified teachers; but the recent Act for providing Pensions for School Teachers may be expected to make the posts more attractive.

(ii.) Wales.—The system is much the same as in England, though the schools are under earlier statutory provisions, and are called "Intermediate" in many cases. The number of efficient schools was (in 1914) 122, and of pupils, 22,000, girls preponderating. Three per cent. of the schools do not receive government grants, and 81 per cent. were provided by the Local Authorities. In Wales there is a Central Welsh Board.

(iii.) Scotland: Intermediate and Secondary Schools.—Three kinds of courses are provided: "Higher Grade and Intermediate with post-Intermediate." The former are taken in 196 schools by 33,000 pupils, and the latter in 56 schools by 20,000 pupils. All are under the same Commissioners and Local Authorities as are the Elementary schools.

(iv.) Ireland.—Intermediate Education is under a Special Board who have recently gained fresh statutory powers and a State grant analogous to those in force elsewhere in the United Kingdom. Up to 1917 their operations were chiefly examinational, though grants for inspection results had already been authorised and are made. Their report (1917) contains reference to schools in so far as their pupils (11,000) were presented for examination. It seems that 346 schools were affected, with some 12,000 pupils. There are also "Commissioners of Education in Ireland," whose powers are confined to certain endowed schools (800 pupils) mostly in Ulster.

Technical.

Technical Education in England and Wales is provided in Evening and similar schools (mostly controlled by Local Authorities), 3,143 in number, and attended by 417,128 students on whom State grants are paid, and of whom about one-half are under 17 years of age. The average attendance of a student is about 50 hours per annum. There are also Teachers' Courses (204), Tutorial Classes (100), Technical Institution Courses (24), with 1,160 grant-earning students, Day Technical Classes (127), held in 38 Institutions, with 97,225 students on whom State grants are paid; and also 121 Schools of Art, 19 Branch Schools of Art, and 49 Art Classes.

In Scotland Technical Education is provided in like manner, but in Ireland by a Department of Agriculture and Technical Instruction.

Training.

Training is provided by the State for Elementary School Teachers, of whom 50 per cent. have been trained in Colleges having nearly 13,000 places. Slight progress has been made lately towards providing for the Training of Teachers for Secondary Schools, a small annual State grant being made for the purpose.

Universities.

There are 18 Universities in the United Kingdom, of which 10 are in England, 4 in Scotland, 1 in Wales, and 3 in Ireland (see pp. 314-20); and 4 independent University Colleges. Most of these institutions receive State grants in respect of technical and professional work under the Board of Education Regulations. The Acts of 1928 empower Local Authorities to give aid to University work. In 1920-1 there were 20,500 Undergraduates in England and Wales, 11,200 in Scotland, and about 4,500 in Ireland—total 42,200.

FINANCE.

The Revenue and Expenditure of the United Kingdom for the ten years ended March 31, 1922, are stated as follows:—

Year.	Revenue	Expenditure.
1912-13.....	£188,802,000	£188,622,000
1913-14.....	196,243,000	197,493,000

* Budget Estimate (Ordinary and Extraordinary) as stated below.

The Budget, 1921-1922.

Summary of Provisions.

The Budget of the United Kingdom for 1921-1922 was introduced on April 25th 1921, by Mr. Austen Chamberlain, on behalf of the Chancellor of the Exchequer. The ordinary receipts and expenditure were for the first time separated from the special receipts and expenditure arising out of war liquidation, the ordinary receipts being estimated at £1,058,150,000, and the ordinary expenditure at £974,082,000, showing a surplus of £84,127,000. The extraordinary receipts, from the realisation of war assets, were estimated at £198,500,000, and the extraordinary expenditure at £65,705,000, leaving a surplus of £92,795,000. The total revenue is thus estimated at £1,256,650,000 and the total expenditure at £1,039,728,000, showing an estimated surplus (subject to contingencies noted below), of £176,922,000.

Estimated Revenue, 1921-1922.

Ordinary Receipts.

Customs	£126,800,000
Excise	196,000,000
Motor Tax	9,000,000
Estate Duties	48,000,000
Stamps	21,000,000
Land Tax and House Duty	2,500,000
Income Tax (including Super-Tax and Mineral Rights Duty)	410,500,000
Excess Profits Duty	120,000,000
Corporation Profits Tax	30,000,000
Post Office	60,000,000
Crown Lands	650,000
From Sundry Loans, &c.	12,000,000
Miscellaneous Receipts	21,500,000

Total £1,058,150,000

Extraordinary Receipts.

Realisation of War Assets 198,500,000

TOTAL £1,256,650,000

Changes in Taxation.

There are few changes in taxation. The abolition of the excess profits duty had previously been announced, and the arrears are expected to realise £120,000,000. The ad valorem surtax of 50 per cent. on cigars is removed, and a specific duty of 12s. a gallon is imposed upon sparkling wines in place of the existing duty of 7s. a gallon together with an ad valorem duty of 33½ per cent.

Conversion of War Bonds.

It was proposed to issue a Conversion Loan at 3½ per cent., into which the shortly maturing National War Bonds, amounting to £632,000,000, might be converted. Holders of the seven series of 5 per Cent. National War Bonds were invited to convert, before May 28th, their holdings into the new stock on terms which will give them a yield of from £5 12s. to £5 14s. per cent. The terms are as follows:—

£163 of 3½ per Cent. Conversion Maturing.

Loan in exchange for each £100 of 5 per Cent. National War Bonds	Oct. 1, 1922.
£163	(April 1, 1923.
£164	(Sept. 1, 1923.
£165	(Feb. 1, 1924.
£166	(Oct. 1, 1924.
£167	(April 1, 1925.
£168	(Sept. 1, 1925.

The amount of maturing bonds is as follows:—

October 1, 1922	£128,000,000
April 1, 1923	205,000,000
September 1, 1923	127,000,000
February 1, 1924	26,000,000
October 1, 1924	26,000,000
April 1, 1925	12,000,000
September 1, 1925	12,000,000
Total	£632,000,000

Estimated Expenditure, 1921-1922.

Ordinary Expenditure.

National Debt Services	£345,000,000
Road Fund	8,400,000
Payments to Local Taxation Accounts, etc.	11,115,000
Land Settlement	5,000,000
Other Consolidated Fund Services	1,757,000

GOLD AND NOTE ISSUES.

The Index (New York) gives an interesting comparison of the position as regards gold holdings and note issues of the leading nations in July, 1914, and November, 1920. The 1914 figures are as follows:—

	Gold Millions of $	Notes Millions of $	Ratio of Gold to Notes
United States.....	1,053	1,056	96.9
Great Britain.....	105	140	139.2

Germany.....	258	692	43.0

* Includes gold held abroad not separately stated

The 1920 figures illustrate the tremendous change brought about by the stress of war finance:—

	Gold, Millions of $	Notes Millions of $	Ratio of Gold to Notes
United States.....	2,116	4,625	45.9
Great Britain.....	740	5,301	32.2

Germany.....	260	18,410‡	1.4

* Excludes gold held abroad

† Gold and silver

‡ Includes $2,155,000,000 Kassenschein notes.

Japan alone of the leading nations has increased the ratio of gold to notes. The United States, Britain, and Japan are the three countries to increase their holdings of gold, the first-named now holding almost as much gold as the other five countries together.

REVENUE DEPARTMENTS ESTIMATES.

The net total for 1921-22 is £81,365,939, an increase on 1920-21 of £6,385,354.

£2,705,600 of the increase in respect of the Post Office is due to a change of accounting, and is apparently only, so that the actual net rise for all the departments appears to be £3,679,764, and the net total of the estimates £79,166,337. Originally £60,157,000 was voted for these services in 1920-21, but supplementary estimates were added amounting to £15,323,500, including nearly £10,000,000 for war bonus previously borne on another vote. In 1919-20 the total sums required for the three departments was £40,811,000, and in 1918-19 it was £31,714,500. The principal items in the Post Office estimates, and the increases as compared with the previous year, are set out below:—

	Estimate, 1921-22	Increase on 1920-21
Salaries, wages and allowances.....	£42,975,865	£256,034
Travelling and subsistence allowances	268,500	35,000
Rent, office fittings, &c ...	641,300	48,100
Purchase of sites, &c.....	150,000	50,000
Conveyance of mails	5,264,928	1,114,792
Engineering establishment	5,660,950	263,930

Non-effective charges	2,209,000	391,530
Post Office Savings Banks	335,000	74,600

Two sub-heads show decreases—stores other than engineering materials, for which £1,644,150 or £220,385 less than the previous year, is required, and engineering contract work, which, at £1,309,060, shows a fall of £566,390.

THE DEBT OF THE UNITED KINGDOM.

The National Debt was raised almost entirely for foreign wars. There was a trifling sum of £664,263 until the "Glorious Revolution" of 1688, which added nearly £28,000,000 to the Debt. Under Queen Anne the campaigns of the Duke of Marlborough added nearly £28,000,000, part of which was paid off in the time of George I. In the reign of George II. about £97,000,000 were added, but the first twelve years of George III. saw £20,000,000 of this paid off. The American War added £121,000,000, making the total nearly £290,000,000, which was reduced considerably until 1793, when the repayments ceased owing to the outbreak of the French Revolutionary War. In twenty-three years, £602,500,343 were added to the debt for the purposes of the war, the following amounts being raised:—

Year.	£	Year.	£	Year.	£
1793...	4,877,956	1801... 87,305,271	1809...	12,298,375

1800... 23,030,580		1808... 12,095,044	1816...	514,059

The amount of the Debt in January, 1816, was £900,436,000 (Funded, £816,312,000; Unfunded, £44,727,000; Annuities, £39,397,000), the annual charge being nearly £23,000,000, but the following amounts were paid off from 1817–1837:—

Year.	£	Year.	£	Year.	£
1817...	1,868,814	1824...	7,456,599	1831...	2,673,858

1823...	5,261,725	1830...	1,935,465	1837...	1,985,885

At the accession of Queen Victoria the amount stood at nearly £700,000,000, with an annual charge of £99,000,000. Small sums were paid off annually from 1837–1854, when the Russian War added £33,000,000 to the Debt. Repayments were made from 1858 onwards, with slight increases in 1868, 1875, 1878, 1879 and 1886, the following being the actual amounts paid off:—

On March 31, 1899, the "Dead Weight" total was £635,070,635, being a decrease since 1837 of £153,000,000. For the South African and China wars £142,752,190 were raised, but from April 1, 1903, to March 31, 1914, the sum of £115,518,571 was paid off, and the total Debt on March 31, 1914, was £661,473,765.

In the financial year, 1914–15, an increase of £457,546,985, in 1915–16, of £1,031,931,568, in 1916–17, of £1,870,697,264, in 1917–18, of £1,860,404,723 was caused by the War. On March 31, 1921, the total of the Debt was stated at £7,831,744,300, of which the External Debt accounted for £1,161,560,000 (a decrease of £117,154,000 since March 31, 1920), and the Internal Debt accounted for £6,670,184,300.

Agriculture.

The total land surface of the United Kingdom is stated at 76,639,062 acres; the total area under cultivation, pasture and rough grazings, in 1918 was 63,418,000 acres. Of the remainder (13,221,062 acres) over 3,000,000 acres were woods and plantations.

NOTE.—When the yield of wheat per acre differed from the average for the 30 years 1892-1921 by less than one-tenth of a bushel, the year has been noted as "Average." When the difference was between 0.1 and 0.5 bushel, the year has been noted as "Slightly above (or below) Average"; when between 0.5 and 1.5 bushels, as "Decidedly above Average" or "Deficient"; when between 1.5 and 2.5 bushels, as "Good" or "Bad"; when between 2.5 and 3.5 bushels, as "Very good" or "Very bad"; and when above 3.5 bushels, as "Extremely good" or "Extremely bad."

Fisheries.

The quantities and values of the fish landed in the United Kingdom in 1920 (exclusive of river salmon) are shown in the following table. The catch in 1920 was nearly double that of 1918, and the 1920 catch showed a further improvement, exceeding the 1919 quantity by 225,000 tons. In 1920, however, the catch was still below that of the years immediately before the War, and, compared with the maximum year (1913), it was less by about 150,000 tons.

The quantity (1920) and value (1920) of the principal minerals won are shown in the following table. The total value (at the mines and quarries) of all minerals won in 1914 was £145,163,032 and in 1919 the value had increased to £233,673,503. The total number of persons employed in 1920 at the 3,273 mines in work was 1,337,297, and in 1918 807,086 (males) were employed underground, and 210,841 males and 11,761 females above ground. In the 4,362 quarries, 43,215 persons were permanently employed; of these, 27,917 (284 females) worked inside the quarries and 15,298 (548 females) outside the quarries.

Accidents in Mines and Quarries.

The total number of deaths caused by accidents at mines and quarries (except shallow quarries) during 1920 was 1,184, and in addition 122,061 persons suffered injuries disabling them for more than seven days. From the following statement it will be seen that an increased number of fatal and non-fatal accidents were reported in 1920 under the Quarries Act:—

	Number of persons employed in 1920.	Fatal Accidents		Non-Fatal Accidents
		Killed, 1920.	+ or - as compared with 1919	Injured, 1920.	+ or - as compared with 1919.

Total	1,337,297	1,184	- 45	122,061	+ 776

The number of deaths reported during 1920 under the Coal Mines Act and the Quarries Act was less than one per 1,000 persons employed at those mines and quarries (0.88 deaths per 1,000 persons employed at coal mines and 0.76 deaths per 1,000 persons employed at quarries). These are the lowest death-rates recorded. At metalliferous mines the deaths reported in 1920, though considerably fewer than in 1919—the year in which a disaster occurred at the Levant Mine in Cornwall causing 31 deaths—were 1.22 per 1,000 persons employed at the mines.

The World's Coal Output.

According to the Economic Review, the world's total output was estimated at 1,200,000,000 tons in 1923 and 1,000,000,000 tons in 1929. In 1923 the United States produced 500,000,000, or 42·4 per cent. of the total, and consumed 485,500,000 tons, or 40·5 per cent. In 1929 the American production was 490,300,000 tons, or 49 per cent. of the total, and consumption was 468,500,000 tons, or 46·8 per cent. The United Kingdom comes second with a 1923 production of 287,400,000 tons and a consumption of 209,300,000 tons, representing 24 and 21·4 per cent. of the total. In 1929 the production of the U.K. is given as 236,700,000 tons, or 23·7 per cent., and consumption as 197,600,000 tons, or 19·9 per cent. The only other country to produce more than 100,000,000 tons in either year was Germany, with 190,000,000 tons (15·8 per cent.) in 1923 and 168,700,000 tons (10·9 per cent.) in 1929, the latter figure excluding the Saar and Alsace-Lorraine. Consumption was 13 per cent. of the total in 1923 and 10·4 per cent. in 1929. France's output in 1923 was 40,800,000 tons, and her consumption 63,700,000 tons. In 1929, including the Saar and Alsace-Lorraine, production was 31,400,000 tons and consumption 43,900,000 tons.

In 1921 there was a stoppage of production on 28 days, ending in a settlement of the 'Coal Dispute' on June 28, 1921, the chief points in which were the introduction of a profit-sharing scheme, a standard wage of 20 per cent. above pre-War rate for the period of the agreement and wage reductions of 2s. per shift or July, 1922, 2s. 6d. for August, and 3s. for September. To enable the mine owners and miners to effect a settlement a Government subsidy of £20,000,000 was voted by the House of Commons on July 1, 1921.

Coal Exports of the U.K.

The value of coal, coke, and patent fuel exported in various years is shown below. Coal bunkered by ships in the foreign and coastwise trade (21,031,530 tons in 1923 and 12,021,222 tons in 1929) and Admiralty shipments of coal (34,500,000 tons in 1918) are not included in these figures. Before the War of 1914-1918 the value of the coal consumed by the ships of the Royal Navy was about £2,500,000 annually. Oil has taken the place of coal in most of the recently built ships.

Year	Tons.	Value
1913	73,400,118	53,659,660
1914	61,830,485	42,202,128
1915	45,770,344	38,824,223
1916	41,157,746	50,670,604
1917	37,800,705	51,341,427
1918	34,173,847	52,416,983
1919	35,249,568	92,297,685
1920	24,931,853	...

The F.O.B. value of the coal exported had risen from 38s. 1d. per ton in April, 1919, to 74s. 6d. per ton in March, 1920.

Iron Ore.

The production and importation of iron ore are as shown below. Values are not shown, as that of iron ore produced in the United Kingdom is taken at the place of production, while the value of imported ore is enhanced by transport and handling to the port of entry. The value of the iron ore produced in the United Kingdom in 1919 is stated at £7,428,366; that of the imported ore at £11,271,244, of which 3,524,794 tons (£7,667,618) came from Spain.

Year.	Tons Produced.	Tons Imported.
1914	14,867,582	5,704,748
1915	14,325,012	6,197,155
1916	13,494,668	6,933,767
1917	14,845,734	6,169,655
1918	14,613,012	6,581,728
1919	12,254,195	5,200,696

Pig Iron.

The quantity of ore smelted and pig iron made is shown below. In 1925 the quantity of coal used in the manufacture of pig iron was 29,555,555 tons; in 1918 the quantity was 2,606,840 tons of coal and 11,286,680 tons of coke. In 1925 there were 345 blast furnaces at work, and in 1918 they numbered 318.

Year.	Ore Smelted. (Tons)	Pig Iron Made. (Tons)
1913	25,707,518	20,260,325
1917	22,901,714	9,338,104
1918	22,544,064	9,107,384
1919	7,398,000
1920	8,007,900

The production of steel ingots and castings amounted in 1919 to 7,894,000 tons, and in 1920 to 9,056,800 tons.

World's Production of Wool 1915.

The classes of wool grown are divided into three groups, viz., merino wool for clothing, crossbred for clothing, and low wool (mainly used for carpets, rugs, etc.). The approximate proportion of these classes is 1,074,000,000 lb. merino, 1,000,000,000 lb. crossbred, and 700,000,000 lb. low wool.

The British Empire produced 63 per cent. of all merino wool grown, 40 per cent. of all crossbred, and 9 per cent. of carpet wools, 40 per cent. of the last-named being produced by Russia. The imports of wool and the exports of woollen and worsted manufactures are shown under "External Trade of the U.K.," post.

Textiles Industries of U.K.

The cotton and woollen industries of Great Britain are centred on the coalfields; the linen industry is centred mainly at Belfast and Dundee. Leicester, Nottingham and Derby are the chief seats of the hosiery manufactures, and Nottingham, Derby and Kilmarnock of the lace industry. The cotton industry depends entirely upon imports, and consumed over 750,000,000 lb. of imported cotton in 1918; the woollen industry consumed about 330,000,000 lb. of wool, of which about one-third was produced in the United Kingdom; the linen industry consumed about 80,000,000 lb. of flax, of which almost one-half was home grown. The total value of the textiles produced is not stated, but the quantities and values of those exported are shown under "External Trade of the U.K.," post.

Shipbuilding and Engineering.

The Metal Industries are next in importance to textiles. Engineering and metal-working centres are, generally speaking, in the neighbourhood of the coalfields, particularly on the N.E. coast at Barrow-in-Furness, and at Sheffield, London, Crewe, Swindon, Derby, Southampton, Birmingham and Coventry in England; on the Clyde in Scotland; and in Belfast, Ireland. On Jan. 1, 1919, the gross tonnage of all ships building in the world's shipyards (exclusive of Germany, for which country complete statistics are not available) amounted to 7,179,778 tons, as under:—

	U.K.	Other Countries.	Total.
Steamships	3,474,855	3,180,851	6,655,706
Motor ships	287,010	287,408	574,418
Sailing ships.....	7,051	60,519	67,570
Total	3,768,916	3,470,868	7,179,778

The gross tonnage in hand at the yards of the principal countries on Jan. 1, 1919, is shown in the following table:—

	No.	Gross tonnage.
United Kingdom	981	3,768,916
United States	235	1,320,328
Netherlands	174	490,964
France	104	397,969
Italy	159	363,764
Japan	59	248,513
British Dominions	74	286,655
Sweden	64	222,576
Denmark	57	221,579
Spain	27	80,340
Norway	59	85,000
China	20	53,864

One hundred and sixty-nine steamers and motor vessels, each of over 1,000 tons, with a total tonnage of 1,169,003 tons, are building for the carriage of oil in bulk.

Other Industries.

The Leather Industry is important at Bristol, Leicester, Northampton, and Nottingham; Earthen and China Wares in "the Pottery District" on the South Staffordshire coalfields, where there are supplies also of coarse clay and ironstone, the "China Clay" (kaolin) being brought from Cornwall or imported from abroad; Paper-making (which also absorbs China Clay), Printing, and Brewing are also of general importance, and Distilling is a considerable industry in Scotland and Ireland.

Joint Stock Companies.

On Dec. 31, 1920, there were registered in the United Kingdom 79,541 Joint Stock Companies, with a total paid up capital of £3,508,012,486; in 1920 the number of companies registered during the year was 11,011 with share capital of £593,189,032.

Building Societies.

In 1919 there were 1,315 Incorporated Building Societies in the United Kingdom, with liabilities on shares £54,900,928, to depositors, etc., £15,868,245, a total liability of £70,769,167; the assets consisted of mortgage securities, £56,323,135, and other assets, £18,835,822, showing a balance of undivided profits and reserve funds of £4,380,780; there were also 44 unincorporated societies in England and 1 in Scotland.

Trade Union Membership.

The International Labour Office stated in March, 1921, that the number of Trade Unionists in the twenty leading countries of the world was 32,680,000 at the end of 1920, Germany having the largest number (9,000,000), and the U.K. 8,024,000, the smallest number being 20,000 in Serbia.

Returns for 1919 furnished to the Registrar of Friendly Societies relating to 608 Trade Unions in the United Kingdom show that at the end of the year the total membership was 6,628,663, an increase in twelve months of 236,203. The aggregate income of the Unions was £9,664,922 (against £7,150,644 in 1918), of which £8,541,400 was contributed by members, the expenditure being as under in 1918 and 1919:—

BENEFITS—	1918.	1919.
Unemployed, travelling, and emigration	£48,411	£595,625
Gratuities	32,127	2,255,577
Sick and accident	67,928	697,000
Funeral	372,025	322,773
Others (including superannuation) ..	506,600	705,613
Political fund payments	133,126	122,200
Grants to other societies	200,000	600,000
Management and other expenses ..	2,225,200	2,027,766

At the end of 1919 the total funds amounted to £15,993,811, an increase for the year of £978,337. The principal unions are contained in the List of Societies, pp. 358-362.

Industrial and Provident Societies.

In 1919 there were 3,119 Societies making returns to the Registrar of Friendly Societies, with 4,391,370 members, share capital, £73,307,708, liabilities, £44,992,000, and assets to the value of £38,305,000.

Unemployment Insurance.

The Minister for Labour (Dr. Macnamara) in moving the second reading of the Unemployment Insurance Bill, stated that it was proposed to raise the rates of contribution and reduce the unemployment benefit to 15s. a week for men and 12s. a week for women, at the same time providing an additional period during which benefit will be paid during the next twelve months. The Act which was passed in March, 1921, was based on the assumption that throughout the period to July, 1922, there would be a weekly average of 1,000,000 workers unemployed, and that the fund would pay out weekly an average sum of £800,000. For this purpose the Government were borrowing to the extent of £16,000,000, with power to go to £20,000,000, and that would cost the fund £1,000,000 in interest. Under the Act of 1919 the benefit for men and women was 11s. a week for fifteen weeks. At that time the cost of living was 164 per cent. above the pre-War rate. Under the Act of 1920 the benefits were 15s. for men and 12s. a week for women for fifteen weeks. During the operation of that Act the cost of living ranged from 151 per cent. to 176 per cent. over pre-War rates. When the same rates of benefit were reintroduced the cost of living would be round about 120 per cent. over the pre-War cost, and the unemployment benefit would be extended to about twice as many weeks.

Assuming that there was an average of 1,250,000 insured persons unemployed weekly until the end of July 1922, the balance-sheet for the year 1921-22 would be, approximately, as follows:

INCOME.

Employed contributions.....	£13,750,000
Employers' contributions	15,800,000
State contributions	7,300,000

Total £36,850,000

EXPENDITURE.

Benefit paid.....	£46,300,000
Interest on debt	750,000
Administrative expenses.....	3,900,000

Total £50,950,000

On Oct. 20, 1921 the Prime Minister explained the steps to be taken to cope with unemployment in the acute stage then reached. He stated that, whatever the Government might do in the way of palliatives, the cure for the unemployment of 1,750,000 workers, with a percentage in the metal trades running up to 17 per cent., was a slow, steady, continuous trade recovery. No one, he said, wanted a short boom; that could only be followed by another precipitate fall. The Government's plans may be set forth as follows:

To Stimulate Export Trade.

Extension of the export credits scheme to all countries.

Loan guarantees up to £25,000,000.

Development of Dominion and Colonial resources.

Relief of Unemployment.

For road schemes, land drainage, forestry, &c.—£10,000,000.

Increased insurance benefits for dependants, based on a compulsory levy.

Loans to necessitous areas.

To settle more ex-Service men in the Dominions—£300,000.

COST OF COAL DISPUTE.

THE charges falling on the Exchequer as a result of the measures taken by the Government in connexion with the coal stoppage were approximately:

Defence Force, Army Reserve, and additional expenditure on the Regular Army	£7,000,000
Navy	1,225,000
Air Force	330,000
Civil Emergency Organisation	300,000
Coal Industry Subsidy	10,000,000

Total..... £18,855,000

In addition there may be a further charge in respect of losses arising out of coal purchase operations which could not be estimated at the conclusion of the stoppage with accuracy, and a further addition of at least £10,000,000 for indemnification of railway profits (under the government liability) caused by the coal stoppage and the general trade depression.

EXTERNAL TRADE OF THE UNITED KINGDOM (MERCHANDISE ONLY).

In statistics of Trade, the term GENERAL TRADE refers to the whole volume of Imports (including such as are temporarily detained and afterwards exported), and to the whole volume of Exports. The term SPECIAL TRADE includes only Imports for consumption in the country receiving them, and Exports of home produce or manufacture. In the first of the following tables the General Trade is shown for the year 1913 and for each year since that pre-War period, and the Special Trade for a similar period, showing the "apparent" balance of Imports over Exports. Subsequent tables show the various quantities and values of the merchandise exchanged.

The balance of Imports over Exports is not the true balance on account of the system of valuation in official returns, the Imports being taken at their CIF value (which includes the Cost of the merchandise and the charges for Insurance and Freight), whereas the Exports are taken at their FOB (free on board) value, which includes only the Cost of the merchandise delivered on the exporting ship. Such Exports have an added value by the time they reach their destination, having become loaded en route with Insurance and Freight. They leave the country with an FOB value and arrive at their destination with an acquired CIF value.

HOME AND FOREIGN TRADE.

IN 1921 the London Joint City and Midland Bank published figures of the tonnage of general merchandise and minerals carried on the railways of the U.K. From these figures it would appear that whereas during 1920 the tonnage of external trade, other than re-exports and coal, was only 80 per cent. of the total for 1913, the tonnage carried by the railways was practically the same as for the pre-War year, which would justify the conclusion that internal trade was more active in 1920 than in 1913. During the first half of 1921, however, conditions changed considerably, and as compared with the December quarter of 1920, the fall in railway freight traffic was very much greater than the fall in the tonnage of the external trade, omitting coal in each case. The following statement indicates that the general trade of the country during the June quarter of 1921 bore the same proportion to the 1913 level as did the tonnage figures of exports and retained imports.

TONNAGE OF GENERAL MERCHANDISE AND MINERALS OTHER THAN COAL, COKE, AND PATENT FUEL.

(000 omitted from tonnage figures.)

	Tonnage of exports	Tonnage carried and net imports, on railways of U.K.
1913	Quarterly average 17,330=100'0	35,778=100'0
1920	P.c. of 1913	P.c. of 1913
First quarter	11,890=68'6	36,648=102'4
Second quarter	14,049=81'1	36,132=101'0
Third quarter	15,019=86'7	36,412=101'8
Fourth quarter	13,549=78'2	32,925=92'0
1921	P.c. of 1913	P.c. of 1913
First quarter	20,190=115'8	28,223=78'9
Second quarter	8,949=51'6	18,428=51'3

An inference which may be drawn from the above comparison is that the decline in the tonnage of internal trade during 1921 was more rapid than the fall in the country's overseas trade, and that the tonnage of trade as a whole other than coal was only about half what it was in 1913.

TIMBER IMPORTS AND HOME PRODUCTION.

IN 1925 the estimated area of the forests and plantations (land planted with trees within the preceding 10 years) in the United Kingdom was 3,098,000 acres, of which 1,720,000 acres were in England, 128,000 acres in Wales, 880,000 acres in Scotland, and 360,000 acres in Ireland. Before the War of 1914-18 the United Kingdom imported annually about 10,000,000 tons of timber, valued at about £27,000,000. Of this total, over 85 per cent. consisted of light pine and fir from Russia, Sweden, Norway and Canada. There are in the United Kingdom over 10,000,000 acres of waste land, and about 12,000,000 acres of mountain and heath land, used for light grazing. It is estimated that less than one-third of this total of 22,000,000 acres, if put under trees which can be grown in the country, would supply 95 per cent. of the total requirements, leaving only 5 per cent. (timber which cannot be grown in the British Islands) to be imported from abroad. The Forestry Commissioners are in possession of 103,100 acres of land, of which 68,100 acres are classified as plantable. They are charged with the afforestation of 150,000 acres of new land by the State, and with assisting local authorities and private owners in the development of 120,000 acres during a ten-year period, and with other duties of education research and experiment, &c. A fund of £3,500,000 has been voted by Parliament for the above purposes.

Volume of International Trade.

The Japan Weekly Chronicle published in 1921 a comparative table showing how the quantities of imports and exports of various countries in 1920 compare with the quantities recorded in 1913. Taking the 1913 figure in each case as 100, the table reads as follows:—

Comparison of 1920 with 1913.

In the quantity of imports only Japan and the United States show a higher figure in 1920 than in 1913, while Canada and the United States alone have increased the volume of exports.

Values of British Trade.

The relative value of British Trade in 1913, 1919, and 1920, is shown on page 516, the apparent value of the trade of 1919 and 1920 being reduced to the prices ruling in 1913.

Imports and Exports of Bullion 1920.

During the twelve months ending Dec. 31 the aggregate value of the gold and silver exported was £104,052,403, and of that imported £60,601,317, an adverse balance of £43,457,086. Of the exported gold and silver bullion and coin, more than half (£53,066,149) went to the United States; £27,464,136 to India, £5,736,355 to South American States, £5,081,095 to China, £4,120,061 to South Africa, £3,727,679 to the Straits Settlements, £750,308 to Switzerland, and £612,615 to France. Of the total imports of coin and bullion, £19,148,329 came from Foreign Countries and £21,452,988 from the British Dominions.

Oil Fuel and Coal Exports.

The growing use of oil for ship propulsion is illustrated by the following figures taken from Lloyd's Annual Report for 1920-1921:—

On Lloyd's Register	Gross Tonnage.
1914, July	1,300,000
1919, "	5,300,000
1920, "	9,400,000
1921, "	12,800,000

Steamers burning oil fuel in 1920-21 would have required 20,000,000 tons of coal if coal-fired.

COMMUNICATIONS.

Roads.

The total mileage of public roads in the United Kingdom is approximately 240,000 miles, of which 150,000 are in England and Wales, 26,000 in Scotland, and 60,000 in Ireland. The annual cost of maintenance is about £25,000,000.

The maintenance and repair of bridges and main roads is within the jurisdiction of the County Authorities in each Division of the United Kingdom, other roads being maintained by Borough, Urban, Rural, and Parish Councils. The increase of motor traction and the consequent use of highways by other than county or district residents has led to a movement in favour of the nationalisation of the highways. The special sum set aside for the year ending March 31, 1920, for the road and bridge programme of the Road Improvement Fund amounted to £10,536,000, of which £8,250,000 was a grant from the Treasury, and £2,286,000 a contribution from the Road Improvement Fund. Under the Act of 1919 the functions and duties of the Road Board were transferred to the Ministry of Transport, which now controls all matters previously dealt with by the Road Board.

Railways.

At Dec. 31, 1920, the aggregate capital expenditure of the companies amounted to £1,158,700,000 of which £1,015,500,000 had been expended on the railways, £52,900,000 on docks and harbours; £42,400,000 on land, property, &c., not forming part of the railways or stations, £8,300,000 on canals, £8,200,000 on steamboats, and £8,000,000 on hotels. The total length of single track, including sidings, at the same date, was 51,248 miles.

Calculated on a single-journey basis, the total number of passengers carried, exclusive of season-ticket holders, in 1920, was 1,566,834,000, against 1,507,217,000 in 1919, and 1,184,196,000 in 1913. Season-ticket holders (calculated on an annual basis) numbered 1,015,000, compared with 903,200 in 1919, and 584,000 in the pre-war year. The totals for the various classes of ordinary passengers in 1913 and 1920 were:—

	Total Number.
	1913.	1920.
First Class	25,432,000	36,918,000

Workmen	255,642,000	458,486,000
Total	1,184,196,000	1,566,834,000

The goods traffic carried in 1913 and 1920 was as under:—

	Total Tonnage
	1913.	1920.
General Merchandise...	67,744,000	68,652,500
Coal, Coke, and Patent Fuel	225,554,000	181,156,000
Other Minerals...	70,864,500	68,053,000
Total	364,162,500	317,861,500

The number of Live Stock carried in 1913 was 19,526,500 and in 1920 17,079,000.

The effect of higher fares and rates is seen in the average receipts per passenger and per ton of goods carried in two years:—

	1913.	1920
Ordinary passengers:	s. d.	s. d.

Coal, Coke and Patent Fuel	2 0'2	3 10'6
Other Minerals.....	2 6'1	5 4'3

Receipts (including Government compensation) and expenditure in the years 1913 and 1920 were as under:—

	1913.	1920.
Total Receipts	£ 129,700,000	£ 297,800,000
Total Expenditure	83,500,000	250,800,000

Total net income.....	3,000,000	4,300,000
	49,800,000	51,300,000

The pre-War receipts were:—Passengers, £44,000,000; Parcels and Goods, £78,000,000; Other Sources, £13,000,000; total, £135,000,000; and under the rating scheme proposed in 1921 the receipts were estimated at:—Passengers, £105,000,000; Parcels and Goods, £168,000,000; Other Sources, £25,000,000; total, £298,000,000.

Canals.

There are 4,673 miles of canals and canalised rivers in the United Kingdom (England and Wales, 3,641 miles; Ireland, 848 miles; Scotland, 184 miles), no additions to the mileage having been made for several years. In 1905 the inland waterways carried 43,161,227 tons of merchandise, the revenue being £2,680,710 and expenditure £1,821,212. Of the total mileage 1,363 miles were owned or controlled by railway companies (the longest systems being the Shropshire Union, 202 miles; Grand Junction, 129 miles; Birmingham, 159 miles; and Leeds and Liverpool, 145 miles). The total paid-up capital of all the canals was £47,550,768. The existing system is at its greatest development in the midland counties of England, and in Lancashire and Yorkshire. A Royal Commission, appointed in 1906, reported, in 1909, in favour of a development scheme under an Inland Waterway Board, to improve the existing system. Their principal proposal was the formation of four main routes (from a centre in South Staffordshire) to the Thames (London), the Mersey (Liverpool), the Humber (Hull), and the Severn (Gloucester), the proposed routes to accommodate barges up to 200 tons. On Jan. 1, 1921, there were 1,202 miles of inland waterways in England and Wales, and 304 miles in Ireland, under the Canal Control Committee, appointed by the Government on March 1, 1917; there were also 1,025 miles controlled by the Railway Executive Committee. The Manchester Ship Canal, opened in 1894, has a total length of 36 miles, and connects Manchester with the Mersey port of Liverpool; in 1913 the tonnage carried through the canal was 3,780,261 tons, and in 1919 the tonnage was 3,589,043 tons.

Tramways.

The total mileage of tramways and light railways open in the United Kingdom on Dec. 31, 1919, was 2,728. The total receipts in 1919 were £24,632,206, the working expenses £27,751,277, and the net receipts £6,880,929, the total paid-up capital being £79,049,287, showing a return of £8 14s. 2d. per cent. on the capital. In 1919, 4,557,640,278 passengers were carried. In addition there were 21 miles of "trackless trolley" routes, a system which obviates the necessity of rails.

Mercantile Shipping.

On June 30, 1921, the Mercantile Marine of the United Kingdom consisted of 8,113 steamers (18,110,653 tons) and 448 sailing vessels (219,772 tons), a total of 8,561 vessels (18,330,424 tons). In 1914 there were 205,652 seamen employed in British sailing and steam vessels (exclusive of vessels employed on rivers and inland navigation, but inclusive of fishing vessels); of this total, 222,640 were British, and 21,616 were Lascars and Asiatics, and 21,306 were foreigners—Germans (8,000), Swedes (3,600), Norwegians (2,150), and Russians (2,000) being the most numerous of the foreign nationalities. In 1919 the foreigners numbered 16,835, and in 1920 the number of foreigners had been further reduced.

Wrecks.—In 1913 140 sailing vessels (23,082 net tons) and 108 steam vessels (103,824 net tons), a total of 248 vessels (126,906 net tons) were totally lost at sea. In 1918 the figures (exclusive of losses by enemy action) were 70 sailing vessels (8,971 gross tons) and 124 steam vessels (230,082 gross tons), a total of 194 vessels (239,053 gross tons). In 1913 the passengers lost by wrecks numbered 172 and members of crews 466, a total of 638 lives; in 1918 (exclusive of losses by enemy action) the passengers numbered 129 and the members of crews 575, a total of 734 lives.

Coastwise Shipping.

The net tonnage of all vessels with cargoes and in ballast engaged in the coasting trade of the United Kingdom in 1913 was 65,773,838 net tons for arrivals and 65,112,086 net tons for departures; in 1919 the net tonnage of arrivals was 40,878,243 and of departures 40,037,045 (exclusive of vessels employed by the Government during the War).

Posts, Telegraphs and Telephones.

The carriage and custody of the mails has been maintained by the State "from time immemorial." The telegraphs were transferred to the State on Feb. 4, 1870; the telephones on Jan. 1, 1912. The submarine telegraph cables connecting the British Isles with the various Dominions and Foreign Countries are maintained and worked by private companies.

In the year ending March 31, 1915, 2,400,000,000

* Exclusive of vessels employed by the Government during the War.

letters (74 per head of the population) were delivered in the United Kingdom, in addition to 886,000,000 post-cards, and 1,321,000,000 half-penny packets. There were (March 31, 1929) 98,946 miles of telegraph line (3,547,576 miles of wire), 13,921 telegraph offices, and 826,366 instruments in use. In 1918-19 77,493,000 inland and 11,220,000 foreign telegrams were transmitted. On March 31, 1929, there were 797,218 telephones in use, and 46,263,408 trunk calls were made. The receipts for inland telegrams in 1918-9 were £3,980,746, for foreign telegrams £758,000, miscellaneous receipts £2,535,418, and for telephones (including royalties) £10,760,540, a total of £17,054,724; the expenditure included £7,441,823 for salaries, wages and superannuation, and £11,109,866 for construction, maintenance, etc., a total of £18,551,689.

The number of telephones per 100 of population in the U.K., U.S.A., and certain other countries (1919), is shown below:—

U.S.A.	13·6	U.K.	2·0
Sweden	6·4	France	1·0
Norway (1917) ..	4·4	Italy (1917)	0·3
Germany (1914) ..	2·2

Savings Banks.—In 1918 there were 11,829,631 active deposit accounts in the Post Office Savings Banks, with the sum of £234,633,323 due to depositors, an average of £19 16s. for each active account. In 1919 there were 9,220,373 accounts open in the Trustee Savings Banks, with £71,918,367 due to depositors, an average of £32 7s. 10d. for each account. In 1918 Government Stock to the amount of £185,682,830 stood to the credit of depositors in the Post Office Savings Banks, £15,950,695 was held for depositors in Trustee Savings Banks (exclusive of Exchequer Bonds and National War Bonds), in 1919.

Wireless Telegraphy.—In 1909-1910 the wireless telegraph stations on the coasts of the United Kingdom were acquired by the Government, except the long-distance stations at Poldhu (Cornwall) and Clifden (County Galway), which are maintained (and worked under licence), by the Marconi Company.

The principal Radio-Telegraphic Services are as follows:—Trans-Atlantic. For Canada, the United States, British West Indies, Bermuda, British Guiana, Newfoundland, Australasia, New Zealand, Central and South America, etc. To Paris. For all parts of France. To Madrid. For all parts of Spain and the Balearic Isles, and for the Canary Islands. To Ships at Sea. (a) Via British Coastal Wireless Stations for ships within range (about 200 miles). (b) Via Devises, Wilts., for ships with range (about 1,000 miles) which are fitted with long range Marconi apparatus. (c) Via Poldhu, Cornwall, for all ships within range (about 1,500 miles). (d) Via Foreign Coastal Wireless Stations for ships within range. There are also services at reduced rates for Cross-Channel steamers, &c.

Radiotelegrams (i.e. to or from Ships).

Private messages are now accepted for H.M. Navy (no "ship charge" made in this case), as well as for merchant ships. Address should contain "British Warship" or "Steamship" respectively, name of vessel and of coast station. The Secretary, Admiralty, will furnish the latter for Navy ships, but P.O. is unable to assist choice of coast station for others, though the word "wireless" may generally be substituted for name of P.O. station, any of which will give all available information about a ship's position in reply to a reply-paid telegram (extra fee, 6d.). The P.O. coast stations are: (U.S.A.)—Falmouth, Grimsby, Land's End, Mull's Head, St. Ives, N.

Foreland, Portpatrick, Seaforth, Valentia, Wick. Rules as to counting of words, etc., are as for Telegrams Abroad; the names of ship and of coast station count as one word each.

Cost of transmission from any telegraph office.—A. Ordinary. 1. Through P.O. stations (a) to ships of British and most other nationalities: 11d. a word inclusive; (b) to Argentine, Belgian, Dutch, German, Greek, Norwegian, Portuguese ships: inland with coast-station charge (7d. a word), plus ship charge (6d. a word, with a minimum of 2s. 6d. per message). 2. Through coast stations abroad (on most coasts except U.S.A.): cost of full rate telegram to station (see table above), plus station charge (2d. to 1½d. a word, sometimes with minimum of 1s. 6d. to 2s. 6d.), plus ship charge (6d. a word, with minimum 2s. 6d. for ships of nationalities given under 1 (b)). B. Long-distance communication to ships beyond range of above stations: 1. via "Poldhu Radio" (which must appear in the address), at night only (Marconi Station, range 1,500 miles): inland and station charge 2s. 6d. a word inclusive, plus ship charge (same as in A. 2. via Government station at Devises (same range) to certain ocean liners (at present about 57, particulars at any telegraph office): 11d. a word inclusive. 3. via Barrington Passage (Canada) to those of the 57 liners engaged in N. Atlantic service, when beyond Devises range: 2s. 0½d. a word inclusive. C. Reduced rates for cross-Channel and short-voyage ships: 1. Through home stations the inclusive charge per word (minimum always 10 words) is: (a) to the majority of such ships (about 220), 3½d.; (b) 4 Zealand Co. boats (via N. Foreland), 3½d.; (c) to Batavier III, IV., and VI. (via do.), 3d.; (d) to 10 ships, 5½d. 2. Through foreign coast-stations for the same groups of vessels respectively: (a) the charge is calculated as under A. 1, but ship charge is reduced to 4d. per word (minimum 10d.); exceptions are: for 8 Dover-Ostend Packets, through Antwerp or Ostend, coast and ship charge is 2s. 6d., plus 2d. for each word after 10; for 20 cross-channel boats, the coast charge through Boulogne or Harve is 1½d. (b) and (c) through Scheveningen Haven the inclusive charge for 10 words or less is 3½d. per word, plus (b) 2s. 6d., (c) 2s. 8d.; for over 10 words, per word: (b) 8½d., (c) 7d. (d) as in A. 2, but ship charge is 1½d. per word (min. 1s. 2d.).

Communication by Air.

In 1929 a Trans-Atlantic Aerial Post was inaugurated by the successful flight of an aeroplane from St. John's, Newfoundland, to Clifden, Ireland; and by the voyage of H.M. Airship R 34 from Scotland to New York, and from New York to England. The Air Mail Services now in operation are shown on p. 412.

The airships in the possession of the British Government were condemned to be sold in 1921, but subsequently the order was revoked. The largest airship yet constructed was the R 28, which was to have crossed the Atlantic and to have formed part of the U.S. squadron (under the name of ZR8). This vessel was wrecked while over the Humber (Aug. 24, 1921) with the loss of 44 lives. The remaining British airships are as follows:—

R 33	...	cubic feet of gas	1,955,000
R 80	...	"	1,200,000
R 36	...	"	2,101,000
R 37	...	"	2,101,000
Z 64*	...	"	1,950,000
L 71*	...	"	2,400,000

The L 64 is 642 feet long, the L 71 is 743 feet long; the R 36 has a capacity of 2,700,000 cubic feet and was 695 feet in length.

It is estimated that, assuming the ground organisation to be complete and a regular service established, the times by airship for the following journeys would be:—

England-Egypt.....	2½ days.
England-Karachi (India).....	5
England-Johannesburg (S. Africa).....	7
England-Perth (W. Australia).....	10½

* Standard Zeppelin airships.

THE KINGDOM OF ENGLAND.

Position and Extent.—The Kingdom of England occupies the southern portion of the island of Great Britain and lies between $55^{\circ} 45'$ and $49^{\circ} 57' 30''$ N. latitude (from the mouth of the Tweed to the Lizard), and between $1^{\circ} 48'$ E. and $50^{\circ} 43'$ W. (from Lowestoft to Land's End). England is bounded on the north by the summit of the Cheviot Hills, which form a natural boundary with the Kingdom of Scotland; on the south by the English Channel; on the east by the Straits of Dover (Pas de Calais) and the North Sea; and on the west by the Atlantic Ocean (which washes the Cornish coast), the Principality of Wales and the Irish Sea. The total area of the kingdom is 50,851 square miles, the population numbering 35,678,530 at the Census of 1921 (an increase of 1,633,840 over the figures of the 1911 census).

Relief.—There is a natural orographic division of England into the hilly districts of the north, west and south-west, and the undulating downs and low-lying plains of the east and south-east. In the extreme north the Cheviot Hills run from east to west and divide England from Scotland, culminating in the Cheviot, 2,676 feet above mean sea level. Divided from the Cheviots by the Tyne Gap is the Pennine Chain, running N. by W. to S. by E., with their highest point in Cross Fell, 2,930 feet above mean sea level. West of the Pennines are the Cumbrian Mountains, which contain in Scafell Pike (3,200 feet) the highest land in England, and east of the Pennines are the Yorkshire Moors, their highest point being Urre Moor (1,489 feet). South of the Pennines there are heights above 2,000 feet in the Peak of Derbyshire (highest point 2,888 feet), and in Dartmoor (High Willhays, 2,039 feet). In the western county of Shropshire are the isolated Wrekin (1,325 feet), Long Mynd (1,674 feet), and Brown Clee (1,803 feet); in Herefordshire the Black Mountain reaches 2,320 feet, in Worcestershire the Malvern Hills reach 1,395 feet, in western Monmouthshire are the Sugar Loaf (1,655 feet) and Colty (1,905 feet), and the Cotteswold (or Cotswold) Hills of Gloucestershire contain Cleve Cloud (1,124 feet).

Hydrography.—The Thames is the longest and most important river of England, with a total length of 220 miles from its source in the Cotteswold Hills to its outflow into the North Sea. The lower river is navigable by ocean-going steamers to London Bridge, and small craft reach Lechlade, 160 miles from the mouth. The Thames is tidal to Teddington (60 miles from its mouth), and its upper stream is connected with the Severn by a canal at Lechlade; the Wilts and Bucks canal enters at Abingdon, and the Wye canal at Reading. The principal tributaries are the Cherwell, Lee, Kennet, Wey, Mole and Medway. The Thames forms county boundaries almost throughout its course, and on its banks are situated the capital of the British Empire; Windsor Castle, the home of the Sovereign; Eton College, the first of the public schools; and Oxford, the oldest university in the kingdom. The Severn is the longest river in Great Britain, rising in the north-eastern slopes of Plynlimon (Wales) and entering England in Shropshire, with a total length of 220 miles from its source to its outflow into the Bristol Channel, where it receives on the left the Bristol Avon, and on the right the Wye, its other tributaries being the Vyrnwy, Tern, Stour, Tems and Upper (or Warwickshire) Avon. The Severn is tidal below Gloucester, and a high bore or tidal wave sometimes reverses the flow as high as Tewkesbury (13½ miles above Gloucester). The scenery of the greater part of the river is very picturesque and beautiful, and the Severn is a noted salmon river, some of its tributaries being famous for trout. Navigation is assisted by the Gloucester and Berkeley Ship Canal (16¼ miles), which admits vessels of 350 tons to Gloucester, other canals connecting with the Thames, Trent, Dee and Mersey. The Severn Tunnel, which carries the Great Western Railway under the river, 14 miles below the Sharpness Bridge, was begun in 1873 and completed in 1886 (at a cost of £2,000,000) after many difficulties from flooding, etc. The tunnel is 4 miles 644 yards in length (of which 2½ miles are under the river). Of the remaining English rivers those flowing into the North Sea are the Tyne, Wear, Tees, Ouse and Trent from the Pennine Range, the Great Ouse (160 miles) from the Central Plain, and the Orwell and Stour from the hills of East Anglia. Flowing into the English Channel are the Sussex Ouse from the Weald, the Itchen from the Wiltshire and Hampshire Hills, and the Axe, Teign, Dart, Tamar and Exe from the Devonian Hills; and flowing into the Irish Sea are the Mersey, Ribble and Eden from the western slopes of the Pennines and the Derwent from the Cumbrian Mountains. The English Lakes are noteworthy rather from their picturesque scenery and poetic associations than from their size. These lie mainly in Cumberland, but partly in Westmorland and Lancashire, the largest being Windermere (20 miles long), Ullswater and Derwentwater.

Islands.—The Scilly Islands form part of the county of Cornwall, and are distant 25 miles from Land's End. The group consists of about 40 islands, with a total area of about 4,000 acres, only St. Mary's, Treco, St. Martin's, St. Agnes and Bryher being inhabited, the total population in 1921 being 1,740. The capital is Hugh Town, in St. Mary's. The climate of the Scilly Islands is unusually mild, and vegetation is luxuriant, semi-tropical plants flourishing in the open. The Isle of Wight forms an administrative county and is separated from Hampshire by the Solent and Spithead. The total area is 147 sq. miles, with a population in 1921 of 94,697. The climate is mild and healthy, and many watering places have grown up during the last century. The capital is Newport, at the head of the estuary of the Medina, Cowes (at the mouth) being the chief port; other centres are Ryde, Sandown, Shanklin, Ventnor, Freshwater, Yarmouth, Totland Bay and Bembridge.

Climate.—The south-westerly winds from the Atlantic Ocean penetrate to the heart of the country, affecting the temperature of the greater part of the kingdom, and only the coastal regions of the east have a modified continental climate. The mean annual temperature is about 50° Fahrenheit, varying from 45° in the Scilly Islands to 48° at the mouth of the Tweed, and generally the west of England is mild and wet in winter and cool and less wet in summer, while the east is cool and dry in winter and spring and hot and less dry in summer and autumn, the wettest region being the Lake district of Cumberland and the driest in the Thames estuary and the Lincolnshire Wash.

EARLY INHABITANTS.

Prehistoric Man.—A skeleton found at Galley Hill, near Northfleet, Kent (in 1895), has been ascribed to a man of Central Asian race of the Early Stone Age, and stone implements of the remote Eolithic, Palaeolithic and Neolithic periods are abundantly found throughout England. The Neolithic period is held to have merged into the Bronze Age about 2500 B.C., and a date between these years has been given to Stonehenge (presented by Sir C. H. E. Chubb to the Nation in 1908, and now preserved as a national monument). Stonehenge (10 miles N. of Salisbury, Wiltshire) consists of two circles of menhirs (the largest monolith being 25½ feet in height), only 16 remaining in position in the outer circle, while two of the five triple sets are still in position in the inner circle. The use for which the temple or monument was erected is the subject of many conjectures.

The Celtic Invasion.—In the latter part of the Bronze Age the Goidels, a people of Celtic race, and in the Iron Age another Celtic race of Drythons, invaded the country and brought with them Celtic civilization and dialects, place names in England bearing witness to the spread of the invasion over the whole kingdom.

The Roman Conquest.—Julius Cæsar raided Britain in 55 B.C. and 54 B.C., and in 43 A.D. the conquest of the country was undertaken by the Roman Emperor Claudius, who sent Aulus Plautius with a well-equipped army of 40,000 men, and himself visited Colchester (Camulodunum) and Londinium. The British leader from 48–51 A.D. was Caratacus (strictly Caratacus), who was finally captured and sent to Rome. By 70 A.D. the conquest of South Britain was completed, a great revolt under Boudicca (strictly Boudica), Queen of the Iceni (Norfolk), being crushed in 61 A.D. In 122 A.D. the Emperor Hadrian visited Britain and built a continuous rampart, known as Hadrian's Wall, from Wallend to Bowness (Tyne to Solway), remains of which are still traceable. The Romans administered Britain as a Province under a Governor, with a well defined system of local government, each Roman municipality ruling itself and the surrounding territory. Colchester, Lincoln, York, Gloucester and St. Albans stand on the sites of five Roman municipalities, while London was the centre of the road system and the seat of the financial officials of the Province of Britain. A well preserved Roman town of about 100 acres was first uncovered in the 18th century at Silchester (Calleva Atrebatum), 10 miles south of Reading, and since 1890 the whole site has been investigated. Four main groups of roads radiated from London, and a fifth (the Fosse) ran obliquely from Ermine Street (at Lincoln), through Leicester, Cirencester and Bath to Exeter. Of the four groups radiating from London one ran S.E. to Canterbury and the coast of Kent, a second to Silchester and thence to parts of Western Britain and South Wales, a third (now known as Watling Street) ran through Verulamium (St. Albans) to Chester, with various branches, and the fourth reached Colchester, Lincoln, York and the eastern counties. Christianity reached the Roman Province of Britain from Gaul in the 3rd century (or possibly earlier), the Bishops of Londinium, Eboracum (York), and Lindum (Lincoln) attending the Council of Arles in 314. The Roman garrisons of Britain were much harassed in the 4th century by Saxon pirates, who invaded the eastern counties from the Wash to Spithead, while about 350 A.D. incursions in the north of Irish (Scotti) and Picts became most formidable, and towards the end of the century many troops were removed from Britain for service in other parts of the Roman Empire. Early in the 5th century Gaul was taken from the Romans by Teutonic invaders, and Britain was cut off from Rome; officials were no longer sent to the island, the garrison was left to defend itself, and appears to have been driven inland by the Northern and Saxon invaders, and to have been conquered and absorbed by the Celtic inhabitants, whose language and customs re-emerged.

Anglo-Saxons and Normans.—The Celtic Britons appear to have called in the Saxons to resist the raids of the Picts and Scots, and eventually the English (Angles, Saxons and Jutes) drove the Britons into the mountain fastnesses of the West (Strathclyde, Wales and Cornwall), the name of Welch (old English Waelisc = Foreign) being given to the islanders by the invaders from the continent. The area thus conquered was divided into several kingdoms, of which the chief were Northumbria (Bernicia and Deira), Mercia (Middle Angles), and Wessex. The heathen Angli (whose gods Ti, Woden, Thunor and Frigg are commemorated in "Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday") were converted to Christianity by a mission under Augustine (dispatched by Pope Gregory in 597), which established Archbishoprics at Canterbury and York, and the whole of England appears to have been converted by the end of the 7th century. In the 8th century Offa, King of Mercia, is stated to have built a wall and rampart, afterwards known as Offa's Dike, from the mouth of the Dee to that of the Wye, as a protection against the Welch. The greatest of the English kingdoms was Wessex, with its capital at Winchester, and the greatest of the Wessex kings was Alfred the Great (871–901), who resisted the incursions of the Northmen (Danes) and fixed a limit to their advance by the Treaty of Wedmore (876). In the 10th century the Kings of Wessex recovered the whole of England from the Danes, but subsequent rulers were unable to resist the invaders, and England paid tribute (Danegelt) for many years, and was ruled by Danish Kings from 1016 to 1042, when Edward the Confessor was recalled from exile. In 1066 Harold (brother-in-law of Edward and son of Earl Godwin of Wessex) was chosen King of England, but after defeating a Northumbrian revolt under his brother Tostig (aided by an invading army of Harold Hadrada of Norway) at Stamford Bridge in Yorkshire (Sept. 25), he was himself defeated at the Battle of Hastings (or Sautlache) on Oct. 14, 1066, and the Norman Conquest secured the throne of England for Duke William of Normandy. Since the Norman Conquest all attempts to invade England have been defeated.

ENGLISH COUNTIES.

For Administrative purposes England is divided into 32 Administrative Counties (under the Local Government Act of 1888). The boundaries of these Administrative Counties differ in many cases from those of the older Geographical Counties, while the areas of the 73 County Boroughs created under the Act of 1888 are excluded from the County Areas, and the population of the Boroughs is separately enumerated. The area, population and chief officers of the Administrative Counties are shown overleaf.

THE PRINCIPAL ENGLISH CITIES.

LONDON.

LONDON, the capital of England and of the British Empire, and the greatest city in the world, is situated on both banks of the River Thames, 30 miles from its outflow into the North Sea. The various areas of London, with the population of each (according to the Census of 1911), are shown below.

Area	Area, 1911.	Population, 1911.
County of London	74,816	4,483,249
City of London	675	13,706
London Police Districts ...	443,444	7,476,168
Proposed "London Health Area"	3,045,120	9,610,334

The City of London (see pp. 565-6) administers London within its ancient boundaries, where the Saxon Port Reeve became Bailiff in 1066, Mayor in 1191, and Lord Mayor in 1354. The City is the financial and business centre of London, and includes the head offices of the principal English banks, insurance companies, and mercantile houses, in addition to buildings ranging from the historic interest of the Roman Wall, the Norman Tower and the 14th century Guildhall, to the massive splendour of St. Paul's, and the architectural beauty of Wren's spires (Bow Church, St. Bride's, St. Dunstan's in the East, etc.), for which (and for other City buildings) see pp. 573 et seq.

The City of Westminster, which is bounded by the City of London on the east, by Chelsea and Kensington on the west, by Paddington, St. Marylebone and Holborn on the north, and by the Thames and Chelsea on the south, was formed into a borough by the London Government Act of 1869, and was created a city by Royal Charter of Oct. 19, 1900, the Council consisting of a Mayor, 10 Aldermen and 60 Councillors. Extending from the eastern end of the Strand to Kensington Gardens, and from Oxford-street to the Thames, it includes within its boundaries a large number of the finest buildings in London. The Abbey and the Roman Catholic Cathedral, the Houses of Parliament and the Law Courts, Buckingham Palace and St. James's, and the principal Government offices, Clubs and Theatres are situated in Westminster, which also includes the fashionable residential districts of Mayfair and Belgravia, the chief buildings being described on pp. 573-584. Westminster is the richest of the London areas, the rateable value of property being £7,087,831 in 1900, the product of each rd. in the £ being £28.92.

Metropolitan Boroughs.—Under the London Government Act of 1899 the administrative functions of the various vestries in the Metropolitan districts surrounding the City of London were transferred to 28 Metropolitan Boroughs (see p. 584), of which one became afterwards the City of Westminster. The area covered by these boroughs extends northwards to include Stoke Newington, southwards to Wandsworth and Lewisham, eastwards to Woolwich, and westwards to Hammersmith.

London County Council.—For County purposes the affairs of London are administered by the London County Council (see pp. 566-572), which was created by the Local Government Act of 1888.

Miscellaneous Authorities.—The Poor Law is administered in the Metropolitan area by the Metropolitan Asylums Board (see p. 592), and by 31 Boards of Guardians; for Police purposes the administration is invested in the City Corporation as to the City Police (see p. 584) and in the Home Office as to the Metropolitan Police (see p. 584). The authority for the supply of water is the Metropolitan Water Board (see p. 599), while the River Thames is administered as to its tidal portion by the Port of London Authority (see p. 584) and above Teddington by the Thames Conservancy (see p. 570), the light-house and pilotage authority being Trinity House (see p. 574). The bridges (see p. 577) are maintained in the City of London by the Bridge House Estates Committee of the Corporation of the City, and in the remaining area by the London County Council. The lighting of London is carried out by private enterprise, and in some cases by the Borough Councils, while locomotion is provided by the London County Council as the Tramway authority, and by private enterprise as to underground or other railways and motor vehicles.

BIRMINGHAM.

BIRMINGHAM (Warwickshire), the chief centre of the hardware trade of the world, is 113 miles N.W. of London. The municipal area is 43,602 acres (about 68 square miles), with a population at the census of 1901 of 919,438.

The chief industries are brass working, jewellery and precious metals, iron, machinery, small arms and ammunition, railway rolling stock, glass making, electro plating, motor engineering, cycles and chemicals.

The principal buildings are the Town Hall, built in 1832-1850 on the lines of the Temple of Jupiter Stator at Rome, with a large hall (where the triennial musical festival is held); the Council House and Corporation Art Gallery and Museum (1876); the University (Aston Webb, 1909); the Central Library; the 13th century Church of St. Martin (rebuilt 1873); the Cathedral (formerly St. Philip's Church, built by Archer, a pupil of Wren's), the Roman Catholic Cathedral of St. Chad (Pugin), and the Wesleyan Central Hall. A memorial bust of Abraham Lincoln was unveiled in 1912. Birmingham was incorporated as a borough in 1836, and was created a city in 1889; it is governed by a Lord Mayor and City Council of 30 Aldermen and 90 Councillors. The city returns 12 members to Parliament. The origin of the name is obscure, as Bromwicham, "the home on the hill by the heath," is disputed. The city was a Saxon town, and William de Bermingham was Lord of the Manor in the early part of the 13th century.

Principal City Officers.

Rt. Hon. Lord Mayor (1912-13), David Davis.
Recorder, Sir Ryland Dent Adkins, K.C., M.P. (1900).
Stipendiary Magistrate, The Rt. Hon. Lord Ilkerton (1910).
Town Clerk, F. H. C. Wiltshire (1912).
Clerk of the Peace, Joseph James (1902).
Coroner, Isaac Bradley (1897).

LIVERPOOL.

LIVERPOOL (Lancashire), on the right bank of the river Mersey, 3 miles from the Atlantic and 201 miles N.W. of London, is one of the greatest trading centres of the world and the principal port in the United Kingdom for the Atlantic trade. The municipal area is 24,102 acres (which includes 2,823 acres in the bed of the river Mersey) (about 33 square miles, extending the head of the river), with a population at the census of 1901 of 454,111. The total registered housing of vessels on which dues were paid during 1919 was 23,628,751 tons, while the value of the sea-borne trade of the port was stated at £833,849,867 for 1919, and at £1,021,699,000 for 1920. The docks, on both sides of the river, have a linear quayside of about 37 miles, and the Gladstone dock will accommodate the largest vessels afloat. The dock authority is the Mersey Dock and Harbour Board. The chief import is cotton, those next in importance being grain, provisions, sugar, fruit, oil, timber and tobacco.

The principal buildings are St. George's Hall, erected 1828-1854, from the designs of Harvey Lonsdale Elmes, at a cost of £300,000, and regarded as the finest modern example of classical architecture; the Town Hall, erected 1754 from the designs of Wood; the Cathedral (in course of erection from the designs of Bodley and Gilbert Scott), which will be the largest ecclesiastical building in England; the Walker Fine Art Gallery; the University; the Royal Infirmary; the Municipal Offices; and the Custom House.

Liverpool was incorporated as a borough early in the 13th century and was created a city in 1880. The Corporation consists of a Lord Mayor and 22 Councillors. The City returns 12 members to Parliament. The name is believed to be derived from Norse words meaning the "Pool of the Slopes."

Principal City Officers.

Rt. Hon. Lord Mayor (1921-1922), Alderman Charles Henry Rutherford.
Recorder, Edward G. Hemmerde, K.C. (1909).
Police Magistrate, Stuart Deacon (1910).

MANCHESTER.

MANCHESTER (Lancashire), the centre of the world's cotton trade, is 18½ miles N.W. of London. The municipal area is 21,688 acres (about 34 square miles), the population at the census of 1921 being 730,551.

Manchester is the distributing centre of the cotton spinning and weaving of Lancashire for the whole world, and of butter and foodstuffs for the most densely populated part of England. It also contains large engineering and machinery works and factories of hats, clothing, india-rubber goods, chemicals, etc. The city is connected with the Mersey by the Manchester Ship Canal (opened in 1894), which has a total length of 35½ miles, a depth of 26 feet, and a minimum width at the bottom of 120 feet. The value of the sea-borne trade of the port is stated at £146,290,745 for 1919, and at £207,663,045 for 1920, the net tonnage of ships entered and cleared in 1919 being about 2,000,000 tons.

The principal buildings are the Town Hall, erected in 1777 from the designs of Alfred Waterhouse, R.A.; the Royal Exchange, built in 1869, enlarged at cost of £300,000 and reopened by the King, 1921; the Free Trade Hall, erected from the designs of Walters, in 1866, on the site of the "Peterloo Massacres" (Aug. 16, 1819) in St. Peter's Fields; the Art Gallery; the Whitworth Institute; the 17th century Chetham Library; the Rylands Library (1857), which includes the Althorp collection; the University (Owens College); and the 15th century Cathedral (formerly the parish church). Manchester is one of the principal centres of political, literary and scientific advancement, and the Gaiety Theatre (Miss Horniman) and the Halle Concerts have placed the city in the forefront of dramatic and musical development. The Manchester Guardian newspaper exercises a widespread influence throughout the English-speaking world.

The town received a charter of incorporation in 1838 and was created a city in 1853. The Lord Mayor presides over a Corporation of 35 Aldermen and 105 Councillors. Manchester returns 10 members to Parliament. The Celtic name of the city was Mancunium.

Principal City Officers.

Rt. Hon. Lord Mayor (1921-1922), Ernest Darwin Simon.
Recorder, Arthur Jacob Ashton, K.C. (1914).
Stipendiary Magistrate, Edgar Brierley (1902).
Town Clerk, Thomas Hudson (1910).
Clerk of the Peace, Francis Ogden (1890).

LEEDS.

LEEDS (Yorkshire, West Riding) is favourably situated in the coal and iron districts of England, 18½ miles N.N.W. of London, and is the centre of the woollen industry. The city has also the largest share of the leather trade of the United Kingdom, in addition to large flax, canvas and rope works, and factories of thread, linen, glass and earthenware, with metal casting, machinery and machine tools, steam engines, and other engineering works. Leeds is connected with the Mersey in the west by the Leeds and Liverpool Canal, with the Humber in the east by the Aire and Calder Navigation, and is an important railway centre.

The municipal area is 28,090 acres (nearly 44 square miles), the population at the census of 1921 being 458,320.

The principal buildings are the Town Hall (1828), the Royal Exchange (1872), the Philosophical Hall, the Art Gallery, the University and the Leeds Institute of Science, Art and Literature (1863). The Parish Church (St. Peter's) was rebuilt in 1840; the 17th century St. John's Church has a fine interior with a famous Renaissance screen; the 17th century Mill Hill Chapel was rebuilt in 1849.

Leeds was made a county borough in 1888, and was created a city in 1893. The Lord Mayor presides over a corporation of 17 Aldermen and 51 Councillors. The city returns 6 members to Parliament. The earliest forms of the name are Loidis or Ledes, the origin of which is obscure.

Principal City Officers.

Rt. Hon. Lord Mayor (1921-1922), Willie Hodgson.
Recorder, John Albert Compston, K.C. (1919).
Stipendiary Magistrate, Horace Marshall (1910).
Clerk of the Peace, Arthur Copson Peake (1896).
Town Clerk, Sir Robert Fox (1924).

SHEFFIELD.

SHEFFIELD (Yorkshire, West Riding), the chief centre of the heavy steel and cutlery trade, is situated in the extreme south of Yorkshire 19½ miles N.N.W. of London, at the junction of the Sheaf, Porter, Rivelin and Loxley with the river Don. The city has an area of 31,628 acres (about 37 square miles), with a population at the census of 1901 of 490,794. The principal industries are the manufacture of heavy steel (armour plates, rails, tyres, axles, engine castings, etc.), cutlery, and instruments, in addition to engines and general machinery, tanning, confectionery, bicycles, iron and brass founding, silver refining, brush making, and many other industries. Sheffield plate (silver rolled on other metals) made during the years 1742-1840, when electroplating superseded the process, is greatly prized by collectors.

The principal buildings are the 14th century Parish Church (St. Peter's), the Town Hall (1807), the Cutlers' Hall (1832), Corn Exchange, Market Hall, Museum, Mappin Art Gallery, Ruskin Museum and the University.

The Saxon town of Ewafeld was created a county borough in 1888 and a city in 1893, the Chief Magistrate becoming a Lord Mayor in 1897. The Corporation includes 16 Aldermen and 48 Councillors. Sheffield returns 7 members to Parliament.

Principal City Officers.

Rt. Hon. Lord Mayor (1901-1902), Alderman Charles Simpson.
Recorder, William James Waugh, K.C. (1915).
Master Cutler (1901-1902), Marmaduke Wardlow.
Town Clerk, William E. Hart (1913).
Clerk of the Peace, G. E. Smith.

BRISTOL.

BRISTOL (Gloucester and Somerset), astride the River Avon and within 8 miles of the estuary of the River Severn (Bristol Channel), is a city and seaport 110 miles W. of London, with a municipal area of 18,445 acres (29 square miles) and a population at the census of 1901 of 377,061.

The principal industries are shipbuilding, rope making, chocolate, sugar and tobacco factories, glass and earthenware, soap, leather and chemical works, breweries, and copper, lead and iron works. The harbour was constructed from the Rivers Avon and Frome in 1809 and extends from the Severn (Avonmouth) to the city. The net tonnage of ships entered in 1919 was 1,845,096 tons, and of those cleared 1,804,325 tons, the value of the seaborne trade being stated at £48,899,222 for 1918. The principal imports are grain, fruit, oils, ore, timber, hides, cattle and general merchandise, and the chief exports are machinery, manufactured oils, cotton goods, tin and salt.

The chief buildings, in addition to the 14th century Cathedral (rebuilt by Street 1868-1888), the 14th century Church of St. Mary, Redcliffe (described by Queen Elizabeth as "the fairest, goodliest and most famous parish church in England"), and the 15th century Temple Church, are Canynges' House, the Merchant Venturers' Almshouses, St. Peter's Hospital, the Council House, Guildhall, Exchange (erected from the designs of John Wood in 1743), Colston Hall, the University and Clifton College. The Clifton Suspension Bridge, with a span of 702 feet over the Avon, was projected by I. K. Brunel (the designer of the Great Eastern) in 1836, but was not completed until 1860.

Bristol was a Royal Borough before the Norman Conquest, and in 1809 its Chief Magistrate (Sir Herbert Ashman) became a Lord Mayor. The Corporation includes 23 Aldermen and 69 Councillors. The city returns 5 members to Parliament. The earliest form of the name are Brigstow and Bristow.

Principal City Officers.

Rt. Hon. Lord Mayor (1901-1902), E. H. Cook.
High Steward, His Grace the Duke of Beaufort, T.D.
Recorder, William Blake Odgers, K.C. (1912).
Sheriff, F. N. Cowlin.
Town Clerk, Edmund J. Taylor.

KINGSTON-UPON-HULL.

HULL (officially "Kingston-upon-Hull") is situated in the East Riding of Yorkshire, at the junction of the Hull with the Humber, 22 miles from the North Sea and 18½ miles N. of London. The municipal area is 9,359 acres (about 15 square miles), with a population of 287,013 at the census of 1901.

Hull is the principal seaport for shipping the manufactures of Yorkshire and Lancashire to Northern Europe, and among its principal imports are grain from Russia and America and timber from Scandinavia, in addition to iron, fish, butter (from Denmark and Siberia), and fruit. The net tonnage of the shipping entered and cleared in 1919 was upwards of 3,000,000 tons, the value of the seaborne trade of the port being stated at £148,023,115 for 1919, and at £172,951,919 for 1920.

The chief buildings, in addition to the Docks, are the Parish Church (Holy Trinity), 272 feet in length (the largest parish church in England), the Guildhall (1915), Exchange (1866), Chamber of Commerce, Corn Exchange, Market Hall, Custom House, Dock Offices, Royal Institution (1854), Wilberforce's House and Trinity House (1753).

The name of Wyke-upon-Hull was changed to Kingston-upon-Hull by Edward I. in the 13th century. The town was incorporated in 1596 and made a county borough in 1888. The Corporation consists of a Lord Mayor, 16 Aldermen and 48 Councillors. Hull returns 4 members to Parliament.

Principal City Officers.

High Steward, Rt. Hon. T. R. Fereens, P.C.
Rt. Hon. Lord Mayor (1901-02), G. F. Wokes.
Recorder, Henry Thomas Kemp, K.C. (1917).
Sheriff, T. McLeod.
Town Clerk, H. A. Learoyd, M.A.
Coroner, Col. Alfred Thorneycroft.

BRADFORD.]

BRADFORD (Yorkshire, West Riding), 192 miles N.N.W. of London and 8 miles W. of Leeds, in the coal and iron district, is the centre of the woollen and worsted trade. The city is connected with the Mersey in the west and with the Humber in the east by canals, and is an important railway centre. The municipal area is 22,979 acres (about 36 square miles), with a population at the 1901 census of 285,979. A proposed extension of the City boundaries would increase the area to 30,612 acres; and the population to 330,337.

The principal textile industries are worsteds, woollens, silks and cottons, and there are also important engineering and iron works, and quarries of freestone.

The chief buildings, in addition to the 13th century Cathedral (formerly the Parish Church), are the Town Hall (1873), Exchange (1867), Cartwright Memorial Hall (1904), commemorating the inventor of the power loom, Temperance Hall (1867), Grammar School, Technical College (1880), and the Mechanics' Institute (1864).

The Saxon township was created a parliamentary borough in 1832, a county borough in 1888, and a city in 1907. The Corporation consists of a Lord Mayor, 21 Aldermen and 63 Councillors. Bradford returns 4 members to Parliament.

Principal City Officers.

Rt. Hon. Lord Mayor (1921-1922), Thomas Blythe. Recorder, Thomas Rowland Drake Wright (1905). Stipendiary Magistrate, Beaumont Morice (1914). Town Clerk, N. L. Fleming (1920).

NEWCASTLE-UPON-TYNE.

NEWCASTLE-UPON-TYNE (Northumberland), on the north bank of the Tyne estuary, 8 miles from the North Sea and 272 miles N. of London, has an area of 8,432 acres (32 square miles) and a population of 274,955 at the Census of 1921.

The city is conveniently placed on the estuary, in the neighbourhood of the Northumberland and Durham coalfields. Its exports include coal, chemicals, pig iron, iron and steel manufactures and machinery; the chief imports being wheat and grain, fruits, iron, iron ore and steel, petroleum, sulphur ore, timber and wood, and potatoes. The net tonnage of ships entered in 1920 was 3,913,322 tons, and of those cleared was 5,043,375 tons. The chief industries are shipbuilding, metal works and machinery, chemicals, glass, brick, tile and earthenware, and rope making.

The principal buildings are the (11th century) "New" Castle, of which the walls, keep and chapel are well preserved, the Cathedral (St. Nicholas), St. Andrew's Church (11th century), St. John's (14th century), St. George Jesmond, the Roman Catholic Cathedral of Hexham and Newcastle, the Corporation Buildings, Guildhall (1648), Moot Hall (1810), Exchange (1860), Central Newaroom and Art Gallery (1838), Wood Memorial Hall (1870) and the Custom House. The city is connected with the south bank of the Tyne by four bridges, of which the old High Level Bridge (1849) was designed by Robert Stephenson and carries the railway and roadway; the new High Level Bridge (1906) carries the railway only.

The pre-Norman borough of Monkchester was re-named Newcastle in the 11th century when the castle was erected as a defence against the Scots. In 1400 it was made a county borough, and in 1899 was incorporated. The City Corporation now includes a Lord Mayor (1906), 29 Aldermen and 57 Councillors. Newcastle-upon-Tyne returns 4 members to Parliament.

Principal City Officers.

Rt. Hon. Lord Mayor (1921-1922), Richard Henry Millican. Recorder, Llewellyn Arthur Atherley Jones, K.C., M.P. (1906). Sheriff, Anthony Oates. Town Clerk and Clerk of the Peace, Arthur Maule Oliver (1907).

NOTTINGHAM.

NOTTINGHAM (Nottinghamshire), the principal manufacturing centre of hosiery and lace, stands on the left bank of the Trent, where the tributary stream Leen enters the river, 125 miles N.N.W. of London. The municipal area is 20,935 acres (27 square miles), and includes an open market-place of 5½ acres in the centre of the city, with a population at the Census of 1921 of 226,621.

The city is connected with the North Sea and the Atlantic by the river Trent and canals and is an important railway centre. The principal industries are cotton, silk and merino hosiery, lace, bleaching, dyeing and spinning, tanning, engineering and cycle works, brewing, and the manufacture of tobacco, &c.

The chief buildings are the 11th century Nottingham Castle (restored in 1878), and now the City Museum and Gallery of Art, St. Mary's, St. Peter's, and St. Nicholas's Churches, the Roman Catholic Cathedral (Pugin, 1842-4), the Guildhall and Sessions Court (1837), Shire Hall, Albert Hall, Exchange, University College, Hospital and Eye Infirmary.

Snotengaham or Notingeham (the "town of the Caver") possesses a Charter of Henry II., and was created a city in 1897. The Corporation comprises a Mayor, 26 Aldermen and 48 Councillors. The city returns 4 members to Parliament.

Principal City Officers.

Mayor (1921-1922), Frederick Berryman. Recorder, Hugo J. Young, K.C. (1920). Sheriff, Abraham Parkes. Town Clerk (1912) and Clerk of the Peace (1921), William John Board, O.B.E. City Coroner, Charles Lambert Rothera.

THE PRINCIPALITY OF WALES.

PHYSICAL GEOGRAPHY.

Position and Extent.—The Principality of Wales occupies the extreme west of the central southern portion of the island of Great Britain, with a total area of 7,467 sq. miles, and a population (1921) of 2,206,721. It is bounded on the N. by the Irish Sea, on the S. by the Bristol Channel, on the E. by the English counties of Cheshire, Shropshire, Hereford and Monmouth, and on the W. by St. George's Channel. The greatest length from N. to S. (Point of Air to Barry Island) is 136 miles, and the greatest breadth from W. to E. (St. David's Head to the English border) is 92 miles.

Separated from the mainland of Wales by the Menai Straits is the Welsh island-county of Anglesey or Môn (276 sq. miles), communication with which is facilitated by the Menai Suspension Bridge (3,000 ft. long), built by Telford in 1826, and by the tubular railway bridge (1,200 ft. long) of the L. & N.W. Railway, built by Stephenson in 1850. Holyhead harbour, on Holy Isle (N.W. of Anglesey), provides accommodation for a fast steam packet service to Kingstown and Dublin (70 miles).

Relief.—Wales is generally mountainous, the chief systems being those of North Wales (Snowdon 3,572 ft., Carnedd Llywelyn 3,484 ft., Carnedd Dafydd 3,456 ft.); Berwyn (Aran-fawdd 2,970 ft.); Powys (Plinlimmon 2,462 ft., Drygan Fawr 2,115 ft., Radnor 2,163 ft.); and the Black Mountain, Brecknock Beacons and Black Forest ranges (Carmarthen Van 2,621 ft., Brecon Beacon 2,862 ft., Pen-y-gawer fawr 2,660 ft.).

Hydrography.—The principal river of those rising in Wales is the Severn (see England), which flows from the slopes of Plinlimmon to the English border, dividing Montgomeryshire on its way. The Wye (130 miles) also rises in the slopes of Plinlimmon, and flows between Radnor and Brecon on its course to England. The Usk (56 miles) flows into the Bristol Channel, through Monmouthshire. The Dee (70 miles) rises in Bala lake and flows through the Vale of Llangollen, where an aqueduct (built by Telford in 1805) carries the Pontcysyllte branch of the Shropshire Union Canal across the valley. The estuary of the Dee is the navigable portion, 14 miles in length and about 5 miles in breadth, and the tide rushes in with dangerous speed over the "Sands of Dee." The Towy (68 miles), Teifi (50 miles), Taff (40 miles), Dovey (30 miles), Taf (25 miles), and Conway (24 miles), the last named broad and navigable, are wholly Welsh rivers.

The largest natural lake in Wales is Bala (Llyn Tegid) in Merionethshire, 4 miles long and about 1 mile wide; Lake Vyrnwy is an artificial reservoir, about the size of Bala, and forms the water supply of Liverpool, while Birmingham is supplied from a chain of reservoirs in the Elan and Claerwen valleys.

EARLY HISTORY.

Celts and Romans.—The earliest inhabitants of whom there is any record appear to have been subdued or exterminated by the Goidels (a people of Celtic race) in the Bronze Age, and a further invasion of Celtic Brythons followed in the ensuing Iron Age. The Roman conquest of South Britain and Wales was for some time successfully opposed by Caradog (Caratacus), King of the Silures, a tribe inhabiting the present counties of Glamorgan, Brecon, Radnor and Monmouth. In A.D. 78 the conquest of Wales was completed under Julius Frontinus, and communications were opened up by the construction of military roads from Chester to Carleon-on-Usk and Caerwent, and from Chester to Conway (and thence to Carmarthen and Neath). Christianity was introduced (during the Roman occupation) in the 4th century, and the faith thus established was preserved (after the withdrawal of the Roman garrison) by native effort, and was carried to the northernmost corners of the British Isles by missionaries to the Hebrides and to the Orkneys and Shetlands.

The Anglo-Saxon Attacks.—The Anglo-Saxon invaders of South Britain drove the Celtic Goidels and Brythons into the mountain fastnesses of Wales, and into Strathclyde (Cumberland and S.W. Scotland) and Cornwall, giving them the name of Waelisc, or Welsh (=Foreign). The West Saxons' victory of Deorham (577) isolated the Waelisc of Wales from those of Cornwall, while the battle of Chester (633) similarly cut off communication with the Waelisc of Strathclyde. In the 8th century the boundaries of the Welch were further restricted by the annexations of Offa, King of Mercia, and counter-attacks were largely prevented by the construction of an artificial boundary from the Dee to the Wye (Offa's Dyke). In the 9th century Rhodri Mawr united the country against further incursions of the Saxons by land and against the raids of Norse and Danish pirates by sea, but at his death his three provinces of Gwynedd (N.), Powys (Mid.) and Deheubarth (S.) were divided among his three sons—Anarawd, Mervyn and Cadell—the son of the last-named being Howel Dda, who codified the laws of the country, while Llewelyn ap Seisyllt (husband of the heiress of Gwynedd) again united the provinces and reigned as Prince from 1015-1022.

The Norman Conquest.—After the Norman conquest of England William I. created Palatine counties along the Welch frontier, and Robert FitzHamon, the Norman Earl of Gloucester, raided South Wales and erected fortresses from the Wye to Milford Haven. Henry I. introduced Flemish settlers into South Wales, but after his death the Welch rose under the leadership of Griffith ap Rhys and routed the Norman-Flemish forces at the fords of the Teifi (Cardigan) in 1136. From the early years of the 13th century the house Gwynedd, in the north, gained an ascendancy over the whole of Wales, and Llewelyn ap Iorwerth was in constant strife with England for recognition as an independent sovereign; but Llewelyn, the son of Iorwerth, was killed in 1248 during hostilities between the Welch and English, and his brother David was captured and executed by the English in 1283. On Feb. 7, 1301, Edward of Carnarvon, son of Edward I., was created Prince of Wales, a title thenceforward borne by the heir apparent to the throne of England.

The Welch are a distinct nationality, with a language and literature of their own, and the national hardic festival (Eisteddfod), instituted by Prince Rhys ap Griffith in 1176, is annually maintained. These Eisteddfodau (sessions) form part of the Gorsedd (ass. mby), which is believed to date from the time of Prydian, a ruling prince in an age many centuries before the Christian era.

CARDIFF.

CARDIFF (Glamorgan) at the mouth of the river Taff († aer Taff), the port of the South Wales coal fields, has a municipal area of 8,095 acres, and a population at the census of 1921 of 200,262. The net tonnage of ships entered at the port in 1919 was 5,599,000 tons, and of those cleared 6,163,000 tons, the value of the seaborne trade being £30,981,000 in 1918. The prosperity of the city is largely due to the opening of the Docks in 1839, and to their continuous development since that date. The chief ports are coal, coke, patent fuel, iron, and on and steel manufactures, and there is a large iron repairing industry.

The principal buildings are Cardiff Castle, built in the 11th century, the National Museum of Wales, Public Library, the University College of South Wales and Monmouthshire, the Registry of the University of Wales, Technical College, City Hall and Law Courts, and Glamorgan County Hall. The city returns 3 members to Parliament.

City Officers.

Rt. Hon. Lord Mayor (1921-22) F. H. Turnbull.
Stipendiary Magistrate Sir T. W. Lewis.
Recorder, W. Llewellyn Williams, K.C.
Town Clerk & Clerk of the Peace, Cecil G. Brown.

SWANSEA.

SWANSEA (Glamorgan), at the mouth of the River Tawe, is the chief centre of the copper, tinplate and spelter industry of the United Kingdom, and contains the largest tube works in the country. The trade of the port also includes coal and patent fuel; the net tonnage of ships entered in 1919 being 2,253,750 tons, and of those cleared 2,253,605 tons. The trade is principally with France, Italy and Belgium. The municipal area is 24,193 acres, with a population at the census of 1921 of 157,561.

The principal buildings are the Norman castle (re-built in 1330), the Royal Institution of South Wales, founded in 1835 (containing Museum and Library), and the 17th century Grammar School, founded by Hugh Goro. Swansea was chartered by King John, and incorporated as a borough by Henry III. The borough returns 2 members to Parliament.

City Officers.

Mayor (1921-22), William Owen.
Recorder, Sir E. Marlay Samson, K.B.M., K.C.
Town Clerk, H. Lang-Coath.

THE KINGDOM OF SCOTLAND.

Position and Extent.—The Kingdom of Scotland occupies the northern portion of the main island of Great Britain and includes the Inner and Outer Hebrides, and the Orkney, Shetland, and many other islands. The Kingdom lies between $60^{\circ} 51' 30''$ and $54^{\circ} 30'$ N. latitude and between $1^{\circ} 45' 30''$ and $6^{\circ} 14'$ W. longitude, its southern neighbour being the Kingdom of England, with the Atlantic Ocean on the N. and W., and the North Sea on the E. The greatest length* of the mainland (Cape Wrath to the Mull of Galloway) is 274 miles, and the greatest breadth (Buchan Ness to Applecross) is 154 miles. The total area of the Kingdom is 31,510 square miles (land and water), with a population (at the census of 1921) of 4,382,288, an increase of 121,394 since the census of 1911, or 2.5 per cent.

Relief.—There are three natural orographic divisions of Scotland. The Southern Uplands have their highest points in Merrie (2,764 feet), Rinn of Kells (2,668 feet), and Cairnasmuir of Carsphairn (2,612 feet), in Kirkcubright; Hartfell (2,651 feet) in Dumfries; and Whitecumb (2,695 feet), in Peebles. The Central Lowlands include the valleys of the Tay, Forth and Clyde, and the cities of Edinburgh, the capital of the Kingdom, and Glasgow, its principal seaport. The heather-clad Northern Highlands extend almost from the extreme north of the mainland to the central lowlands, and are divided into a northern and southern system by the Great Glen; they contain, in the central Grampian Hills, Ben Nevis (4,406 feet), the highest point in the British Isles, and Ben Muich Dhui (4,296 feet). The Cheviot Hills form a natural boundary between Scotland and England, their highest point being Cheviot Hill (3,676 feet).

Hydrography.—The principal river of Scotland is the Clyde (106 miles), one of the most important rivers in the world, with the greatest commercial estuary in Scotland. The Clyde is formed by the junction of Daer and Portrail water, and flows through the city and port of Glasgow to the Firth of Clyde. During its course it passes over the picturesque Falls of Clyde, the largest falls in the British Isles, Bonnington Linn (30 feet), Corra Linn (84 feet), Duffadd Linn (10 feet), and Stonehyres Linn (80 feet), all occurring within a stretch of 4 miles, above and below Lanark. The Tweed (96 miles) forms a boundary between Scotland and England at Berwick, and has important woollen industries ("Tweeds") in its valley. The Tay, noted for its salmon, and the longest river in Scotland (117 miles), flows into the North Sea, with Dundee (the centre of the jute industry) on the estuary, which is spanned by the Tay Bridge (2 miles 73 yards), opened in 1887 to replace that destroyed by a gale (Dec. 28, 1879). The Dee (90 miles), a noted salmon river, flows through scenery of unequalled beauty to the North Sea at Aberdeen. The Spey (110 miles), the swiftest flowing river in the British Isles, and also noted for its salmon and its scenery, flows into the Moray Firth. The Forth (66 miles), navigable to Stirling, is spanned by the Forth Bridge, constructed 1882-9 at a cost of £3,000,000, with a length of 5,330 feet (with approaches 8,295 feet).

The lochs are the principal hydrographic feature of the Kingdom, both on the mainland and in many of the Islands. The largest in the Kingdom and in Great Britain is Loch Lomond (24 miles long), with Lochs Awe, Tay, Rannoch and Erchie in the Grampian valleys; Loch Ness (24 miles long and 800 feet deep), with Lochs Oich and Lochy, in the Great Glen; and Lochs Shin (20 miles) and Maree in the northern Highlands.

Orkney.—About 6 miles N. of the Caithness coast, separated from the mainland by the Pentland Firth, is the island county of Orkney, a group of 90 islands and islets ("holms" and "skerries"), of which one-third are inhabited. The total area of the group is $375\frac{1}{2}$ square miles, with a population (1911) of 25,896. Kirkwall, in Pomona (or mainland), the largest island of the group, is the capital of the county. Many of the Orkney (and Shetland) Islands contain brochs (Pictish towers) and other Pictish and Scandinavian remains. Scapa Flow, between Pomona and Hoy, was the war station of the Grand Fleet from 1914-9 and the scene of the scuttling of the surrendered German High Seas Fleet (June 21, 1919).

Shetland.—About 50 miles N. of Orkney (with the detached Fair Isle at 25 miles N.) is the island county of Shetland, a group of about 100 islands and islets, of which 20 are inhabited. The total area of the group is 251 square miles, with a population (1911) of 27,911. Lerwick, in Mainland (the largest and principal island), is the capital of the county. Fair Isle, the southernmost of the group, is famous for hand-knitted hosiery, and Unst for the finest of the Shetland woollen work, for which the county is famous. Muckle Flugga, about 1 mile N. of Unst, is the most northerly of the group and of the British Isles ($60^{\circ} 51' 30''$ N. lat.).

Western Islands.—Off the W. coast, at varying distances, and extending from Sutherland to Argyll, are over 500 islands and islets, of which 102 are inhabited. The total area of these Western Islands is 2,812 square miles, with a population of close on 80,000, but owing to the mountainous surface of the land only about 300 square miles are under cultivation. The Inner Hebrides include the island of Skye (643 square miles—capital, Portree, famous as the refuge of Prince Charlie after his defeat at Culloden, Invernesshire, in 1746), which contains the Cuillin (Sgurr-na-Banachdich, 3,443 feet), Red Hills (Ben Callich, 3,403 feet), and many other picturesque mountains; Mull (367 square miles).

* Land's End to John o' Groat.—The customary measurement of the Island of Great Britain is from the site of John o' Groat's house, near Duncansby Head, Caithness (at the N.E. extremity of the island) to Land's End, Cornwall (at the S.W. extremity), a total distance of 597 miles in a straight line and (approximately) 900 by road. But the site of the house of John de Groot (with its 8 doors and octagonal table, to solve the question of precedence between John and his 7 brothers) is about 4 miles S.W. of Duncansby Head, while Dunnet Head (also in Caithness) extends further N. than Duncansby. John de Groot is believed to have obtained permission to settle in Caithness (from the Netherlands) in the reign of James IV. (1488-1513).

* The Hebrides.—Until the closing years of the 13th century "The Hebrides" included other Scottish islands in the Firth of Clyde, the peninsula of Kintyre (Argyllshire), the Isle of Man, and the (Irish) Isle of Rathlin. The origin of the name is stated to be the Greek Hebouda, latinized as Hebrides by Pliny, and corrupted to its present form. The Norwegian name Sudreygar (Southern Islands) was latinized at odoresnes, a name that survives in the Anglican bishopric of "Sodor and Man."

containing Ben More (3,185 feet), Ben Bui (2,354 feet), and Ben Creach (2,289 feet); Jura (160 square miles), with a chain of hills culminating in the Paps of Jura, Beinn-an-Oir (2,571 feet), and Beinn Chaolais (2,407 feet); Islay (235 square miles), and many smaller islands. The Outer Hebrides, separated from the mainland by the Minch, include Lewis-with-Harris (770 square miles), celebrated for its homespun "Tweeds," North Uist, South Uist, Barra and other islands. Thirteen miles W. of Stornoway (the largest town of Lewis and of the Hebrides) are the "Druidical" remains of Callernish, a well-preserved series of monolithic circles, cruciform in general arrangement, but generally regarded as a heathen monument of the remote Stone Age.

Climate.—The climate of Scotland is influenced by the much indented coast line and (like that of South Britain) by the Gulf Stream Drift, which emerges from the Gulf of Mexico as a strong current about 30 miles in width, with a speed of about 4 miles per hour; the stream gradually loses its velocity and becomes shallower and cooler, until at about 35° N. lat. (off Cape Hatteras) it ceases to be a distinct stream and its surface waters are carried across the Atlantic by the prevailing westerly winds. The climate is more bracing and less treacherous than that of England, the average duration of sunshine on the east coast being greater than on the east coast of England, while the south-western section is no wetter or more relaxing than the corresponding section of England. The mean winter temperature is in the neighbourhood of 35°, and that of summer about 58° Fahrenheit.

EARLY HISTORY.

Prehistoric Man.—North Britain appears to have been invaded in Palaeolithic times by a succession of races, who died out or were exterminated by other immigrants. The earliest race of which there is any record is that since known as the Picts, believed to be of non-Aryan origin, and stated to have been named Picti by the Romans on account of the tribal habit of painting the body. The Picts seem to have inhabited the whole of North Britain and to have spread over the north of Ireland. Picts' Houses are most frequent in the northern counties of Caithness and Sutherland and in the Orkney Islands, and it is generally believed that the Picts were driven northwards by later Celtic immigrants. Celtic Goidels and Brythons arrived from Belgic Gaul during the latter part of the Bronze Age and in the early Iron Age, and except in the extreme north of the mainland and in the islands the civilization and speech of the people were definitely Celtic at the time of the Roman Invasion of Britain.

The Roman Invasion.—In A.D. 80 Julius Agricola extended the Roman conquests in Britain by advancing into Caledonia as far as the "Grampian" Hills, but after a victory at Mons Graupius (since corrupted to "Grampius") he was recalled, and no further advance was made for about 60 years, when the Roman frontier was carried to the isthmus between the Forth and Clyde and marked by the Wall of Pius, towards which ran military roads from the Cheviots. The Roman occupation of Southern Caledonia was not so effective as that of South Britain, and before the close of the second century the northern limit of Roman Britain had receded to Hadrian's Wall, from the Tyne to Solway Firth, where it was maintained until about 450 A.D. —

The Scots.—During the later years of the Roman occupation the garrison was continually harassed by Pictish tribes north of the Wall, aided by Scots (the Gaelic tribe then dominant in Ireland), and when the garrison was withdrawn these Picts and Scots were the principal enemies of the Celtic Brythons, who are believed to have called in the Saxons to protect them from the invasions of their neighbours. A relic of the struggle between Pict and Brython is still to be seen in the Castrail, or Picts' Work Dyke, of Roxburgh (from Torwoodlee, near Galashiels, to Peel Fell in the Cheviots). Christianity was introduced into Southern Caledonia about 380 by missionaries from Romanized Britain, who penetrated to the northern districts and islands. After the withdrawal (or absorption) of the Roman garrison of Britain there were many years of tribal warfare between the Picts and Scots, the Brythonic Waelich (Welsh) of Strathclyde (South-west Scotland and Cumberland), and the Anglo-Saxons of the Lothians. The Waelich were isolated from their kinsmen in Wales by the victory of the West Saxons at Clester (613), and towards the close of the 9th century the Scots under Kenneth Macalpine became the dominant power in Caledonia. In the reign of Malcolm I. (943-954) the Brythons or Waelich (Welsh) of Strathclyde were brought into subjection, the lowland kingdom of the English (Lothian) being conquered by Malcolm II. (1005-1034). From the close of the 11th century until the middle of the 16th there were constant wars between Scotland and England, the outstanding figures in the struggle being William Wallace, who defeated the English at Stirling Bridge (1297), and Robert Bruce, who won the victory of Bannockburn (1314). James IV. and many of his nobles fell at the disastrous battle of Flodden (1513), and in 1603 James VI., the Stuart King of Scotland and the heir to the Tudor line of England (his mother, Mary "Queen of Scots," was the great-granddaughter of Henry VII.), succeeded Queen Elizabeth on the throne, his successors reigning as Sovereigns of Great Britain. After the abdication (by flight) of James VII. and II., the crown devolved upon William III. (grandson of Charles I.), and Mary (daughter of James VII. and II.) and, their issue failing, upon Anne (second daughter of James VII. and II.). Anne's children died young, and the throne devolved upon George I. (great-grandson of James VI. and I.). In 1689 Graham of Claverhouse "roused the Highlands" on behalf of James VII. and II., but died after a military success at Killicrankie. In 1715, armed risings led to the indecisive battle of Sherrifmuir, but the movement died down until 1745, when the "Young Pretender" defeated the Royalist troops under Sir John Cope at Preston Pans and advanced to Derby in England (1746). From Derby, the adherents of "James VII. and III." (the title claimed for his father by the Young Pretender), fell back on the defensive, and the Jacobite movement was finally crushed by the Royalist troops under the Duke of Cumberland at Culloden (April 16, 1746).

The Hebrides did not become part of the Kingdom of Scotland until 1266, when they were ceded to Alexander III. by Magnus of Norway. Orkney and Shetland fell to the Scottish Crown as a pledge for the unpaid dowry of Margaret of Denmark, wife of James III., in 1468, the Danish suzerainty being formally relinquished in 1590.

EDINBURGH.

EDINBURGH, the Capital of the Kingdom, has a municipal area of 32,402 acres, and a population (Census of 1921) of 420,281 (over the enlarged area). The boundaries were extended in 1920 so as to include the Burgh of Leith and part of the suburban district of the County of Midlothian. The city is built on a group of hills and contains in Princes Street the most beautiful thoroughfare in the world. The principal buildings are St. Giles's Church (restored 1879-83), and St. Mary's (Scottish Episcopal) Cathedral (Sir Gilbert Scott), the Castle (which contains, in St. Margaret's Chapel, the oldest building in Scotland), Parliament House (the present seat of the judicature, containing the Advocates' and Signet Libraries), the University, the General Register House (Robert Adam), Royal Scottish Academy, National Portrait Gallery, and Holyrood Palace (containing parts of the royal palace of James IV. and V.). The city is governed by a town council of 71 members, and sends 6 members to Parliament (including the member for Leith).

Rt. Hon. Lord Provost (1921-22), Thomas Hutchison.

Town Clerk, Andrew Grierson, S.S.C., J.P.

City Chamberlain, Robert Paton.

GLASGOW.

GLASGOW, a Royal Burgh, City and County of a City, and the principal commercial centre in Scotland, has a municipal area of 19,183 acres, and a population of 1,034,069 at the Census of 1921 (an increase of 25,582 since 1911). The city occupies the north and south banks of the Clyde, one of the chief commercial estuaries of the world, and its trade was valued at £158,126,941 in 1920, the tonnage of the ships entering being 5,149,037 tons, of those cleared 5,031,571 tons. The principal industries are iron and steel works, shipbuilding, chemicals, leather, woollens, muslin-weaving, distilling, ink-making, tobacco, cotton-mills and furniture. The chief buildings are the Early English Cathedral, built early in the 13th century, and incorporating part of an earlier structure, the University (Sir Gilbert Scott), the City Chambers, the Royal Infirmary and the Western and Victoria Infirmaries, the Art Galleries and the Mitchell Library. The City is governed by a town council of 113 members, and sends 15 members to Parliament.

Rt. Hon. Lord Provost (1920-23), Thomas Paxton.

In Scotland the principal local court is the Sheriff Court. The Sheriff is the Appeal Judge, but the Judge Ordinary is the Sheriff-Substitute. The jurisdiction of the Sheriff Court is both civil and criminal. In civil questions the jurisdiction is unlimited in regard to the money value of the cause. On the criminal side the Court has cognizance of all serious crime with the exception of murder and three other charges, but the power of punishment is limited to fine and imprisonment; it does not extend to penal servitude.

The Sheriff Clerk is the Clerk of the Sheriff Court, and his duties correspond nearly to those of a Registrar in the English Courts.

The Procurator-Fiscal is peculiarly a Scottish official. Criminal prosecutions are in Scotland conducted by Crown officials at the public expense; the Lord Advocate and his deputies prosecute in the High Court; the Procurators-Fiscal in the Sheriff Court.

The Address of the Secretary of the Sheriffs-Substitute Assoc. is County Buildings, Dunfermline.

† SOUTHERN IRELAND.—Under the Government of Ireland Act, 1920, the Provinces of Leinster, Munster and Connaught, with the Ulster Counties of Cavan, Donegal and Monaghan, comprising a total land area of 17,019,155 acres (26,592 square miles), and a population (census 1911) of 3,139,688, form the Government of Southern Ireland, with its capital at Dublin.

‡ NORTHERN IRELAND.—Under the Government of Ireland Act, 1920, six of the Ulster Counties (Antrim, Armagh, Down, Fermanagh, Londonderry and Tyrone) with the Parliamentary Boroughs of Belfast and Derry, comprising a total land area of 3,351,970 acres (5,263 square miles), and a population (census 1911) of 1,250,531, form the Government of Northern Ireland, with its capital at Belfast.

PHYSIOGRAPHY.

Position and Extent.—Ireland lies in the Atlantic Ocean, to the West of Great Britain, and is separated from Scotland by the North Channel and from Wales by the Irish Sea and St. George's Channel. The land area of the island is 32,531 sq. miles and its geographical position between $51^{\circ} 26'$ and $55^{\circ} 21'$ N. latitude and from $5^{\circ} 25'$ to $10^{\circ} 30'$ W. longitude. The greatest length of the island, from N.E. to S.W. (Torr Head to Mizen Head), is 302 miles, and the greatest breadth from E. to W. (Dundrum Bay to Armagh Head) is 174 miles.

Relief.—The island is occupied for the greater part of its area by the Central Plain, with an elevation of 50 to 250 ft. above mean sea level, with isolated mountain ranges, near the coast line. The principal mountains, with their highest points, are the Sperrin Mountains (Sawel 2,240 ft.) of County Tyrone in the North; the Mountains of Mourne (Slieve Donard 2,796 ft.) of County Down, and the Wicklow Mountains (Lugnaquilla 3,039 ft.) in the North-East; the Derryvagh Mountains (Errigal 2,466 ft.) of County Donegal in the North-West; the Connemara Mountains (Twelve Pins 2,695 ft.) of County Galway in the West; Macgillicuddy's Reeks (Carruntuohill 3,414 ft., the highest point in Ireland) in the South-West; and the Galtee Mountains (3,018 ft.) of County Tipperary, and the Knockmealdown (2,609 ft.) and Comeragh Mountains (2,470 ft.) of County Waterford in the South.

Hydrography.—The principal river of Ireland (and the longest in the British Isles) is the Shannon (240 miles), rising in County Cavan and draining the central plain. The Shannon flows through a chain of loughs to the city of Limerick, and thence to an estuary on the western Atlantic seaboard. The Slaney flows into Wexford Harbour, the Liffey to Dublin Bay, the Boyne to Drogheda, the Lee to Cork Harbour, the Blackwater to Youghal Bay, and the Suir, Nore, and Barrow to Waterford Harbour.

As in Scotland, the principal hydrographic feature is the Loughs, of which Lough Neagh (150 sq. miles) in the north-east, is the largest in Ireland and the British Isles, others being the Shannon Chain of Allen, Bodergh, Forbes, Ree and Derg, and the Erne Chain of Cowna, Oughter, Lower Erne and Erne, in the central plain; Melrin, Gill, Gara and Conn in the north; and Corrib and Musk (joined by a hidden channel) in the south. In County Kerry, to the east of Macgillicuddy's Reeks, are the famous Lakes of Killarney.

Climate.—The climate of Ireland is more equable than that of Great Britain, and the rainfall is more evenly distributed. The variation in mean temperature is only about 3° Fahrenheit, the summer extremes being 59° in the N. and 62° in the S.

HISTORICAL SKETCH.

Primitive Man.—Although little is known concerning the earliest inhabitants of Ireland, there are many traces of neolithic man throughout the island, while the use of bronze implements appears to have become known about the middle of the 17th century B.C. In the later Bronze Age a Celtic race of Goidels appear to have invaded the island, and in the early Iron Age Brythons from South Britain are believed to have effected settlements in the south-east, while Picts from North Britain established similar settlements in the north. Towards the close of the Roman occupation of Britain, the dominant tribe in the island was that of the Scoti, who eventually established themselves in the north of the neighbouring island.

Legendary History.—According to Irish legends, the island was settled by a Milesian race, who came from Scythia by way of Spain, and established the Kingdom of Tara, about 500 B.C. The supremacy of the Ardrí (high king) of Tara was acknowledged by eight lesser kingdoms (Munster, Connaught, Allee, Oriel, Ulidia, Meath, Leinster, and Ossory) ruled by descendants of the eight sons of Miled. The basalt columns on the coast of Antrim, eight miles from Portrush, known as the Giant's Causeway, are connected with the legendary history of Ireland as the remnants of a bridge built in the time of Finn M Coul (Fingal) to connect Antrim with Scotland (Staffa).

Christianity.—Christianity appears to have been known to many of the people of Ireland before the 4th century A.D., although it did not become general until the advent of St. Patrick. St. Patrick was born in Britain about 360, and was taken to Ireland as a slave about sixteen years later, escaping to Gaul at the age of 22. In 432 he was consecrated Bishop at Auxerre and landed in Wicklow to establish and organise the Christian religion throughout the island.

The Northmen.—The Roman conquest of Britain was not extended to Ireland and little is known of the history of the country until the invasions of Northmen (Norwegians and Danes) towards the close of the 8th century A.D. The Norwegians were distinguished as Finggall (White Strangers) and the Danes as Dubgall (Black Strangers), names which survive in "Fingall," "Macbougall" and MacDowell," while the name of the island itself is held to be derived from the Scandinavian Ira-land (Land of the Irish), the Provinces of Ulster, Leinster and Munster being survivals of the Norse Ulaids-tad, Laigin-tad and Muman-tad. The outstanding events in the encounters with the Northmen are the Battle of Tara (900), at which the Hy Neill king Maelsechlainn II. defeated the Scandinavians of Dublin and the Hebrides under their king Amlaib Cuarán; and the Battle of Ultoniar (1014) by which the Scandinavian power was completely broken. After Clontarf the supreme power was disputed by the O'Briens of Munster, the O'Neills of Ulster, and the O'Connors of Connaught, with varying fortunes.

The Anglo-Norman Invasion.—In 1172 Dermot MacMurrough (Diarmait MacMurchada), the deposed king of Leinster, sought assistance in his struggle with Ruaidrí O'Connor (the Ardrí, or high king, of Ireland), and visited Henry II., the English king of England. Henry authorized Dermot to obtain armed support in England for the recovery of his kingdom and Dermot enlisted the services of Richard de Clare, the Norman

Earl of Pembroke, afterwards known as Strongbow. Strongbow landed at Waterford (Aug. 23, 1170) with 200 knights and 1,000 other troops for the reconquest of Leinster, where he eventually settled, after marriage with Dermot's daughter. In 1172 (Oct. 28) Henry II. himself landed in Ireland, with a force larger than Strongbow's, and obtained homage from the Irish kings, but Anglo-Norman rule underwent many fluctuations in the succeeding centuries, being confined in the early 15th century within the English "Pale" of 600 square miles. In the reign of Henry VII. English rule was greatly extended, and the administration of Irish affairs was anglicised by Robert Poyning, Lord Deputy of Ireland, who summoned the Parliament of Drogheda (Dec. 1494), at which were enacted the Statutes of Drogheda, afterwards known as Poyning's Law, making the legislature of Ireland subordinate to and dependent on that of England. A later parliament conferred on Henry VIII. the title of King of Ireland, and in Elizabeth's reign the conquest of the island was completed. In the time of James I. an apparently trivial incident, the introduction of the potato (1616), profoundly influenced the future of the nation, as it required little labour to cultivate, and "Raleigh's fatal gift" soon became so much the main food of the Irish that a potato famine caused almost universal starvation. In the same reign also many of the leading families of the north-eastern counties fled the country after participation in an abortive rebellion, and their lands were distributed amongst English and Scottish colonists, adherents of the Reformed Church, the number of Protestant settlers constantly increasing in succeeding years in spite of racial and religious estrangements with the Roman Catholic Celts. Cromwell's campaign in Ireland (1649-1650) was carried on with ruthless cruelty and universal military success, terminating in the subjugation of the kingdom and the legislative union with England, but further estrangement was caused between the Roman Catholics and the Protestant Colonists. At the Revolution of 1688 the Protestants adhered to the cause of William and Mary, and William III. defeated the Roman Catholic adherents of James II. at the Battle of the Boyne (July 1, 1690) and at the Battle of Aughrim (July 22, 1691). The Jacobite risings of 1715 and 1745 found no adherents in Ireland, but various insurrections took place in the 18th century, culminating in the rebellion of 1798, after the suppression of which the Act of Union (Jan. 1, 1801) combined the Irish and British legislatures. Catholic Emancipation was enacted by the Parliament of the United Kingdom in 1829, and extensive relief works were carried out to mitigate the severities of famine from 1831-1847. In 1845 the population reached its highest point (8,295,000) of whom the vast majority were dependent for food on the success of the potato crop.

Home Rule.—The demand for a separate Parliament for Ireland was first advanced at Westminster by an Irish party under the leadership of Isaac Butt (born 1813, died 1879), who was succeeded by Charles Stewart Parnell (born 1846, died 1891) by whose efforts the necessity of granting a measure of Home Rule to Ireland was impressed upon one of the great political parties of Great Britain. After many failures to pass a Bill through both Houses of Parliament a Home Rule Bill was eventually placed on the Statute Book in 1914, with a suspensory clause for the duration of the War. In the later stages of the War, however, the extreme party of Irish politicians developed their organization under the name of Sinn Féin ("Ourselves Alone") and demanded complete severance from Great Britain and the recognition of an Irish Republic, and of its elected legislature (Dail Eireann). Various efforts have been made by the Cabinet of the United Kingdom to arrive at a solution of the Irish problem, which is complicated by the separatist demands of the extremists (in open rebellion against the Government), and the desire of the Protestants of Ulster to remain united with Great Britain, with the additional problem of the minorities of Protestants in the Southern counties. A Home Rule Bill, in lieu of that placed on the Statute Book in 1914, was passed by Parliament in 1920, and its provisions are stated below.

GOVERNMENT.

Government of Ireland Act 1920.—Under the Government of Ireland Act 1920 (which repealed the Government of Ireland Act 1914) provision is made for a Legislature, Executive, and Judicature for Northern Ireland and for Southern Ireland, Northern Ireland comprising six of the counties of the Province of Ulster with the Parliamentary Boroughs of Belfast and Derry, and Southern Ireland comprising the remainder of the Kingdom.

Executive.—The Executive Power in Southern and Northern Ireland continues to be vested in the King-Emperor, and as respects Irish Services is exercised by Ministers of the Crown, responsible to the Legislatures and holding office during the pleasure of the Lord Lieutenant. In the event of the Parliament of Southern or Northern Ireland being declared not to be properly constituted (see Legislature post) the executive power is to be exercised, as regards Irish Services, by the Lord Lieutenant and a Committee of the Privy Council.

Seats of Government.—The seat of the government of Southern Ireland is at Dublin; of Northern Ireland at Belfast.

Legislatures.—The Parliament of Southern Ireland is to consist of a Senate of 64 members—the Lord Chancellor of Ireland and the Lord Mayors of Dublin and Cork ex officio, 17 Representatives of Commerce, Labour and Scientific and Learned Societies nominated by the Lord Lieutenant, and 44 elected Senators (4 by the Archbishops and Bishops of the Roman Catholic Church, 2 by the Archbishops and Bishops of the Church of Ireland, 16 Irish Peers who are taxpayers or ratepayers in Ireland by Irish Peers similarly situated, 8 Irish Privy Councillors by the Privy Councillors of Ireland, and 14 Representatives of County Councils); and of a House of Commons of 128 elected Members, 16 for Borough Constituencies (Dublin 12, Cork 4), 104 for Counties and 8 for Universities (Dublin 4, National 4).

The Parliament of Northern Ireland consists of a Senate of 26 members—the Lord Mayor of Belfast and the Mayor of Derry ex officio, and 24 Senators elected by the members of the House of Commons of Northern Ireland; and of a House of Commons of 52 elected members, 16 for the Borough of Belfast, 32 for Counties and 4 for Queen's University.

The Council of Ireland.—Until the establishment of a Parliament for the whole of Ireland, and for the purpose of bringing about harmonious action between the Parliaments and governments of Southern and Northern Ireland, there is constituted a Council of Ireland consisting of a President nominated by the Lord Lieutenant and of 40 members (7 Senators of Southern Ireland, 7 Senators of Northern Ireland, 13 Members of the House of Commons of Southern Ireland, 13 members of the House of Commons of Northern Ireland) elected by the members of the House of which they are members.

The Irish Parliament.—The Parliaments of Southern and Northern Ireland may, by identical Acts agreed to by an absolute majority of members, establish a Parliament for the whole of Ireland consisting of His Majesty and two Houses, which shall take the place of the Council of Ireland and the Southern and Northern Legislatures.

Legislative Powers.—The legislatures have full legislative powers in their respective areas except as to (i) the Crown or the succession thereto, (ii) the making of peace or war, (iii) the Navy, Army, Air Force or Territorial Army, (iv) Treaties, (v) Dignities or Titles of Honour, (vi) treason, treason felony, alienage, naturalisation, etc., (vii) trade out of Ireland, (viii) submarine cables, (ix) wireless telegraphy, (x) aerial navigation, (xi) lighthouses, buoys or beacons, (xii) coinage or legal tender, (xiii) trade marks, designs, merchandise marks, copyright or patent rights, (xiv) reserved matters, so long as they are reserved. (R.I.C. and Dublin Metropolitan Police for not more than three years, Postal Service, P.O.S.B. and Trustee Savings Banks, designs for stamps, registration of deeds, and the Public Record Office of Ireland until the date of Irish Union, Land Purchase until otherwise provided.)

Alternative Legislature.—The House of Commons of Southern or Northern Ireland shall not be deemed to be properly constituted if the Lord Lieutenant certifies that the number of members validly returned at the first election is less than half the total number of members of the House, or that the number of members who have taken the oath as such members within 14 days from the date on which the Parliament is first summoned to meet is less than one half of the total number of members of that House, and His Majesty in Council may by Order provide for the dissolution of the Parliament thus improperly constituted and for the exercise of the executive power of Government by the Lord Lieutenant, with the assistance of a Committee of the Privy Council, and of the powers of Parliament by a Legislative Assembly consisting of the aforesaid Executive Committee, together with such persons as His Majesty may appoint for the purpose.

Representation at Westminster.—The number of members to be returned by Irish Constituencies to serve in the Parliament of the United Kingdom is 46, of whom 33 represent Southern Ireland and 13 Northern Ireland, as shown on p. 235.

The Judicature.—Supreme Courts of Judicature are established in Southern and Northern Ireland, consisting of a High Court of Justice and a Court of Appeal, with a High Court of Appeal for Ireland having appellate jurisdiction throughout the whole of Ireland and consisting of the Lord Chancellor of Ireland, the Lord Chief Justices of Southern and Northern Ireland and such other Justices as may from time to time be nominated.

Financial Provisions.—Exchequers are established for Southern and Northern Ireland into which are payable the proceeds of all taxes levied by the respective Parliaments and such other funds as may be appropriated to the public service. The Irish Contribution to the Expenditure of the United Kingdom is fixed at £18,000,000 for each of the first and second financial years, and thereafter at such amount as shall be certified by the Joint Exchequer Board to be due under the provisions of the Act; the contribution at first payable to be contributed as to £10,000,000 by Southern Ireland and as to £8,000,000 by Northern Ireland and thereafter as may be determined by the Joint Exchequer Board. A residuary share of reserved taxes is payable out of the Consolidated Fund of the United Kingdom to the Exchequers of Southern and Northern Ireland after deducting the amount of the Irish contribution and the net cost of the reserved services. Provision is made for the establishment of an Irish Exchequer and an Irish Consolidated Fund in the case of Irish Union.

THE IRISH CONFERENCE.

A CONFERENCE opened in Downing Street in October between the Prime Minister and other representatives of the British Government and the delegates of Dail Eireann—to “ascertain how the association of Ireland with the community of nations known as the British Empire can best be reconciled with Irish national aspirations.” This conference was the outcome of a remarkable correspondence which followed the King’s appeal for a settlement of the Irish problem. The conference was to have taken place at Inverness, but the exchange of letters and telegrams between the Prime Minister and Mr. de Valera was so prolonged that this was not possible, and finally Mr. Lloyd George, in sending a new invitation to Sinn Féin to confer in London, declared that no purpose was to be served by any further interchange of “explanatory and argumentative communications.”

After Mr. de Valera had received the Prime Minister’s letter containing the Government’s offer and the conditions considered “vital to the welfare and safety of both Great Britain and Ireland,” he consulted Dail Eireann, which, by a unanimous vote, rejected the proposals, but declared that it was ready to appoint its representatives to negotiate a peace “on the basis of the broad guiding principle of government by the consent of the governed.” In his reply Mr. Lloyd George expressed the view that the Government’s proposals completely fulfilled the desire for this principle, and there then followed an academical discussion in which each side strove to find a set of suitable phrases.

A new obstacle was introduced by Mr. de Valera’s claim in the course of this “debate,” that the Sinn Féin delegates would be “the representatives of an independent and sovereign state.” Mr. Lloyd George promptly cancelled the arrangements for the Inverness meeting, declaring that this claim made conference between them impossible. He pointed out later that to receive the delegates in this capacity would constitute “a formal and official recognition of Ireland’s severance from the King’s domains.” The demand for peace grew in volume, and although Mr. de Valera did not entirely withdraw this demand, the invitation to the London conference was given and accepted, but not on the basis of the correspondence that had passed.

The Government’s Offer.

The chief points in the Government’s offer to Sinn Féin, outlined by Mr. Lloyd George in his letter inviting Ireland “to take her place in the great association of free nations” over which the King reigns, were that Ireland should assume forthwith the status of a Dominion, with complete autonomy in taxation and finance; that she should maintain her own courts of law and judges, her own military forces for home defence, and her own constabulary and police, and that she should take over the Irish postal service, education, land, housing, labour, transport, trade, and other services.

Ireland was offered the settlement of “age-long problems” subject to six vital conditions:—(1) The Royal Navy alone should control the seas around Ireland and Great Britain, such rights and liberties being accorded it as were essential for naval purposes in the Irish harbours and on the Irish coasts; (2) The Irish Territorial Force should, within reasonable limits, conform in respect of numbers to the military establishments of the other parts of these islands; (3) Great Britain should have all necessary facilities for the development of defence and of communications by air; (4) Ireland would of her own free will contribute to the Regular Forces of the Empire, voluntary recruitment for which should be permitted throughout Ireland; (5) the British and Irish Governments, to avert the possibility of ruinous trade wars, would agree to impose no protective duties or other restrictions upon the flow of transport, trade and commerce between all parts of the British Isles; and (6) the Irish people should agree to assume responsibility for a share of the debt of the United Kingdom and of the liability for war pensions, the share to be agreed or to be determined by an independent arbitrator. The question whether the proposed new powers should be confined to the South or taken over by a single body was to be left to Irishmen themselves to determine.

TRADE.

Trade of Ireland.—The value of the Irish import and export trade for the seven years ending Dec. 31, 1919, is shown below:—

Year.	Imports.	Exports.
1913	74,407,000	73,877,000
1914	74,125,000	77,311,000
1915	87,257,000	84,463,000
1916	104,517,000	107,127,000
1917	119,181,000	133,805,000
1918	126,016,000	152,931,000
1919	158,716,000	176,032,000

The trade of 1919 was classified as under:—

	Imports.	Exports.
Farm Produce, Food and Drink	55,245,000	93,709,000
Raw Materials	24,433,000	6,777,000
Manufactures	79,038,000	75,546,000
Total	£158,716,000	£176,032,000

The principal exports of manufactured goods in 1919 were textiles and ships. The imports amounted to £36 4s. 8d. per head of the population in 1919 and the exports to £39 3s. 5d. per head.

THE ISLE OF MAN (MONA), an island in the Irish Sea, in lat. $54^{\circ} 3' - 54^{\circ} 25' N$. and long. $4^{\circ} 28' - 4^{\circ} 47' W$, nearly equidistant from England, Scotland, and Ireland. The total land area is 145,325 acres (227 sq. miles), with a population (1912) of 49,233. The cultivated area (1902) was 83,700 acres, and the live stock included 6,029 horses, 19,662 cattle, 74,466 sheep, and 4,308 pigs. In the ninth century a body of malcontents from Norway emigrated to the western isles of Scotland, and their prosperity drew upon them the anger of the Norwegian monarch Harold, who in the year 870 sent forth a great expedition and conquered the Orkneys and the Shetlands, the Western Isles, and Man. For three centuries the Norwegian rule remained intact, but when, in 1263, Alexander III. defeated the famous Haco, at the battle of Largs, all these islands fell under Scottish rule. On his accession to the English throne, Henry IV. seized on the Isle of Man, and in 1406 bestowed it on the Stanley family. In 1827 the Crown purchased it for the sum of £417,144.

The island is divided into six sheadings (Scandinavian = ship districts) called Glenfaba, Middle, Rushen, Garff, Ayre and Michael, each of which has its officer (coroner), whose functions are similar to those of a sheriff.

The land is rich in minerals, lead, iron, blende and slate, and exports large quantities of agricultural produce. Fifty miles of railway have been constructed, and about 23 miles of electric tram road.

Man is governed by a separate Legislature, called the Tynwald, consisting of two branches—the Governor and Council and the House of Keys. The House of Keys (possibly from the Scandinavian keise = chosen) is one of the most ancient legislative assemblies in the world. It consists of 24 members, elected by the male and female owners and occupiers of property, 3 from each sheading, 3 from Douglas, and 1 each from Castletown, Peel and Ramsey. Bills after having passed both Houses are signed by the members, and then sent for the Royal Assent. Unless signed by the legal quorum of each House a Bill is not sent for the Royal Assent, the quorum of the Upper House or Council being the Governor and two Members and of the Lower House or Keys thirteen Members, the majority of the whole number (24). After receiving the Royal Assent, it does not become law until promulgated in the English and Manx languages on the Tynwald Hill. On the promulgation taking place a certificate thereof is signed by the Governor and the Speaker of the House of Keys.

CAPITAL, Douglas. Pop. (1921), 20,192 (Castletown is the ancient capital); the other towns are Peel and Ramsey.

THE CHANNEL ISLANDS

situated off the north-west coast of France (at distances of from ten to thirty miles) are the only portions of the Dukedom of Normandy now belonging to England, to which they have been attached ever since the Conquest. They consist of Jersey (28,717 acres), Guernsey (25,654 acres), and the following dependencies of Guernsey—Alderney (1,962 acres), Brechou (74), Great Sark (1,035), Little Sark (339), Herm (320), Jethou (44), and Lithou (38), a total of 47,083 acres, or 73½ square miles.

The climate is mild, and the soil exceptionally productive. The land under cultivation in 1916 was 49,678 vergées (2½ vergées = 1 acre), the principal product of the soil of Jersey being potatoes, tomatoes, and wheat, and of Guernsey green crops and oats, fruits and tomatoes. The famous Jersey and Guernsey breeds of cows have earned a well-deserved celebrity. The principal officer in each island is the Lieut.-Governor, who represents the King-Emperor (the Duke of Normandy). French is the official language of the local legislatures, called the States, and of the Royal Court, and is still spoken by the people, but English is now permissible in the Legislative Assembly. The Bailiff, appointed by the Crown, presides over the States and over the Royal Court or judicial body. The islands being all but exempt from imperial taxation they possess a very large trade. The chief town of Jersey is St. Helier, on the south side, where there is excellent sea-bathing; the principal town of Guernsey is St. Pierre Port, on the east coast.

THE CORPORATION OF THE CITY OF LONDON.

LONDON was famed for its vast conflux of traders and its abundant commerce even in the first century of the Christian era. From the Romans it is said it received municipal institutions, which have endured in their main features to the present day. In Saxon times it was in reality a small independent State, and its burgesses maintained their independence even after the Battle of Hastings. William the Norman only gained possession of their city by means of a treaty with them, and about eight years after he granted a charter, which is still preserved. It is addressed to William the Bishop, Godfrey the Portreeve, and all the Burgesses, and promises that they shall be "law worthy" (i.e., possessed of privileges) as they were in the days of Edward the Confessor. The Portreeve, however, received the Norman title of Bailiff, which, in 1192, was changed to Mayor; the first holder under the new name being Henry Fitzalwyn, who filled the office for 24 years. On his death a new charter was granted by King John in 1214, which directed the Mayor to be chosen annually, which has ever since been done, though in early times the same individual often held the office more than once. A familiar instance is that of "Whittington, thrice Lord Mayor of London" (in reality four times, A.D. 1397, 1398, 1406, 1419); and many modern cases have occurred. The title of Lord Mayor is said to have been first bestowed in 1354 by Edward III. The Lord Mayor is elected at Michaelmas; he is sworn into office on November 8, and on the following day presented to the Lord Chief Justice at the Royal Courts of Justice, to take the final declaration of office—the pageant, conducted with some degree of civic state, being popularly known as the Lord Mayor's Show.

Aldermen were first appointed by a charter of Henry III. in 1242, and were elected annually between 1377 and 1394, when a charter of Richard II. directed them to be chosen for life. The Common Council was at an early date substituted for a popular assembly called the Folk-mote. At first only two representatives were sent from each ward, but the number has since been greatly increased, some wards having as many as 16 members, and none less than four. Sheriffs (as well as aldermen) were Saxon officers, who usually had charge of a large district. The time of their appointment for London is uncertain, but they appear in ancient records as early as A.D. 1130. At first they were only the officers of the Crown, and were named by the Barons of the Exchequer; but King John gave them, in the first year of his reign, permission to choose their own Sheriffs. The citizens, however, lost this privilege, as far as the election of Sheriff of Middlesex is concerned, by the Local Government Act, 1888, but they continue as heretofore to choose the Sheriffs of the City of London. They are appointed on Midsummer Day, and enter on office at Michaelmas.

Officers.—The Recorder was first appointed in 1298. The Chamberlain is an ancient officer. There were at one time two Chamberlains—the King's Chamberlain and the Chamberlain of the Guildhall. The former appears to have fallen into abeyance circa 1319. The first contemporary record of the office of City Chamberlain is 1276. The Town Clerk (called Common Clerk) and Common Serjeant (now appointed by the Crown) are mentioned as officers in the charter of Edward II., A.D. 1319, but the offices can be traced to a much earlier date than this.

The Right Honourable the Lord Mayor 1921-1922.

Sir John James Baddeley, Knt., born Dec. 22, 1842, Common Councillor for Cripplegate Ward Without, 1886; Deputy Alderman, Cripplegate Without, 1899-1912; Sheriff of London 1908-9; Alderman of Farringdon Ward Within, 1912; Lord Mayor of London 1921; Address, The Mansion House, E.C. 2 £10,000

* The above is abstracted from the 288th "City's Cash Account" of the series extant—A.D. 1633 to 1920-21 (The Accounts earlier than A.D. 1633 were believed to have been destroyed in the Fire of London; but two years' Accounts, temp. Queen Elizabeth, have been recently discovered among the Corporation Archives as exceptions to that belief). The Volumes are in full detail, signed by the Auditors, and in perfect preservation. The extract is from the 132nd Annual Printed Account of the Corporation, A.D. 1920 to 1920-21. The Accounts are prepared and stated as directed by Resolutions of the Court of Common Council of the 5th June, 1903, and the 14th December, 1905, upon Reports of the Coal and Corn and Finance Committee, and they are printed in conformity with the 76th Standing Order of the Court of Common Council. The Accounts are issued in the form prescribed by these Orders, and show the Income and Expenditure applied to the year on the various Funds. The Accounts are made up to the end of March.

THE CITY GUILDS (LIVERY COMPANIES).

As will be seen from the following table, many of the London Guilds, or Livery Companies, are possessed of great wealth. Sixteen of the Companies have more than ten thousand pounds a year, and most of them are very liberal in their charities, especially in the way of education.

In the majority of cases the designation of the Company gives a clue to the trade which gave rise to the guild, the Broderers (Embroiderers), Cordwainers (cobblers), Fletchers (arrow makers), Loriners (bridle, bit, and spur makers), Poulters (poulterers) Scriveners (legal writers), Upholders (upholsterers), and Vintners (wine sellers) retaining the ancient name of the trade.

The order of precedence is given in parentheses after the name of each Company. 8,803 Liverymen of the Guilds are entitled to vote at elections in Common Hall (see p. 565). The actual net number is, however, smaller, as many belong to more than one Guild; and only those who have residential or other qualification in the City have the Parliamentary vote in that district.

Parliamentary Boundaries.—In consequence of changes under the Representation of the People Act (1918) the Administrative County of London now includes the whole of the Metropolitan Parliamentary Divisions. It also comprises the 28 Metropolitan Boroughs and the City of London.

The Metropolitan Police District extends over a radius of 15 miles from Charing Cross, exclusive of the City of London, with an assessable value in 1920-21 of £58,036,581, and embraces an area of upwards of 699 square miles. The number of new houses built since 1879 up to and including the year 1917 is 602,362, with 34 in course of erection; the new mileage since 1879 being 1,635.

THE London County Council was constituted under the Local Government Act of 1888. London is an administrative county, covering an area of 117 square miles.

The City of London is an electoral division of the county. The County of the City of London is a county for non-administrative purposes, such as quarter sessions, justices, &c.; and the Metropolis outside the City is a county for non-administrative purposes, by name the County of London, in which the justices continue their judicial duties.

The Council comprises a chairman, 20 aldermen, and 124 councillors, together 145, or, if the chairman be also an elected member or alderman, 144. The term of office for aldermen is 6 years, and half retire every 3 years. The councillors are elected for 3 years. The councillors are elected directly by the ratepayers, and the councillors elect the aldermen. The positions of aldermen and councillors are the same, except as to the term of office.

The method by which the Council discharges the multitudinous duties entrusted to it is a generous delegation of powers to committees under well defined rules, subject to the reservation to the Council itself of all questions of principle, and to periodical reports of action taken.

The Finance Committee have important statutory powers. No costs, debt or liability exceeding £50 may be incurred by the Council except upon a resolution passed on an estimate submitted by the Finance Committee. The Council is the principal money-raising body for all the local authorities in the county, and has a net debt, according to the latest returns, of £47,083,000 (of which £12,949,000 represents debt incurred for revenue-producing undertakings), and an annual expenditure of over thirty millions, of which about fifteen millions are expended on education. The Asylums and Mental Deficiency Committee administer the duties falling on the Council under the Lunacy Acts and the Mental Deficiency Act, 1913. The Council has mental hospitals with accommodation for over 20,000 patients. The Housing Committee perform the duties cast upon the Council by the Housing of the Working Classes Acts and the Housing, Town Planning, &c., Act, 1919, including the clearance of insanitary areas and the building of working-class dwellings. The total capital outlay up to 31st March, 1921, in respect of schemes carried out prior to the Act of 1919 was: Clearance of insanitary areas, £2,719,000, working-class dwellings, £2,983,000. It has always been the aim of the Council to make its working-class dwellings self-supporting, and in this, taking all the dwellings completed before 1919, it succeeded until the last two years. The returns for which showed deficiencies of £20,600 and £7,900 respectively. The total rent roll is now over £370,000. The increased rents now charged under the Increase of Rent and Mortgage Interest (Restrictions) Act, 1920, will, it is anticipated, be sufficient to restore the estates which were completed before 1919 to a self-supporting condition. In response to the appeal of the Government to local authorities generally, the Council prepared a scheme, which was approved by the Ministry of Health, to be carried out in 5 years, from 1919, for the erection of 29,000 new dwellings to accommodate approximately 145,000 people. Owing to general financial conditions, however, the Government has intimated that it is necessary to reduce the number of houses to be erected under the scheme, and the Ministry of Health is now reviewing the whole situation. Any deficiency on this scheme, in excess of the produce of a penny rate, will be met out of moneys provided by Parliament. The total capital expenditure by the Council on the assisted scheme up to 31st March, 1921, was £1,905,000.

The Improvements Committee are responsible for the carrying out of street improvements and the construction of bridges (outside the City of London) and tunnels across the river Thames. The largest improvements carried out in recent years are the new streets between Holborn and the Strand, now known as Kingsway and Aldwych; tunnels under the Thames at Rotherhithe and Woolwich; and an extensive improvement at Westminster, including a new embankment of the Thames between the Houses of Parliament and Lambeth Bridge.

The Metropolitan Main Drainage system covers about 149 square miles, including certain districts outside the county, and comprises 370 miles of main, storm-relief, intercepting and outfall sewers, eleven pumping stations, two sewage precipitation stations, and six sludge vessels. The sewage is conveyed to the outfalls at Barking and Crossness, and there the solid matters held in suspension are precipitated, and the sludge is taken out to sea. The Council is carrying out experimental work in connexion with other systems of sewage treatment. The total capital outlay on main drainage is upwards of £12,750,000, and further expenditure, amounting to several millions, is in prospect for a scheme to relieve certain districts from flooding after heavy falls of rain.

The Council is the Tramway Authority for London. The system extends over 150 street miles, of which 147 miles are electric lines (mostly underground conduit). Practically the whole of this great system is worked by the Council, and through running with various systems outside the County of London is now maintained, to the great advantage and convenience of the travelling public. The total capital outlay on tramways amounted, on 31st March, 1921, to £14,475,000, and the net debt outstanding to £8,342,000. The results of working for the year 1920-21 were gross receipts £4,904,427, surplus on working £65,134, net deficiency, after payment of interest on capital outlay and providing for repayment of debt, £590,580, which had to be raised in the rates. On 21st July, 1921, the Council took over the management and working of the Leyton tramways (about 9 street miles).

The Education Committee comprises thirty-eight members of the Council and twelve co-opted members, of whom not less than five are required to be women. In accordance with the Education Act, 1918, the Council has submitted to the Board of Education a scheme for the development of educational facilities of all kinds, but owing to the general financial situation it is practically in abeyance for the present, with the exception of a modified scheme for day continuation schools.

Amongst the Other Powers and Duties of the Council may be mentioned the following:—Sanctioning of loans required by the councils of the metropolitan boroughs; acquisition and maintenance of parks and open spaces; the sanctioning of local sewers; controlling the building line, and the naming and numbering of streets; supervising buildings and district surveyors; dangerous structures; cattle diseases; controlling storage of explosive substances and petroleum; infant life protection; gas, gas-meter, and electric-meter testing; testing weights and measures; licensing of slaughter-houses and of cow-houses; supervision of common lodging-houses; the granting of music and dancing licences; public health, including treatment of tuberculosis and diagnosis and treatment of venereal diseases; historic buildings and monuments; inspection of factories and certain other buildings to secure means of escape from fire; administration of the Shops Act, the Children Act, and the Midwives Acts; licensing and inspection of employment agencies; registration of massage establishments; licensing of premises under the Cinematograph Act; registration of motor cars; collection of duties on motor cars, dog and establishment and certain other local taxation licences; and registration of War charities. A Motor Ambulance service has been installed, with seven stations spread over the county and special facilities for calls by telephone. Under the Land Settlement (Facilities) Act, 1919, the Council has acquired the Shorne estate, near Gravesend, for the settlement of ex-service men upon the land. Any loss incurred up to 31st March 1926, will be defrayed by the Ministry of Agriculture and Fisheries.

The Expenditure of the Council, including loans to other local authorities, is met by two chief sources of supply—capital money raised by the issue of Stock, Bonds or bills, or by the use of the Sinking Fund of the Council's debt, and current income raised in a county rate or by the revenue of undertakings. Certain contributions, including education grants, are also received from the Imperial Exchequer. All borrowings by the Council are subject to the provision of a sinking fund, under Treasury approval, sufficient to repay all expenditure generally within a period of 60 years (in a few cases the limit is 80 years). The total Stock outstanding at 30th Sept., 1921, was £77,778,194, out of total issues of £84,632,379. These figures are exclusive of the issues of Bonds, the amounts outstanding at 30th Sept., 1921, being £2,705,300 London County 5½ per cent. Bonds, and £3,954,370 6 per cent. Local Bonds for Housing. The Rating for the year 1921-22 was estimated at the beginning of the year at the amounts shown in the statement given on p. 570, namely, 2s. 2½d. in the pound over the whole county, including the City, and a further rate over the county outside the City of 4½d. in the pound, together 2s. 7½d. Of the total rate, 2s. 2d. was for education. A rate of 2s. 10½d. was raised for the first half year. For the second half year, however, the rate, originally estimated at 2s. 9½d., was reduced by 2½d. in the pound, of which 1d. was in respect of education, and this decrease, representing £500,000, must be borne in mind in connection with the figures in the statement. The Assessable Value of the County of London on 6th April, 1922, was £48,702,440—a 1d. rate over the whole county producing £500,927.

CATHEDRALS AND CHURCHES.

ST. PAUL'S CATHEDRAL, City of London, E.C. 4.—The masterpiece of Sir Christopher Wren (1675-1710). Splendid architecture; monuments to celebrated men; famous music. The cross on the dome is 365 ft. above the ground level, the inner cupola 228 ft. above the floor. "Great Paul" in S.W. tower, weighs 17 tons. Organ by Father Smith (enlarged by Willis) in case carved by Grinling Gibbons (who also carved the choir stalls); fragments of rock from Mount Calvary and carved stones from the Temple at Jerusalem affixed to wall of south choir aisle. Nave and transepts free; Fees to the following parts (on week-days only): Library, whispering gallery, and stone gallery, 6d.; golden gallery, 1s.; crypt, 6d.; ball, 1s.; total, 3s. Service on Sundays at 8, 10.30, 2.15, and 3. Week days at 8, 10, 2.15, 4. (*Services are choral.) Among the distinguished statesmen, warriors and artists buried in the crypt or commemorated in the Cathedral are Nelson, Wellington, Napier, St. Vincent, Rodney, Cornwallis, Abercrombie, Moore, Gordon, Wolsey, Roberts, Brock, Ross of Bladenburg, Fakenham, Gibbs, Dundas, Wren ("si monumentum requiris, circumspice") Reynolds, Donne, Turner, Benjamin West, Abbey, Leighton, Sullivan, and many others. In 1921 a bust of George Washington, presented by American subscribers, was placed in the crypt. The garden contains in S. portion an ornamental device with legend varied from year to year. At the N.E. corner of the Cathedral is St. Paul's Cross, erected in 1530, on the site of a cross and open-air pulpit removed by order of the Long Parliament. To the S. of the Cathedral are remains of the Chapter House and Cloisters of "Old St. Paul's," destroyed by the Fire of London in 1666. Cut into the paving-stones at the foot of the steps at W. entrance is an inscription commemorative of Queen Victoria's thanksgiving in 1897.

WESTMINSTER ABBEY, near the Houses of Parliament, S.W. 1 (built A.D. 1050-1760).—Open on week-days at 8 a.m. Admission to Royal Chapels by fee of 6d., except on Mondays (open free); wax effigies, 6d. Norman undercroft, 3d. Open on Sundays for service only: Holy Communion at 8; Morning Prayer and Holy Communion at 10.15. Evening Prayer at 3. Litany and Sermon at 6.30. Daily—Holy Communion at 8 a.m.; School Service at 9.30; choral services at 10 and 3. Chapel of Henry VII., Chapter House, and Cloisters; King Edward the Confessor's shrine, A.D. 1269, tombs of kings (Edward I, Edward III, Henry V, Mary, Queen of Scots, Queen Elizabeth), and many other monuments and objects of interest, especially the grave of "An Unknown Warrior" at the W. end of Nave (1920), and Poets' Corner. The Coronation Chair encloses the "Stone of Scone," brought from Scotland by Edward I. in 1297. Graves of Gladstone, Isaac Newton, Charles Darwin, Charles Dickens, Lord Macaulay, Dr. Johnson, Chaucer, Tennyson, Browning, Handel; memorial to Viscount Howe (killed before Fort Mifflin in 1758); the memorial to Major John André, Adjutant-General of the British forces in America; the tombs of General John Burgoyne and of Colonel Enoch Mearns; memorials to Wolfe (Quebec) and Col. Townshend (Ticonderoga); bust of Longfellow; coloured window and tablet to Lowell, in vestibule of Chapter House.

SOUTHWARK CATHEDRAL, south side of the Thames, S.E. 1.—Finest medieval building in London after the Abbey, and mainly 13th century. Known as St. Mary Overie previous to 1540. Burial place of Gower, Massinger, and Bp. Andrews, &c. Open 7.30 a.m. to 6 p.m., free. Sunday services, 7.30, 8, and 11 a.m. (choral) and 6.30 p.m. (choral). Week-days: 7.30, 8, and 5 p.m. (choral). The tomb of John Gower (1330-1408) is between the Bunyan and Chaucer memorial windows, in the N. aisle; the altar screen (erected 1500) has been partly restored. The Early English Lady Chapel (behind the choir) is the scene of the Consistory Courts of the reign of Mary (Gardiner and Bonner). Shakespeare memorial in S. aisle, with recumbent figure and window above, the gift of British and American subscribers. The chapel of St. John the Divine, in the north transept, once used as a magistrate's court, was restored at the cost of Harvard students, as a memorial of their founder, John Harvard, who was baptized in the Church Nov. 29, 1607 (part of Harvard's estate was derived from the sale of the Queen's Head Inn, Southwark, inherited from his mother).

ALL HALLOWS, Barking-by-the-Tower, E.C. 3.—15th century church, containing a very fine series of brass effigies; Jacobean pulpit with Sussex ironwork and font cover ascribed to Grinling Gibbons. William Penn, Quaker, was christened here, and a tablet has been erected by the Pennsylvania Society of New York. John Quincy Adams, sixth President of the United States, was married here in 1797.

ALL SAINTS, Margaret Street, W. 1.—Built by Butterfield in 1859. Ritualistic and noted for its music.

BOW CHURCH (ST. MARY-LE-BOW), Chapside, E.C. 4.—Rebuilt by Wren (see p. 575), after the Fire, with beautiful steeple (225 ft.). 12th century crypt and church open daily (except M.) 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Since 17th century anyone born within sound of the bells of Bow Church has been designated a "Cockney." The 12th century church was built on stone arches or "bows."

CHRIST CHURCH, GRETFRIDERS, E.C. 1.—The church of the former Greyfriars Monastery was destroyed in the Fire, and Christ Church was rebuilt by Wren. The organ (repaired 1921) is by Renatus Harris, and the marble font is attributed to Grinling Gibbons. Until removal to Hortham (1902) the boys of Christ's Hospital (Blue Coat School), the site of which is now occupied by the G.P.O., attended services at Christ Church and the galleries contain seats with raised benches for the "Grecians." Blue Coat School boys still attend annually on St. Matthew's Day (Sept. 21). "Spital Sermon" is preached at Christ Church at Easter.

CHRIST CHURCH, Westminster Gate, S.W. 1.—Rev. R. J. Campbell, D.D.

GUARDS' CHAPEL, Wellington Barracks (Birdcage Walk, St. James's Park, S.W. 1).—Chapel redecorated in 1878. Open to visitors Tuesdays, Wednesdays, Thursdays and Fridays, 10 to 12 and 2 to 4. Parade service on Sundays at 11 a.m. (tickets of admission can be obtained on application to the Chaplain, R.M. Chapel, Wellington Barracks); evening service (open to the public) at 6 p.m.

HOLY TRINITY, Mincories, Aldgate, E. 1.—(Dis-mantled and now a Sunday school). Contains a mural monument with the arms of the Earls of Dartmouth and of a member of that family (Legge) in which the arms of George Washington are quartered with those of the Legges.

MARYLEBONE CHAPEL, High Street, Marylebone, W. 1.—The former Parish Church of the village of Marylebone (now replaced by St. Marylebone Church), was rebuilt in early 18th century. In the churchyard lie Allan Ramsay (poet), Hoyle (whist), Ferguson (astronomer), Charles Wesley (hymn writer) and his son Samuel Wesley (musician).

ST. ALBAN, Brooke Street, Holborn, E. C. 1.—A brick building by Butterfield (1858). Ritualistic and noted for its music; organ by Willis. Vicar, Rev. H. Ross. Services on Sundays: Holy Eucharist at 7 and 8; choral at 9.15; solemn, with sermon, at 11; matins, 10.30; litany, baptisms, and churchings at 1.15; children's service and catechising, 3.15; evensong at 6; mission service at 7 p.m. Open daily, 6.45 a.m. to 9 p.m.

ST. ANDREW BY THE WARDROBE, Queen Victoria Street, E. C. 4 (near the site of the King's Wardrobe). Rebuilt by Wren.

ST. ANDREW UNDERSHAFT, St. Mary Axe, Leadenhall Street, E. C. 3.—An early 16th century church, contains a monument of Stow, the London antiquary, and a memorial of Holbein. The organ is by Renatus Harris, the rival of Father Smith.

ST. ANNE'S, Wardour Street, Soho, W. 1.—Built in 17th century and noted for its music. Monument of William Hazlitt in the churchyard.

ST. BARTHOLOMEW'S Priory Church, Smithfield, E. C. 1, the oldest church in London (A.D. 1223).—Rector, Rev. W. F. G. Sandwith, M.A. Fine old Norman building, with tomb of the first prior, Rahere. N. transept restored and reopened in June, 1893. Crypt and Lady Chapel open; cloisters opened Dec. 2, 1904. Services daily 12.30 p.m. (except Sat. 11 a.m. and Thurs. 1.15 and 7 p.m.); Open free daily (Sundays for service only, 8.15; 11.0; 6.30.)

ST. BENET, Paul's Wharf, Upper Thames Street, E. C. 4.—Rebuilt by Wren, 1683; Inigo Jones, 1673-1684, and his father and mother, were buried in former church. St. Benet is the Metropolitan Welsh Church.

ST. BRIDE'S CHURCH, Fleet Street, E. C. 4.—Rebuilt by Wren, with beautiful spire (226 ft.). Samuel Richardson, the novelist, is buried in the nave. In the old church Lovelace, Sackville and William de Worde were buried, and Samuel Pepys was baptised.

ST. CLEMENT'S DANKS, Strand W. C. 2.—Rebuilt by Wren on site of earlier church assigned to the Danish settlers. The traditional burial place of Harold Godwinson (King Harold I., see p. 123) son of Canute. The organ is by Father Smith; the bells are those celebrated in the familiar nursery rhyme "Oranges and Lemons," and the air is among those played on the chimes (since 1800). Owing to the historical association of this church with the kingdom of Denmark, Danish ceremonies are now and then performed there. Dr. Johnson's pew in gallery and monument outside E. end.

ST. CLEMENT'S, Clement's Lane, Lombard Street, E. C. 3.—Rebuilt by Wren, contains handsome carvings on pulpit and font, and some chained books.

ST. DUNSTON IN THE MARK, Jdol Lane, Lower Thames Street, E. C. 3.—Rebuilt by Wren with fine tower and spire; rest of church rebuilt, 1817-1821; contains many monuments.

ST. EDMUND, KING AND MARTYR, Lombard Street, E. C. 3.—Rebuilt by Wren, with altar at north end; organ by Renatus Harris. Restored and re-opened 1899, after damage by Air Raid, July 7, 1947.

ST. ETHELBURGA'S, Bishopsgate, E. C. 2 (14th and 15th century).—On April 19, 1607, Henry Hudson (the navigator who gave his name to Hudson's Bay and to the Hudson River), his son John, and his ten sailors took communion in St. Ethelburga's, "purposing to goe to sea foure days after."

ST. GEORGE'S, Hanover Square, W. 1 (18th century; famous for fashionable marriages).—"George Elliot," Mr. Asquith, and Theodore Roosevelt were among those married here.

ST. GEORGE'S, Southwark, S. E.—(Rebuilt 1736) contains the tombs of Bishop Bonner (1497-1569) and Edward Cocker (1631-1673), the author of Cocker's "Arithmetick." (The expression, "according to Cocker," refers to this book.)

ST. GILES'S, Cripplegate, E. C. 1 (14th century).—Contains the graves of John Milton, John Foxe, and Sir Martin Froisher, the Elizabethan seaman, who attempted to discover a north-west passage to Cathay, and commanded the Princess as vice-admiral to Drake in his expedition to the West-Indies.

ST. HELEN'S, Bishopsgate, E. C. 2.—The "Westminster Abbey of the City" from its numerous monuments; building dates from 13th century. Contains a Shakespeare memorial window presented by Mr. William Prentice, an American.

ST. JAMES'S GARLICKHITHE, Garlick Hill, E. C. 4, has four stained glass windows, one of which was seriously damaged by a bomb by a German air raider on June 13, 1917. It is proposed that the window should not be completely replaced, and that year by year on the anniversary of the outrage the congregation should assemble for a service of thanksgiving for merciful preservation from sudden and violent death. The "Bomb" Sermon will be a modern counterpart of the "Lion" Sermon (see St. Katherine Cree, below).

ST. JAMES'S, Piccadilly, W. 1.—Built by Wren, with font and wood carvings by Grinling Gibbons. Lord Chesterfield and Lord Chatham were baptised in St. James's.

ST. JOHN'S, St. John's Square, Clerkenwell, E. C. 1.—Built in early 18th century, includes part of the ancient priory of St. John (12th century crypt).

ST. KATHERINE CREE, Leadenhall Street, E. C. 3. Rebuilt in early 17th century and ascribed to Inigo Jones. Contains a catherine wheel E. window, an organ by Father Smith, Archbishop Laud's prayer book and bible, and a monument of Sir Nicholas Throgmorton. The "Lion" sermon is preached here annually before the Lord Mayor and Corporation of London to commemorate the escape of a Lord Mayor (Sir John Gayer) from a lion in Algeria (Oct. 18, 1690).

ST. MAGNUS THE MARTYR, Lower Thames Street, E. C. 3.—Rebuilt by Wren, with steeple (125 feet) and lantern of great beauty, contains the tomb of Miles Coverdale (1488-1568), translator of the Bible, who was rector of St. Magnus (1564-1566) and Bishop of Exeter (1568-1570).

ST. MARGARET, Lothbury, E. C. 2.—Rebuilt by Wren, contains Grinling Gibbons carvings (font, chancel screen, and pulpit).

ST. MARGARET'S, Westminster, S.W. 2.—Founded 11th or 12th century; buildings date from 15th century, with frequent "restorations." The parish church of the Dominions beyond the Seas, and perhaps the most American spot in all London. The window over the western door was put up in 1882, at the cost of Americans, to the memory of Sir Walter Raleigh, who was executed in Old Palace Yard hard by, and whose headless body, and the body of his son Carew, lie in the chancel. The quadrain below is by James Russell Lowell. (See also Tower of London.) The Milton window, at the west end of the north aisle, was the gift of Mr. G. W. Childs, of Philadelphia, and bears an inscription by Whittier. Below the window is a tablet to Sir Peter Parker, who sailed the Menelaus up the Chesapeake during the war of 1812-14, and was killed while leading a landing party. On the south wall is a memorial window to Phillips Brooks, Bishop of Massachusetts; and over the vestry door is a window erected to Lady Arabella Stuart by an American lady. The church also contains the grave of Elizabeth, daughter of Robert Dinwiddie, Governor of Virginia.

ST. MARGARET PATTERNS, Rood Lane, Eastcheap, E.C. 3.—Rebuilt by Wren, with a leaden spire, contains two canopied pews and other curious survivals and relics.

ST. MARY, Aldermanbury, E.C. 2.—Rebuilt by Wren, contains the tomb of Judge Jeffreys and a marble monument to Lieutenant John Smith, "drowned off Staten Island in 1782" (John Heminge and Henry Condell (Shakespeare's editors) were buried in the older church).

ST. MARY WOOLNORTH (above the City and South London Tube Station), King William Street and Lombard Street, E.C. 3.—Built by Hawksmoor early 18th century, organ by Father Smith, contains a memorial to Sir Wm. Phipps, Governor of Massachusetts, who died in London in 1695.

ST. MICHAEL PATERNOSTER ROYAL, College Hill, Upper Thames Street, E.C. 4.—Rebuilt after the Fire by Strong (a pupil of Wren's), contains the tomb of "Dick Whittington" (see p. 565) and a Grinling Gibbons altarpiece.

ST. OLAVE, Hart Street, Mark Lane, E.C. 3.—A 15th century church, which survived the Fire of London, contains the tombs of Samuel Pepys and his wife, and a monument of John Waits, "President of the Council of New York;" also a memorial (formerly in All Hallows Staining) to Monks House Davison and Abram Newman, the exporters of the chests of tea which were thrown into Boston Harbour, Dec. 16, 1773. On Trinity Monday the Master and Brethren of Trinity House (q.v.) attend service here.

ST. PAUL'S, Covent Garden, W.C. 2.—Built by Inigo Jones. The tombstones round the exterior of the church record the burial places of Samuel Butler (Hudibras), Sir Peter Lely (Painter), Wycherley (Dramatist), Grinling Gibbons (Wood Carver), Dr. Arne ("Rule, Britannia"), and Macklin (Actor).

ST. PETER'S, Cornhill, E.C. 3.—Rebuilt by Wren, contains a carved choir screen also ascribed to him. The organ is by Father Smith.

ST. SEPULCHRE, Holborn, E.C. 1.—Part of this church escaped the Fire (see footnote, col. 2). The organ is by Benatus Harris, in a case attributed to Grinling Gibbons. Memorials in the church to Roger Ascham (Queen Elizabeth's tutor) and Capt. John Smith, "sometime Governor of Virginia and Admiral of New England," who would have been put to death but for the intercession of Pocohontas. (Princess Pocohontas is buried in Gravesend, see p. 567).

ST. STEPHEN'S, Coleman Street, E.C. 2.—The Rev. John Davenport, who, with other refugees, landed at Boston in 1637, and founded the colony of New Haven, Connecticut, in the following year, was vicar of this church from 1644 to 1633. The colony was composed in part of former residents of this parish. The tablet in the church to Davenport's memory was erected by one of his American descendants.

ST. STEPHEN'S, Walbrook, E.C. 4.—Rebuilt by Wren (and considered, with Bow Church, q.v., and St. Bride's, q.v., one of his greatest successes), contains the tomb of Sir John Vanbrugh (architect and dramatist), and a painting by Benjamin West.

SAVOY CHAPEL, Savoy Street, Strand, W.C. 2 (re-built about 1505, on site of 13th century Savoy Palace, restored after disastrous fire in 1864).—A Chapel Royal since 1780. Graves of Gavin Douglas and George Wither, and memorials of D'Oyley Carte. Sunday services at 11.15 and 6.

ST. SWITHIN'S CHURCH, St. Swithin's Lane, E.C. 4 (rebuilt by Wren after the Fire of London, but since modernised).—Contains embedded in its external (S.) wall London Stone, the milliarium from which in Roman times the miles (millia passuum) were measured. This stone is mentioned in King Henry VI., Pt. II.

THE TEMPLE CHURCH, south side of Fleet Street, E.C. 4.—The largest of the four remaining round churches in England, the other three being the Churches of the Holy Sepulchre at Cambridge, Northampton, and Little Maplestead (Essex). The Norman church, restored 1830-1840, is open to the public on week-days, 10.30 a.m. to 4 p.m., Saturdays excepted. Organ by Father Smith. Church service (famous music) on Sunday afternoons at 3 without orders; orders for service on Sundays at 11 a.m. may generally be obtained by writing to the Master of the Temple, E.C. 4. Service is discontinued in Aug. and Sept. Master of the Temple, Rev. W. H. Draper, M.A.

WHEN'S CHURCHES.—Many of the "Churches in the City of London were destroyed by the Fire of London (Sept. 2-6, 1666). Fifty of these were rebuilt by Wren during the rebuilding of St. Paul's Cathedral, and many of them contain wood carvings attributed to Grinling Gibbons. The total cost of the fifty churches was £263,766 10s. 4½d., the most expensive being St. Mary-le-Bow, £15,450 6s. 8½d. (£7,323 8s. 7½d. for "Bow Tower"), and the cheapest, St. Vedast-Foster (£1,853 15s. 6d.).

American soldiers and sailors may view the armoury, on request.

HORSE GUARDS, Whitehall, S.W.1.—Archway and offices built about 1750. The headquarters of the Commander-in-Chief until 1904. The mounting of the guard (1st or and Life Guards, or Royal Horse Guards) at 11 a.m. (10 a.m. on Sundays) and the dismounting at 4 p.m. are picturesque ceremonies. Only those on the Lord Chamberlain's list may drive through the gates and archway into Horse Guards' Parade. Horse Guards' Parade, where the Colour is "trooped" on the King's Birthday, is to be enlarged to 300,000 sq. ft. (Trafalgar Square is 168,820 sq. ft.; Parliament Square, 136,000 sq. ft.; Leicester Square, 100,000 sq. ft.).

HOUSES OF PARLIAMENT, Westminster, S.W.1.—The "Palace of Westminster" was rebuilt in 1240-1260 from the designs of Sir Charles Barry and Augustus Pugin, at a cost of about £3,000,000.—Open to visitors on Saturdays, and on Easter and Whit Mondays and Tuesdays, if neither House be sitting. Admission at the Norman Porch, House of Lords, on the above-mentioned days, from 10 a.m. to 3.30 p.m. Admission to the Strangers' Gallery of the House of Commons, during session, by member's order, or order obtained on personal application at the Admission Order Office in St. Stephen's Hall. The Victoria Tower (House of Lords) is 336 ft. high, and when Parliament is sitting the Union Jack flies by day from its flagstaff. The Clock Tower of the House of Commons is 300 ft. high and contains "Big Ben" (15½ tons), named after Sir Benjamin Hall, First Commissioner of Works when it was hung in 1856. A light is displayed from this tower when Parliament is sitting.

INNS OF COURT.—The Inner and Middle Temple, S. of Fleet Street, E.C. 4, and N. of Victoria Embankment, to which the gardens extend, occupy (since early 14th century) the site of the buildings of the Order of Knights Templars, the Temple Church (q.v.) surviving. Middle Temple Hall is Elizabethan, and in Middle Temple Gardens Shakespeare (Henry VI, Pt. 1) places the incident which led to the "Wars of the Roses" (1455-1485). Lincoln's Inn, from Chancery Lane to Lincoln's Inn Fields, W.C. 2, occupies the site of the palace of a former Bishop of Chichester and of a Black Friars monastery. It was founded early in the 14th century. The new Hall is modern, the Library is 15th century, and the old Hall early 16th century, the Chapel (Inigo Jones) early 17th century. Lincoln's Inn Fields contains many fine old houses with handsome interiors. Gray's Inn, Gray's Inn Road, W.C. 1, was founded in late 14th century. The Hall is 16th century (the "Comedy of Errors" was performed there in 1594); the Gardens were laid out (according to tradition) by Lord Chancellor Bacon (died 1626). No other "Inns" are active, but Staple Inn is now visiting as a relic of Elizabethan London; it has a picturesque gabled front on Holborn (opposite Gray's Inn Road), and the Hall, with hammer beam roof, is intact; in rear of the hall is a picturesque Dutch garden, restored by the present owners of Staple Inn (the Prudential Assurance Company). Clement's Inn (near St. Clement Dane's Church); Clifford's Inn, Fleet Street and Thavies Inn, Holborn Circus. Serjeants' Inn, Fleet Street, and another (now demolished) of the same name in Chancery Lane, were composed of Serjeants-at-Law, the last of whom died in 1899.

KENSINGTON PALACE, W. 8.—Enlarged by Christopher Wren for King William III. (1692), and continued as a royal residence until 1792. The birthplace of Queen Victoria in 1819. Closed to the public. Kensington Gardens (q.v.) adjoin.

LAMBETH PALACE, S.E. 1.—The official residence of the Archbishop of Canterbury, on south bank of Thames; the oldest part is 13th century, the house itself is early 15th century. For leave to visit the historical portions, applications should be made by letter to the Archbishop's Secretary.

LAMBETH PALACE LIBRARY.—Open to readers on Mondays, Wednesdays, Thursdays, and Fridays, 10 to 4; May to July, 10 to 4.30, and forenoon of Tuesday. A large collection of Kentish books, prints, and Diocesan history. Closed at Christmas and Easter, in September, and early part of October.

LAW COURTS, Strand, W.C. 2.—The Royal Courts of Justice were erected from the designs of G. E. Street (completed by Sir A. Blomfield and A. E. Street) in 1874-1882 at a cost of £1,000,000 (the site cost £1,500,000 in addition). Until they were occupied by the Supreme Court of Judicature (established in 1873 by the fusion of High Court, Chancery, Queen's Bench, Common Pleas, Exchequer, Probate, Divorce, and Admiralty) the Courts met in Westminster Hall (q.v.). The Central Hall is 136 ft. long.

LITTLE BRITAIN, Smithfield, E.C. 1.—Benjamin Franklin lived in Little Britain on his first coming to London. It was then a centre of the bookselling and printing trade, and Franklin is reputed to have set type in the works which extended into the Lady Chapel of St. Bartholomew's Church (q.v.).

LIVERY COMPANIES' HALLS.—The "Twelve Great Companies" (see p. 545) have magnificent halls, but admission to view them has generally to be arranged beforehand.

LONDON HOSPITAL, Whitechapel High Street and Road, E. 2.—Founded 1759. Hospital contains 930 beds.

LONDON MONUMENT (commonly called "The Monument"), Pudding Lane, Eastcheap, E.C. 3.—Built from designs of Wren, 1671-1677, to commemorate the Great Fire of London, which broke out in Pudding Lane, Sept. 2, 1666. The fluted Doric column is 302 feet high (the flames of fire 42 feet in addition), and is based on a square plinth, with fine carvings on W. face. Splendid views of London from gallery at top of column. Admission 3d., 9 to 6 (Oct.-April to 4).

LORD'S CRICKET GROUND, St. John's Wood Road, N.W. 8. The headquarters (since 1814) of the Marylebone Cricket Club, the premier cricket club in England and the governing body of cricket. Oxford and Cambridge, and Eton and Harrow matches at beginning of July. Lord's is also the Middlesex County Cricket Club headquarters, and the scene of some of the principal matches of the season. Admission to ordinary matches 2s., to special matches 2s. or 3s. (including tax). Tennis Court in building behind members' pavilion, where interesting games are played.

MANSION HOUSE, City, E.C. 4.—The official residence of the Lord Mayor; the Egyptian Hall and Ballroom are the chief attractions. Admission by order from the Lord Mayor's Secretary.

MARKETS.—The London markets (administered by the Corporation of the City of London) provide foodstuffs for 2,500,000 to 3,000,000 people. The dead meat market at Smithfield is the largest in the world, the supplies marketed amounting to nearly 500,000 tons annually. Central Meat, Fish, Fruit, Vegetable, and Poultry Markets, Smithfield; Leadenhall Market (Meat and Poultry); Billinggate (Fish), Thames Street; Spitalfields, E. 1 (Vegetables, Fruit, &c.); Cattle Market (Mon. and Th.; and Fri. for Horses) and Abattoirs, Caledonian Road, N. 2; Foreign Cattle Market, Deptford (temporarily closed). Other markets are—Covent Garden, W.C. 2 (established under a charter of Charles II. in 1662) and Borough Market, S.E. 1, for Vegetables, Fruit, Flowers, &c.

MARLBOROUGH HOUSE, Pall Mall, S.W. 1. (Not open to the public).—Built by Wren for the great Duke of Marlborough about 1710, and purchased as a London residence for the Prince of Wales in 1862. Now the London house of Queen Alexandra.

MAYFAIR.—A fashionable district of London, north of Buckingham Palace and east of Hyde Park, extends from Oxford Street (N.) to Piccadilly (S.), and from Bond Street (E.) to Park Lane (W.), includes Curzon Street and Grosvenor and Berkeley Squares. The most fashionable shopping centres of London are included in Mayfair in Old and New Bond Street and Oxford Street. Regent Street almost adjoins Mayfair.

MONUMENTS.—VICTORIA MEMORIAL in front of Buckingham Palace; ALBERT MEMORIAL, South Kensington; BEAconsFIELD, Parliament Square; BELGIAN, Victoria Embankment; BOADICÆ (more correctly "Boudicæ"), Queen of the Iceni, E. Anglia, Westminster Bridge; BURNS, Embankment Gardens; BURGHERS OF CALAIS (replica of Rodin's statue), Victoria Tower Gardens, Westminster; CAVELL, St. Martin's Place; CENOTAPH, Whitehall; CHARLES I. (erected Jan. 29, 1678), Trafalgar Square; CHARLES II. (Grinling Gibbons), inside the Royal Exchange; CLEOPATRA'S NEEDLE (68½ ft. high, erected 1878), Thames Embankment (the Sphinx, W. of pedestal, and the surrounding stonework, bear scars from an Air Raid); CAPTAIN COOK (Brock), the Mall; CRIMEAN, Broad Sanctuary; OLIVER CROMWELL (Thorncroft), outside Westminster Hall; DUKE OF CAMBRIDGE, Whitehall; DUKE OF YORK (224 ft.), St. James's Park; EDWARD VII., Waterloo Place (Mackennell); GEORGE III., Cockspur Street; GEORGE IV. (Chantrey) riding without stirrups, Trafalgar Square; GLADSTONE, facing Australia House, Strand; GUARDS', Waterloo Place; IRVING (Brock), N. side of National Portrait Gallery; JAMES II. (Grinling Gibbons), The Mall; ABRAHAM LINCOLN (St. Gaudens), facing Westminster Abbey; LONDON TROOPS, Royal Exchange; MILTON, St. Giles's, Cripplegate; MONUMENT, THE (see above), NELSON (124 ft.), Trafalgar Square; FLORENCE NIGHTINGALE, Waterloo Place; "PETER PAN" (Frampton), Kensington Gardens; RICHARD CŒUR DE LION (Marochetti), Old Palace Yard; ROBERTS, Horse Guards Parade; ROYAL ARTILLERY, The Mall; ROYAL MARINES, The Mall; SCOTT (Antarctic), Waterloo Place; SHAKESPEARE (Fontana), Leicester Square; GEORGE WASHINGTON (Houdon) Trafalgar Square; WELLINGTON, Hyde Park Corner; WELLINGTON (Chantrey) riding without stirrups, Royal Exchange; JOHN WESLEY, City Road; WOLSELEY, Horse Guards Parade.

PATENT OFFICE AND LIBRARY. 25 Southampton Buildings, W.C. 2 (built 1864).—The library (177,100 volumes) is open daily, from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. (In 1920 the Patent Office sealed 14,191 patents, registered 7,222 trade marks, and 12,071 designs, and made a profit of £96,507.)

PEOPLE'S PALACE. Mile End, E. 1.—Recreation Room and Winter Gardens, Concerts, Swimming and Private Baths, Billiard Tables, &c. Concerts every Sunday, 3.30 p.m. Admission free. Evening, 7 p.m. (small charge).

PORT OF LONDON.—The administration of the Port of London is under the "Port of London Authority" (see p. 244), whose offices adjoin Trinity House, Tower Hill, and extend to Crutched Friars. The offices were designed "on a really grand scale" by Edwin Cooper; the square building of Portland stone has a facade facing the estuary and is surmounted by a "temple of Neptune." The River Thames has a total length of 200 miles from its source in Gloucestershire to its mouth at the Nore. The tidal portion below Teddington Lock (70 miles) forms the Port of London, where one-third of the commerce of the United Kingdom is carried on. The value of the trade of the port was stated at £819,875,130 for 1919 and at £1,003,276,386 for 1920. The Port is served by the following Docks:—St. Katherine's Dock, E. 1 (23 acres), handling marine shells, spices, tea, marble, etc.; London Docks with Eastern Dock and Shadwell Basin, Wapping, E. 1 (200 acres), ivory, spices, rubber, wine, wool, tinned goods, etc.; Surrey Commercial Docks, Rotherhithe, S.E. 16 (380 acres), timber, grain and Canadian produce; West India Docks, E. 14 (241 acres), rum, sugar, grain, timber and frozen meat; Millwall Docks, Poplar, E. 14 (231 acres), the principal centre of the grain trade of London; East India Docks, Poplar, E. 14 (68 acres), Cape and American traffic; Royal Victoria and Albert Docks, E. 16 (1,100 acres), frozen meat, grain and tobacco; King George V., North Woolwich, E. 16, opened in 1921 (68 acres), provides accommodation for the largest steamers afloat. Tilbury Docks (596 acres), about 26 miles below London Bridge, for Australasian and Eastern routes.

POST OFFICE.—The "General Post Office" is in King Edward Street, E.C. 1, a handsomely-fronted, ferro-concrete building (Tanner), with marble inlaid hall, opened in 1910. The public Hall is open for usual postal business from 6.45 a.m. to 9 p.m. (Sat. 8 p.m.). In the neighbourhood are G.P.O. North and G.P.O. West (the Central Telegraph Office).

PRINCE HENRY'S ROOM. 17, Fleet Street, E.C. 4 (bought by the L.C.C. in 1900, and open free to 4 or 5) is in a timbered 17th century house, and contains a Jacobean plaster ceiling and Jacobean and Georgian panelling.

PUBLIC RECORD OFFICE. Chancery Lane, W.C. 2 (built 1835-1896).—Contains a collection of the National Records since 1200, brought together from various repositories (the Tower, State Paper Office, etc.). Search rooms open daily, with certain exceptions, from 10 to 4.30; Saturdays, 10 to 2. The Public Record Office Museum (open Mon. to Fri., 2 to 4 p.m.) contains Domesday Book (a vellum volumes) made by order of William the Conqueror in 1086, and "Domesday Chest"; letters patent of John Balliol swearing fealty to Edward I. (1292); receipt book of Henry VII.; letters of Nelson (and the log of H.M.S. Victory); Wellington's Waterloo dispatch; petition to George III. from Congress; letter from Washington to George III.; autographs of Chaucer, &c.; Lord Montagu's anonymous warning concerning the Gunpowder Plot (1605); bull of Pope Clement VII. confirming Henry VIII. as "Fidei Defensor" (1534); and many other documents of permanent interest; also monuments from the old Rolls Chapel (1377), part of an arch of which is preserved.

ROMAN LONDON.—Traces of the Roman occupation of London from the 1st century B.C. to the 5th century A.D. may still be seen in situ. There are remains of Roman baths at No. 3 Strand Lane, Strand, W.C. 2, and at the Coal Exchange, Lower Thames Street, E.C. 3. Portions of the Roman Wall which encircled London are still visible, including a bastion below the pavement of the yard of the General Post Office (fronting Giltspur Street). Other pieces of the wall may be seen in the disused churchyard of St. Alphage, Aldermanbury, E.C. 2; in the churchyard of All Hallows on the Wall, London Wall, E.C. 2; in Roman Wall House, Jewry Street and Crutched Friars, Aldgate, E.C. 3; below Leadenhall Market; and near the S.E. corner of the White Tower of the Tower of London. Many relics of Roman London may be seen in the Guildhall, British and London Museums (q.v.).

ROYAL EXCHANGE, Cornhill, E.C. 3, founded by Sir Thomas Gresham, 1566, opened by Queen Elizabeth 1571, rebuilt 1667-9 and 1842-1844.—Admission free. Statues of Queen Elizabeth, Charles II., Queen Victoria, Sir Thomas Gresham, Wellington (Chantry, riding without stirrups), Peabody, and others; frescoes in the ambulatory by Leighton, Abbey, Brangwyn, Wyllie, and others. Change, the busy time from 3 to 4 p.m. The chimes of the Royal Exchange (re-cast 1921) play English, Scottish and Irish melodies at 9 a.m., 12 noon, and 3 and 6 p.m.

ROYAL MINT, Tower Hill, E.C. 1 (building erected 1820), where gold, silver, and bronze are coined. Admission by order only, application for which should be made to the Deputy Master of the Mint, about 4 weeks in advance of intended visit.

ST. BARTHOLOMEW'S HOSPITAL, Smithfield, E.C. 1.—Founded A.D. 1123 by Rahere (see St. Bartholomew's Priory, p. 574). Present buildings mainly 18th and 19th centuries; main entrance 1702. The Great Hall contains a series of portraits including Henry VIII., Harvey, Abernethy, Pott, Radcliffe, &c. Hospital for 700 beds. The Church of St. Bartholomew the Less (rebuilt 1823) is within the hospital precincts; Inigo Jones was baptised in former church.

ST. GEORGE'S HOSPITAL, Hyde Park Corner, W. 1.—Founded in 1733. Hospital for 340 beds. Present buildings date from 1829.

ST. JAMES'S PALACE, in Pall Mall, S.W. 1.—(Not open to the public). Built by Henry VIII. (according to tradition, from designs by Holbein); the Gatehouse and Presence Chamber remain, and part of the Chapel Royal. A royal residence from 1569 to 1837. Royal Levees held here during the season. Representatives of Foreign Powers are still accredited "to the Court of St. James's," and (by the King's permission) the Conference of the Allies was held there in February, 1921.

ST. JOHN'S GATE, Clerkenwell, E.C. 1.—Now the Chancery of the Order of St. John of Jerusalem, and formerly the gate of the Priory of that Order, of which the gate (early 16th century) and Church (crypt 12th century) alone survive. The gatehouse may be inspected by written permission of the Secretary of the Chancery.

ST. THOMAS'S HOSPITAL, Albert Embankment, S.E. 1.—Founded 1223. Present buildings (7 red brick houses) by Currey, 1868-71. 1,000 beds.

SMITHFIELD, E.C. 1.—Sir William Wallace was executed there (1305) in the reign of Edward I., and Wat Tyler was "despatched" by Lord Mayor Walworth (1381) in the reign of Richard II. Anne Askew, a Protestant martyr (1540), was burned there in the reign of Henry VIII.; and under Mary I. (1553-1558) many suffered there for the Protestant faith. (A memorial is affixed to the W. wall of St. Bartholomew's Hospital.) The last to suffer for religion at Smithfield was Bartholomew Leggatt, Unitarian (1622), in the reign of James I. At the corner of Cook Lane (W. side of West Smithfield) is a small gilt figure commemorating the spot where the Fire of London was finally checked by the demolition of houses, Sept. 6, 1666. Smithfield Market occupies the W. side of West Smithfield.

SOMERSET HOUSE, Strand, W.C. 2, and Victoria Embankment, W.C. 2.—The beautiful river facade (600 feet long) was built at the close of the 18th century from the designs of Sir W. Chambers; the remainder of the building is early 19th century. Somerset House was the property of Lord Protector Somerset, at whose attainder in 1552 the palace passed to the Crown, and it was a royal residence until about the close of the 17th century. The building is now occupied by the Board of Inland Revenue and by the Principal Probate Registry and the office of the Registrar-General of Births, Marriages and Deaths. In the Probate Registry (Central Hall) are the wills (inter alia) of Shakespeare, Milton, Newton, Van Dyck, Pitt, Dr. Johnson, Nelson, Wellington and Burke.

STOCK EXCHANGE, E.C. 2. (Strangers not admitted).—Known in the City as the "House," was founded in 1773 and now consists of about 4,000 members. A "jobber" does business only with other members; a "broker" is the intermediary with the public. Speculators for a rise in prices are "bulls"; those for a fall are "bears." Chairman of the Stock Exchange, Sir Wilfrid Atlay; Secretary, General Purposes Committee, Edward Satterthwaite, C.B.; Secretary, Trustees and Managers, E. M. Brydson; Office, 23, Throgmorton St., E.C. 2.

THAMES EMBANKMENTS.—The Victoria Embankment, on the N. side (from Westminster to Blackfriars), was constructed by Bazalgette for the Metropolitan Board of Works, 1860-1870 (the seats, of which the supports of some are a kneeling camel, laden with spicery, and of others a winged sphinx, were presented by the Grocers' Company, and by Rt. Hon. W. H. Smith, M.P., in 1874); the Westminster to Vauxhall section, on the S. (Surrey) side, 1860-1869; the Chelsea Embankment, 1871-1874. The total cost exceeded £2,000,000. Sir Joseph William Bazalgette (1819-1891) also constructed the London main drainage system, 1859-1865, at a cost of £4,600,000. A medallion has been placed on a pier of the Victoria Embankment to commemorate the engineer of the Thames waterside improvements ("Flumini vincula posuit"). The County Hall scheme of the L.C.C. (now under construction) includes an embankment on the Surrey side giving a river approach to the County Hall.

THAMES TUNNELS.—The Rotherhithe Tunnel (foot passengers and vehicles), constructed by the L.C.C. and opened in 1908, connects Commercial Road East, with Lower Road, Rotherhithe; the total length is 1 mile 440 yards, of which 520 yards are under the river. The cost of the tunnel and its approaches was £1,560,042. The Blackwall Tunnel (foot passengers and vehicles) was constructed by the L.C.C. and opened in 1897, connects East India Dock Road, Poplar, with Blackwall Lane, East Greenwich. The total length of the tunnel is nearly 1½ miles, of which 407 yds. are under the river. The cost of the tunnel with its approaches was about £1,465,000.

* The "Sword of St. Paul" appears in the west quarter of the City Arms, not "Walworth's dagger" as once commonly believed.

Greenwich Tunnel (foot passengers only) constructed by the L.C.C. and opened in 1902, connects the Isle of Dogs, Poplar, with Greenwich. The length of the subway is 465 yards, and the cost was about £120,000. The Woolwich Tunnel (foot passengers only), constructed by the L.C.C. and opened in 1912, connects North and South Woolwich below the passenger and vehicular ferry from North Woolwich Station, E. 16, to High Street, Woolwich, S.E. 18. The length of the subway is about 300 yards, and its cost was £85,362. The Thames Tunnel (1300 feet) was opened in 1843 to connect Wapping (N.) with Rotherhithe (S.). In 1866 it was closed to the public, and purchased by the East London Railway Company. The Tower Subway for foot passengers was opened in 1870, and has long been closed.

TOWER HILL, E.C. 1 and E.C. 2, was formerly the place of execution for condemned prisoners from the Tower, the site of the scaffold being marked in the gardens of Trinity Square.

TOWER OF LONDON, E.C. 3 (built by William the Conqueror, A.D. 1066-1087).—Admission to Jewel House, on all week days, 6d.; White Tower and Armouries, including Vaults, 6d.; to Bloody Tower, on all week days, 6d. Free on Saturdays (except Jewel House and Bloody Tower) by tickets issued at the office at gateway. Open from 2 May to 30 Sept., 10 a.m. to 6 p.m.; 1 Oct. to 30 April, 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Not open on Good Friday, Christmas Day, or Sunday. Constable, Field-Marshal Lord Methuen, G.C.B., G.C.M.G., G.C.V.O.; Lieutenant, Gen. Sir G. F. Milne, G.C.M.G., K.C.B., D.S.O.; Major and Resident Governor, Major-Gen. H. Pipon, C.B.; Keeper of the Jewel House, Major-Gen. Sir George J. Young, husband, K.C.M.G., K.C.I.E., C.B.; Curator of the Armouries, Charles Foulkes, F.S.A. The Yeoman Warders ("Beefeaters") retain their picturesque Tudor uniforms. During the Great War the use of the Tower as a prison was revived. Sir William Wallace, King David II. and King James I. of Scotland, the "Little Princes" (Edward V. and his brother), Anne Boleyn, Katherine Howard, Lady Jane Grey, Queen Elizabeth, Cranmer, Ridley and Latimer and many others were imprisoned in the Tower. Sir Walter Raleigh was first committed to the Tower in July, 1602, and again in James I.'s day, after being condemned to death. The fruit of his many years' imprisonment in the Bloody Tower was his "History of the World"; and here he spent the last days before his execution in Old Palace Yard. William Penn was another famous Tower prisoner. While there he wrote his famous "No Cross, no Crown" and "Innocency with her Open Face."

TRAFALGAR SQUARE, S.W. 1.—This space was laid out in the second quarter of the 19th century in the Square are the Nelson Monument 145 feet high, with Landseer's lions round the base, and statues of Havelock, Napier, and Gordon. The plinth of the Nelson Monument was badly damaged by fire during the (unofficial) celebrations on Armistice Day (Nov. 11, 1918). In the facade of the N. Wall of Trafalgar Square are metal standard measures.

WESTMINSTER HALL, S.W. 1 (built by William Rufus, A.D. 1067-1100 and altered by Richard II., 1377-1399), adjacent to and incorporated in the House of Parliament.—Westminster Hall is part of the Palace of Westminster and survived the fire, which destroyed the remainder of the Palace (Oct. 26, 1834). The Hall is 200 feet long, 68 feet wide, and 30 feet high. The hammer beam roof of carved oak, dating from 1399, is one of the principal attractions. King Charles I. was tried in the Hall. For admission, see regulations as to Houses of Parliament.

WHITEHALL, opposite Horse Guards, S.W. 1.—Erected by Inigo Jones as a banquet-house for the projected Whitehall Palace. King Charles I. was beheaded here.

PARKS AND GARDENS.

HYDE PARK.—From Park Lane, W. 2, to Kensington Gardens, W. 2 (350 acres), containing the Serpentine. Fine gateway at Hyde Park Corner, with Apuley House, the Achilles Statue, Rotten Row and the Ladies' Mile. To the north-east is the Marble Arch, originally erected by George IV. at the entrance to Buckingham Palace and re-erected in present position in 1850.

KENSINGTON GARDENS, W. 2.—From western boundary of Hyde Park to Kensington Palace (240 acres), containing the Albert Memorial and "Physical Energy" (G. F. Watts), and the Round Pond. There is a sunk garden with pleached alleys, near Kensington Palace.

ST. JAMES'S PARK, S.W. 1 (93 acres).—From Whitehall to Buckingham Palace. An ornamental lake of 5 acres is spanned by a suspension bridge built in 1857, from which a magnificent view is obtainable towards Westminster eastwards and westwards to Buckingham Palace, but this view is now impeded by unsightly buildings erected for War purposes. The Wall leads from the Admiralty Arch to the Queen Victoria Memorial and Buckingham Palace. Birdcage Walk from Storey's Gate, past Wellington Barracks, to Buckingham Palace.

GREEN PARK, W. 1.—Between Piccadilly and St. James's Park (60 acres) with Constitution Hill, leading to Hyde Park Corner. The arch at the western entrance is surmounted by a quadriga by Capt. Adrian Jones.

REGENT'S PARK, N.W. 1.—From Marylebone Road to Primrose Hill (475 acres) surrounded by the Outer Circle and divided by the Broad Walk (fine flower beds and shrubs) leading to the Zoological Gardens.

BATTERSEA PARK, S.W. 8 to S.W. 11 (200 acres) with Sub-tropical Garden (4 acres) and large artificial lake.

VICTORIA PARK, E. 2 (275 acres), a great boon to the poor of East London. The Bethnal Green Museum (a branch of the Victoria and Albert Museum) is close by.

RIVERSIDE GARDENS.—On the north side of the Thames are the Temple Gardens and the Embankment Gardens, E.C. 4, the latter containing the Wateryate of York House (Inigo Jones), a small lily pond and sunk garden, and numerous statues. West of the Victoria Tower of the Houses of Parliament are Victoria Tower Gardens, S.W. 1.

In the principal quadrangle is a marble statue of George II., by Rysbrack. Naval Museum, interesting Collection of Models, &c., open daily, except Friday and Sunday, from 10 till 4 or 6. Chapel open daily except Sundays and Fridays, and after 4 p.m. on Saturdays. Greenwich Park (288 acres) was enclosed by Humphrey, Duke of Gloucester, and laid out by Charles II., from the designs of Le Notre. On a hill in Greenwich Park is Greenwich Observatory (founded 1675) the centre of longitude and of "Greenwich Time." Admission to the Observatory only by permission of the Astronomer Royal. The parish church of Greenwich (St. Afege) was rebuilt by Hawksmoor (Wren's pupil) in 1718, and contains a pulpit and other carvings attributed to Grinling Gibbons. General Wolfe (Heights of Abraham) and Tallis ("the father of Church Music") are buried in the church. Henry VIII. was christened in the former church. The Ministerial Whitebait Dinner, held for many years at the "Ship" Hotel, was last held in 1894.

HAMPSTEAD HEATH, N.W. 3 (250 acres), with Golden's Hill (36 acres) and Parliament Hill (265 acres) open to the public. "Belmont," Rosslyn Hill, was the residence of Sir Harry Vane, Governor of Massachusetts, and later of Bishop Butler, who is said to have written parts of his "Analogy of Religion" there. Hampstead Church contains a bust of Keats, who lived for a time at Lawn Bank (formerly called Wentworth Place).

HAMPTON COURT.—Sixteenth century Palace built by Cardinal Wolsey, and enlarged by Sir Christopher Wren for William and Mary, 15 miles from London. Fine view of river. Beautiful gardens with maze and prolific grape vine (planted in 1768). Old Royal Apartments and collection of pictures. Tennis Court, built by King Henry VIII. in 1530. Open every week-day (except Friday) and on Sundays. Hours: Jan., Feb., Nov., Dec., 10 to 4; Sun. 10 to 4; Mar., Apr., Oct., 10 to 4.

5. Sun. 2 to 5; May, June, July, Aug. and Sept., 2 to 6, Sun. 2 to 5. Admission, Mon., Wed. and Thur., 6d.; Tues., 2s. (children half price); Sat. and Sun. free. Bushy Park adjoins the Lion Gates of Hampton Court Palace.

HARROW-ON-THE-HILL.—22 miles by Metropolitan and other railways. Large public school (see to 300 scholars), founded by John Lyon in 1571. The "Fourth Form Room" dates from 1608.

HIGHGATE HILL AND HIGHGATE WOODS, the scene of the Dick Whittington legends, with Waterlow Park (30 acres) and Lauderdale House, formerly occupied by Nell Gwynne.

JORDANS AND CHALFONT ST. GILES, near Beaconsfield, Bucks, contain the Old Quaker Meeting House (1688) at Jordans, in the burial ground of which lies William Penn (Pennsylvania); a barn in the farm ground is believed to have been built out of the timbers of the Mayflower by the 17th century owner of Jordans (Gardener). At Chalfont St. Giles is the cottage where Milton lived during the Great Plague (1665-1666).

KINGSTON-UPON-THAMES, Surrey (about 22 miles from London), is the ancient place of coronation of the Kings of Saxon England. The Coronation Stone (hence the name "King's Stone") is preserved within railings in the market place.

RICHMOND, S.W. 14, contains the red brick gateway of Richmond Palace (Henry VIII, 1485-1509) and many buildings of the periods of Queen Anne (1702-1714) and George II. (1727-1760), including White Lodge in Richmond Park, the residence of George II. and the home of Queen Mary's mother (the Prince of Wales was born there June 23, 1804). Richmond Park (8,250 acres) contains herds of fallow and red deer. From the Terrace Gardens, Richmond Hill, can be obtained a wonderful view of the Valley of the Thames. Rugby football matches are played at the Athletic Ground (Richmond F.C.) and Old Deer Park (London Scottish F.C. and Rosalyn Park F.C.).

RUNNIMED.—A meadow of about 200 acres, on S. bank of Thames (part of the Crown Lands), between Windsor and Staines. From June 15-23, 1213, the hostile Barons encamped on this meadow during negotiations with King John, who rode over each day from Windsor. The 48 "Articles of the Barons" were accepted by the King on June 15, and were subsequently embodied in a charter, since known as Magna Carta, of which several copies were sealed on June 15. About half a mile N.E. of the meadow is the privately owned Magna Carta Island, which is claimed as the actual site of the sealing of the charter.

RYE HOUSE, at Hoddesdon, on the River Lee. Scene of the celebrated plot. Old castle and dungeons, pictures, oak fireplaces, chests and panels; Queen Elizabeth's bed; the Great Bed of Ware (mentioned in "Twelfth Night").

ST. ALBANS.—A city in Hertfordshire, on the river Ver, 22 miles N.W. of London. The abbey church, built partly of materials from the old Roman city of Verulamium by Paul of Caen, was consecrated in 1225. Parts still remain of the Norman structure, which was "restored" in late 19th century. The city was the scene of the overthrow of Henry VI. in 1455, and of the Earl of Warwick in 1461. On a printing press set up in the abbey the first English translation of the Bible was printed. Ruins of ancient City of Verulam; St. Michael's Church, with tomb of Lord Bacon.

STOKEN POSES (2 miles from Slough station on G.W. Ry.) contains the 14th century Church with the Churchyard of Gray's "Elegy" and "Ode on a Distant Prospect of Eton College." The poet was buried in the church in 1771. There is an eccentric "Bicycle" Window (1643) in an external cloister. (See also "Burnham Beeches.")

TWICKENHAM, Middlesex. — On left bank of Thames, opposite Richmond, contains Pope's Villa (rebuilt) and the poet's tomb in the parish church, near which is York House, where Queen Anne was born. At Strawberry Hill is Horace Walpole's house with ornamental garden. International and other Rugby football matches (Harlequins) are played at Twickenham.

WALTHAM ABBEY (or WALTHAM HOLY CROSS), 13 miles from London (G.E.Ry.).—The Abbey ruins, Harold's Bridge (12th century), the Nave of the former cruciform Abbey Church (the oldest Norman building in England, and the traditional burial place of King Harold II., 1066) and a Lady Chapel of Edward II., with crypt below. At Waltham Cross, 1 mile from the Abbey, is one of the crosses (partly restored) erected by Edward I to mark a resting place of the corpse of Queen Eleanor on its way to Westminster Abbey. (Ten crosses were erected, but only those at Geddington, Northampton and Waltham remain; "Charing" Cross originally stood on the spot now occupied by the statue of Charles I. at Whitehall).

WINDSOR CASTLE (built by William the Conqueror, A.D. 1066-1087).—22 miles from London, by Great Western and South Western Railways. When the Court is not in residence, the State Apartments of Windsor Castle are generally open to the public, during His Majesty's pleasure, on Mondays, Wednesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays. When open, as to which due notice is given in the Press, the Lord Chamberlain's tickets can always be obtained at the Inspector's Office in the Castle Yard. The charges for admission on Wednesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays are: Adults, 2s.; children, 6d., excepting to charitable societies, when the charge for admission will be one-half in each case, the proceeds to go, by the King's command, to local charities. On Mondays and on Bank Holidays no charge is made. An authorised guide book can be obtained at the ticket office, price 6d. The hours of admission to the State Apartments are from 1 April to 30 Sept., between 11 and 4; and from 1 Oct. to 31 March, between 11 and 3. The Albert Memorial Chapel and the Round Tower are open on the same days and at the same hours as the State Apartments, except that the Round Tower is closed during the winter. The royal stables and riding school may be viewed daily between the hours of 2 and 2.30. St. George's Chapel may be viewed on week-days (Fridays excepted), between 12.30 and 4.

WOOLWICH.—9 miles from London; S.E. & C.R. Dockyard Station for Barracks, Rotunda, &c. Old Dockyard; Extensive Barracks for Royal Artillery, Royal Army Service Corps, &c. Common for military evolutions. Rotunda daily, free, from 1 April to 30 Sept., 10 a.m. to 12.45 p.m. and from 2 p.m. to 5; 1 Oct. to 31 March, from 10 to 12.45 and from 2 to 4; Sundays, April to Sept., 2 to 5; Oct. to March, 2 to 4 p.m.

THEATRES IN 1920-21.—There was an anniversary performance of Gay's Beggar's Opera, revived after about two centuries (1729), at the Lyric Opera House, Hammersmith, in June 1920, and it was played for the 500th time on Aug. 17, 1921. The most notable new productions were A Bill of Divorcement (Clemence Dane), The Betrothal (Maeterlinck), If (Lord Dunsany) and Heartbreak House (G. B. Shaw); a G. B. Shaw Repertory season at the Old Drill Hall, Hampstead; and Opera in English and Shakespearean and other classical works at the "Old Vic," while Abraham Lincoln (Drinkwater) was brought to West End Theatres and achieved a 500th performance.

Record Runs.—The "record run" at a London theatre, in pre-war days, was held by Charley's Aunt (1,446 consecutive performances). The present record is 2,238 consecutive performances of Chu Chin Chow, which was produced at His Majesty's on Aug. 31, 1916, reached its 1,467th performance on Oct. 19th, 1919, and was withdrawn after its 2,238th performance (having brought in over £700,000) on July 22, 1921.

London's First Theatre.—A tablet has been affixed by the Records Committee of the London County Council on 88 Curtain Road, Shoreditch, to commemorate the site of "The Theatre" Shoreditch, the first theatre in London.

CINEMATOGRAH THEATRES.—It has been stated that there are upwards of 4,000 Picture Palaces and Cinematograph Theatres in the United Kingdom. The latest tendency is for first-rate authors and artists to co-operate for the production of high-class work, and the general level of the productions shows an upward movement. The following are the principal "Cinemas" and "Picture Theatres" in London:—

Broadway Garden Cinema, Waltham Green, S.W. 6.
Cinema de Paris, Bear St., Leicester Sq., W.C. 2.
Cinema House, 225, Oxford Street, W. 1.
Cinematograph Theatre, 21-25, Oxford St., W. 1.
Coronet Theatre, Notting Hill Gate, W. 11.
Holborn Cinema, 220, High Holborn, W.C. 1.
Kilburn Grange, High Road, Kilburn, N.W. 6.
King's Picture Playhouse, King's Road, Chelsea, S.W. 3.
Leicester Square Cinema, Leicester Square, W.C. 2.
Maida Vale Palace, 140, Maida Vale, W. 9.
New Gallery Cinema, 121A, Regent Street, W. 1.
Palais de Luxe Cinema, 17, Great Windmill Street, W. 1.
Palace Theatre, Cambridge Circus, W. 1.
Pavilion, Marble Arch, W. 1.
Pavilion, Shaftesbury Avenue, W.C. 2.
Picture House, 165, Oxford Street, W. 1.
Polytechnic, Regent Street, W. 1.
Scala, Charlotte Street, Fitzroy Square, W. 1.
Stoll Picture Theatre, Kingsway, W.C. 2.
Strand Cinema, Agar Street, Strand, W.C. 2.
Terry's, Strand, W.C. 2.
Victory Cinema, Bloomsbury, W.C. 2.
West End Cinema, 3, Coventry Street, W. 1.

THE WORLD'S LITERATURE.

BOOKS.—It is estimated that over 155,000 books, pamphlets and magazines are published annually in the various countries of the world, and that over 14,000,000 separate works have been published since printing was invented in the fifteenth century. The three largest libraries in the world are the Bibliothèque Nationale, Paris, which contains over 5,000,000 volumes, the British Museum Library, London, where there are 40 miles of shelves, and an estimated total of about 5,000,000 volumes, and the Library of Congress, Washington, D.C., which contains 2,000,000 volumes. In most countries one or more libraries are entitled to have sent to them a free copy of every published book. In the United Kingdom, under an Act of 1835, a copy of every book published in the country must be sent to the British Museum, the Bodleian, Oxford, the University Library, Cambridge, the Advocates' Library, Edinburgh, and the Library of Trinity College, Dublin, while a sixth copy was added for the National Library of Wales by the Copyright Act of 1921.

NEWSPAPERS.—It has been stated that over 60,000 newspapers are published at daily or weekly intervals in the various quarters of the globe. Of these considerably over one-half are in the English language, there being 23,000 in the United States, and over 13,000 in the British Empire. The most celebrated newspaper in the world is The Times, founded in London in 1788. The greatest circulation is that of the Daily Mail, founded in London on May 4, 1866. During the newspaper strike in Paris, La Presse sold 4,120,000 copies in one day (Nov. 28, 1919).

In the Metropolitan Police Area Motor Cabs are fitted with a taximeter, which records the fare by a combination of time and distance. The Secretary of State has authorised the addition of 50 per cent. to the charges shown on the taximeter, the increase being operative from March 1, 1900, and applying also to the charges for luggage and extra persons. In addition to the legal fare and charges for luggage and extra persons, the Secretary of State has authorised an additional charge of 6d. for every hiring of a Horse Cab. Notice in relation to the increased charges must be conspicuously displayed inside Motor and Horse Cabs unless the vehicle is fitted with a meter showing the correct fares.

MOTOR CABS.

FARE payable for the hiring of a Motor Cab fitted with a Taximeter, including the increases noted in the leading paragraph:—

(a) Not exceeding one mile, or for a period s. d.
of time not exceeding ten minutes... x 0

(b) Exceeding one mile or ten minutes:—
(1) For each quarter of a mile, or for a period of time not exceeding two and a half minutes 0 3

(a) For any less period or distance..... 0 3

In addition to the above the driver is entitled to charge the following extra payments:—

(1) Luggage:—Whether hired by distance or by time—for each bicycle, child's mail cart, or perambulator, 6d.; for each package carried outside 0 3

(a) Extra persons:—When licensed to carry more than two persons—for each additional person beyond two, the whole journey..... 0 9

Provided that one child or two children under the age of ten years shall count as one person.

HORSE VEHICLES.

Exclusive of the extra 6d. noted in the leading paragraph.

FARES BY DISTANCE (Cabs either with or without a Distance Recorder, but without a Taximeter): If hired and discharged within the Four-Mile Radius, for any distance not exceeding two miles x 0

The driver may notify, by means approved by the Commissioner of Police, that he is willing to accept a fare of 6d. for any journey not exceeding a mile. s. d.

For every additional mile or part of a mile 0 6

If hired outside the Four-Mile Circle, wherever discharged, for the first and each succeeding mile or part of a mile x 0

If hired within, but discharged outside the Four-Mile Circle, whole distance not exceeding one mile, 1s.; exceeding one mile, then for each mile ended within the circle, 6d.; and for each mile or part of a mile ended outside x 0

FARES BY TIME: Inside the Four-Mile Circle. Four-wheeled Cabs, for one hour or less, 1s.; two-wheeled Cabs. s 6

If above one hour, for every quarter hour of the whole time and for any less period, four-wheeled Cab, 6d.; if two-wheeled Cab 0 8

If hired outside the Circle, wherever discharged, for one hour or less s 6

If above one hour, then for every quarter hour of the whole time and for any less period 0 8

If hired within, but discharged outside, the Four-Mile Circle, the same.

EXTRA PAYMENTS.—Hirers of Cabs should particularly notice these regulations, as disputes generally arise from their not being clearly understood.

Whether hired by DISTANCE OR TIME.

LUGGAGE.—For each bicycle, child's mail cart, or perambulator, 6d.; for each package carried outside the carriage 0 s

NOTE.—Luggage carried on the footboard of a hansom-pattern cab so that the doors do not close over it is deemed to be outside within the meaning of this clause.

EXTRA PERSONS.—For each above two (one child or two children under 10 years of s. d. age count as one person) 0 6

WAITING.—When hired by distance, and at the request of the hirer made to wait: for every 15 minutes completed—if hired within the Four-Mile Circle, 4 wheels, 6d.;

3 wheels 0 8

If hired without Circle, 3 or 4 wheels ... 0 8

GENERAL REGULATIONS.

GENERAL REGULATIONS.—The fares by Taximeter Motor Cabs are based upon a combination of time and distance. When the cab is kept waiting, delayed by traffic, or caused to travel at the rate of less than six miles an hour, then the charge is by time. When travelling at a speed of six or more miles an hour, then the charge is by distance. Fares for horse-drawn cabs are according to distance or time, at the option of the hirer, expressed at the commencement of the hiring; if not otherwise expressed, the fare to be paid according to distance; but driver can refuse to be hired by time between 8 p.m. and 6 a.m.

DRIVER, if hired by distance, is not compelled to drive more than six miles, nor more than one hour if hired by time; further, if hired by time, the driver may be required to drive at any rate not exceeding four miles an hour; if required to drive more than four miles within the hour he may demand, in addition to the fare regulated by time, for every mile or any part exceeding four miles, the fare regulated by distance.

AGREEMENT to pay more than legal fare is not binding.

If the driver agree beforehand to take any sum less than the proper fare, the penalty for demanding more than the sum agreed upon is 40s.

The driver of every cab shall have with him, and when required produce, the Authorized Book of Distances, and every driver of any cab shall, if so required, deliver to the hirer a printed ticket, showing cab number, name and address of Proprietor, &c.

Driver may demand a reasonable sum as a deposit from persons hiring and requiring him to wait at any place, over and above the fare to which the driver is entitled for driving thither. Penalty 40s., if driver, having received such deposit, refuse to wait, or go away before the expiration of the time for which the deposit shall be a sufficient compensation; or if the driver shall refuse to account for such deposit.

The London Cab Act, 1896, enacts that if any person hires a cab, knowing, or having reason to believe, he cannot pay the fare; or, fraudulently endeavours to avoid payment of a fare; or, having failed, or refused, to pay a fare, refuses, or gives a false address, is liable, in addition to the fare, to a penalty of 40s.

The fares legally demandable by a stage carriage are those painted in a conspicuous manner on the inside of every such carriage, and they are recoverable in a summary way before a Justice of the Peace, in the same way as fares for a hackney carriage.

All property left in any cab shall be deposited by the driver (and in the case of a stage carriage, by the conductor, or driver if no conductor) at the nearest Police Station within twenty-four hours, if not sooner claimed by the owner; such property to be returned to the person who shall prove to the satisfaction of the Commissioner of Police that the same belonged to him, on payment of all expenses incurred, and of such sum to the driver as the Secretary of State has by order prescribed. Property found in a stage carriage by a passenger must be given up to the conductor under a penalty of £10.

All inquiries, &c., relating to public carriages should be addressed to the Public Carriage Office, New Scotland Yard; but inquiries as to property left in a cab or stage carriage should be made at the Lost Property Office, New Scotland Yard. Office hours, 10 to 4.

LAMPS TO BE LIGHTED.

The following regulations apply to lighting and carrying of lamps on vehicles:—

Motor Cars.—A white light placed on the extreme off-side, and visible within a reasonable distance toward which the car is proceeding or intended to proceed. This lamp should show a red light to the rear unless a red light is fixed on the rear of the vehicle. To be lighted one hour after sunset and kept till one hour before sunrise.

A lamp for the illumination of the rear number plate to be lighted half an hour after sunset.

Motor Cycles.—A white light to the front, but if it has a side-car attached a red light to the rear must also be shown.

The lamp need not be placed on the extreme off-side unless the side-car is attached or projects beyond the off-side of the motor bicycle.

The front or rear plate must be illuminated half an hour after sunset.

Horse Drawn.—If only one lamp is carried it must be on the extreme off-side to show a white light to the front visible for a reasonable distance. If a light is shown to the rear it must be red.

N.B.—In certain localities a red light or red reflex light is requisite.

STREET ACCIDENTS IN U.K., 1900.

In addition to the accidents on the various railways of the U.K., there were no fewer than 57,747 accidents caused by vehicles on streets and roads in 1900. Of this number 2,837 were fatal and 54,910 non-fatal, compared with 2,628 fatal and 48,698 non-fatal accidents in 1912.

If a load projects more than 6 ft. to the rear a red light must be shown to the rear.

Traction Engines must show two efficient lights to the front between the hours of one hour after sunset and one hour before sunrise from April 1 to Sept. 30, and between sunset and sunrise the remaining six months.

The lamps must be provided with shutters to enable them to be temporarily screened.

HARVESTING.—County Councils have power to make orders exempting vehicles used for the purpose of harvesting from carrying lights.

STAGE CARRIAGES licensed in the Metropolitan Police District must carry a lamp inside, properly lighted, between sunset and sunrise.

HACKNEY CARRIAGE STATISTICS.

During 1900 there were licensed public carriages:—Hansom, 34; clarences—animal 487, mechanical 6,025; omnibuses—animal 28, mechanical 3,347; tramway cars—mechanical 2,740; total, 12,651. Drivers and conductors:—Cab drivers—animal 721, mechanical 8,934; stage drivers—animal 7, mechanical 10,633; composite licences (stage driver and conductor)—animal 11; mechanical 2,305; conductors, 11,593; total, 34,201.

HACKNEY AND STAGE CARRIAGE DRIVERS before obtaining a licence are required to pass an examination as to their ability to drive, and hackney carriage drivers, in addition, have to pass an examination as to their knowledge of town. It extends to a knowledge of the principal squares, clubs, hospitals, hotels, theatres, streets, and public buildings in London. During 1900, of 614 men examined, 451 were successful. The proportion of drivers to hackney carriages is 147 drivers to 20 carriages.

LOST PROPERTY.

Of lost property, 70,802 articles were deposited, of which 30,675 were claimed by the owners. The number of awards paid to drivers, &c., was 28,128.

BANKRUPTCY STATISTICS.

England and Wales.

The total proceedings begun in all courts during 1918 was 428,925, as compared with 666,715 in the preceding year, a decrease of 177,757, or 27 per cent. As in previous years, the falling-off is almost wholly in proceedings commenced in county courts, these declining from 609,526 to 438,122, a decrease of 171,344, or 28 per cent. If the county court figures are excluded from the total of proceedings commenced, the decrease in the other courts was only 6,413, or 11 per cent.

Both bankruptcy petitions and companies winding-up proceedings have steadily diminished, the former since 1908 and the latter since 1912. Bankruptcy petitions fell from 3,333 to 2,176 during the war, a decrease of 68 per cent. Actions in county courts decreased from over 1,000,000 in 1914 to under 500,000 in 1918. On the other hand, the average amount claimed per plaint rose from £3 in 1913 to £4 7s. 6d. in 1918.

TITHE RENT CHARGE.

THE Tithe Rent Charge is based on the septennial average price of wheat, barley, and oats, the basic price per imperial quarter being taken at 36s. 6d. for wheat, 31s. 8d. for barley, and 22s. for oats (the Charge being £100 when based on these figures). The Charge for 1913 was £74 14s. 9½d.; for 1916, £83 2s. 6½d.; for 1917, £92 12s. 0½d.; and has been fixed until Jan. 1, 1926, by the Tithe Act (1918) at £109 3s. 12d.

COMMUNISM IN EUROPE.

THE Moscow Pravda states that fifty-one Communist parties, with 2,800,000 members, have joined the Communist International. Russia, with 500,000 Communists, occupies the first place, Germany and Czechoslovakia, with 350,000 each, coming second, followed by France with 120,000, Norway with 97,000, and Italy with 70,000. The Young People's Communist International has 800,000 members.

THE CHILTERN HUNDREDS.

RESIGNATION OF MEMBERS OF PARLIAMENT.—No duly elected member of the Commons can resign his seat; he must apply for some office of profit under the Crown, and so vacate his seat under the Act of Settlement, 1707 (6 Anne, c. 7), and the usual practice is to apply for the Stewardship of the Chiltern Hundreds, or of the Manor of Poyning, or Northstead, or the Exchequer of Munster, whereupon the seat is declared vacant (under the Place Act of 1742, which expressly permitted acceptance of such offices to serve as an excuse for resignation) and a new writ is issued by the Speaker.

PRIME MINISTER'S RESIDENCE.

DOWNING STREET, Whitehall, S.W. 1.—Named after a politician of Charles II.'s reign. No. 10 is the official town residence of the Prime Minister. No. 11 is the office of the Chancellor of the Exchequer, and No. 12 is the office of the Government Whip. Chequers, a country residence for Prime Ministers (from Jan. 1, 1921), was accepted by Mr. Lloyd George in 1917 (from an endowment to maintain the estate, &c.) from Lord and Lady Lee of Fareham. In 1921 the Chequers Estate of 200 acres was added to the gift by Lord Lee. Chequers is a Tudor mansion in the Chilterns, about 3 miles from Princes Risborough, Bucks, and contains a collection of Cromwellian portraits and relics.

The Indian Empire.

THE INDIAN EMPIRE extends over a territory larger than the Continent of Europe without Russia. Legally, "British India" means all territories governed by the King-Emperor through the Governor-General of India, or through any officer subordinate to him; while "India" means British India, together with any territories of any prince or chief under the suzerainty of His Majesty, exercised through the Governor-General of India or any officer subordinate to him (Act 52-8 Vict., c. 68, s. 18). There are tracts of tribal territory on the N.W. and N.E. frontiers under the political influence, though not yet under the administrative rule, of the Indian Government.

Boundaries.—The political boundary of India marches with Persia from the Gulf of Oman to near Zulfikar on the Harirud; then with the former Russian Empire along the frontier laid down by agreement in 1885; as far as the Oxus at Khamiab; thence along the Oxus by the Panjah branch up to the Victoria lake, and from the east end of that lake by the line demarcated in 1895 up to Povalo Schveikovski on the Taghdumbash Pamir, where three empires—the British, Russian, and Chinese—meet. From this point the frontier—in many parts not yet clearly defined—touches the Chinese Empire, mainly along the crests of the Mustagh (Karakoram) range and the Himalayas, till the limits of French Indo-China are reached on the Upper Mekong. The Indian frontier, on leaving the Mekong, marches with Siam till it reaches the sea at Victoria Point, half-way down the Malay peninsula. Beyond the sea the Indian Empire includes the Andaman and Nicobar Islands, the Laccadive and Minicoy Islands, Aden and Perim, besides protectorates over Socotra, Bahrain, and various chiefships along the coast from Aden to the Persian Gulf. Continental India, including Baluchistan, reaches from 8° to 37° N. latitude, and from 61° to 101° E. longitude. Delhi, the new capital, lies in 77° E. long.

Area and Population.—The total area of India proper is about 1,803,000 square miles, with a population of over 319 millions (about three-fourths of the population of the British Empire). The British Provinces, as distinguished from the Indian States, comprise 61 per cent. of the area, and nearly 78 per cent. of the population. The details are as follows:—

* Districts and Administered Territories.

Physical Features.—Excluding Burma, which forms no part of the Indian peninsula, we may broadly divide the country into three sections, viz., the Himalayan region, the northern river-plains, and the southern table-land.

The Himalayas.—The Himalayas (which lie partly beyond the frontier), with their southern offshoots, form the natural northern boundary of India. The Himalayan range runs for 1,500 miles from N.W. to S.E., with a varying breadth of 150 to 200 miles, and attains a general height of 20,000 feet above the plain, culminating in the loftiest peaks yet measured on the globe—Mount Everest, 29,141 feet, Kunchinjunga, 28,146 feet, and Dhaulagiri, 26,826 feet, near the centre of the range; and Mount Godwin Austen, 28,250 feet, near its junction with the Hindu Kush. The line of perpetual snow is at about 15,000 feet. The Himalayas collect and store up water for the plains below. The slopes afford a representation of the tropical zone (especially on the southern slopes to the E.), the temperate zone (particularly to the S.W. of the range), and the arctic zone as the upward journey is taken from the plains. In the Himalayas are several sanatoria, including Murree, Simla, Mussoorie, Naini Tal, and Darjiling. Himalayan vegetation includes such varied species as the tree-fern, ilex, pine, oak, fir, deodar (cedar), rhododendron, barley, oats, millet, and many domestic vegetables. The fauna are as varied as the flora, and include the bison, musk-deer, yak, wild sheep and goat, bear, elephant, monkey, and tiger, with eagles, partridges, and pheasants. Between the Himalayas and the plains to the S.E. is the great fever-haunted Tarai or Duar jungle, densely forest-covered and full of big game.

The Great Plain.—The northern river-plains, lying at the foot of the Himalayas, comprise the rich alluvial plains watered by the Indus, the Ganges, the Lower Brahmaputra, and their tributaries. At no great distance from one another, four rivers take their rise in the Himalayas. The sources of two are on the north side—the Indus, which flows westward for 1,800 miles, and the Tsan-po or Brahmaputra, which flows eastward for nearly 1,500 miles. The other two, on the southern slope, are the Sutlej, which, after flowing W. and S.W. for 900 miles and collecting various other streams, joins the Indus, and the Ganges, which, during a journey S.E. and E. of about 1,550 miles, drains almost all the Bengal plain. The Brahmaputra, after flowing along the northern side as far as the eastern extremity of the Himalayas, turns sharply to the S., then to the W., and finally joins the Ganges, 75 miles from where their combined streams enter the Bay of Bengal. Thus the Himalayas supply India with the water gathered on both slopes. The Indus and Ganges, with their tributaries, are the source of an extensive system of irrigation by canals. The richest, most populous, and most historically famous part of India lies in the basins of these great rivers. Formerly the Ganges was the only great highway of Bengal; it is still the fertiliser and the water-carrier. But a close network of railways is increasingly used for transport. The richness of the Indo-Gangetic plain, with its ample rainfall, enables it to support a dense population, almost wholly agricultural. The density of the population rises in some districts to 900 per square mile. On the other hand, in Baluchistan there are only 6 persons to the square mile. The population has increased most in the densest areas, and pressure on the soil is severe in parts of Bihar and the United Provinces. In Northern India there are two harvests, rabi (spring) crops being reaped in March and April, kharif (autumn) crops in October to December. In the north we find wheat, pulse, maize, millet, barley, and tea; while in the south, indigo, cotton, sugar-cane, jute, oilseeds, tobacco, opium, and spices are produced. Among the fauna are monkeys, panthers, tigers, leopards, hyenas, jackals, squirrels, elephants, deer, crocodiles, and snakes. Salt, mica, and coal are the chief minerals. The Ganges delta yields rice, bamboos, and a large variety of palms. The Aravalli range, the primeval chain of India, divides Rajputana from the Central India States. To the N.W. of the peninsula lies the mountainous, barren, and thinly populated region of Baluchistan.

The Deccan.—Just as the Himalayas on the N. and the Hindu Kush and Suleiman Mountains on the N.W. form natural barriers of defence for Hindustan, so do the Vindhya Mountains, running almost due E. from the head of the Gulf of Cambay, north of the Nerbudda River, form a firm southern boundary to the river-plains of Northern India. Southern India, or the Deccan, is a plateau of triangular shape and very old geological formation, bounded on two sides by the Malabar and Coromandel coasts, which converge at Cape Comorin, and on the third by the Vindhyas. The Eastern and Western Ghats all but complete this environing triangle of mountain ranges. In the extreme N.W., south of the Vindhyas, and parallel to them, but north of the Western Ghats, we find the Nerbudda and the Tapi flowing westwards, their basins being sharply defined by the Satpura Mountains, which lie midway between them. As the Western Ghats lie close to the coast, and afford no exit for rivers, there are no streams on the Malabar coast south of the Tapi; all the rivers flow eastwards, through defiles in the Eastern Ghats, into the Bay of Bengal. The four chief rivers are the Mahanuddy, in the extreme N.E. (520 m.), the Godavery (900 m.), the Kistna (800 m.), and the Canvery (472 m.), at intervals further to the south. The physical geography of Southern India has shaped its history: the S.W. coast, shut in by mountains, is very primitive and moves slowly; the S.E., open and easy of access by sea and towards the interior, has made great progress. The mountain slopes of this region, especially those of the Western Ghats, which rise to 8,000 feet in the Nilgiris, are still covered with the splendid vegetation of primeval forests. Teak, ebony, satinwood, sandalwood, palm, and bamboo abound. The jungles in the E. are very deadly. The tiger, bison, leopard, deer, and various smaller game afford sport. Snakes are found everywhere. In the valleys and on the higher plains many valuable crops are raised, chiefly rice, millet, cotton, oilseeds, coffee, tea, indigo, tobacco, and chinchona. The black cotton soil is very fertile. There is irrigation by dams, wells, tanks, and canals. The southern tableland has furnished considerable supplies of minerals. At present the minerals principally worked are coal, manganese ore, mica, monazite, and gold.

Burma.—Beyond the Bay of Bengal is the large province of Burma, watered by the Irrawaddy and its tributaries and by the Salween. The delta region is flat; further inland are hills and rolling downs; while the north is mountainous. Rice is the chief staple. Millet, cotton, sesamum, and tobacco are also grown. The forests, particularly of teak, make a considerable contribution to the exports. Petroleum is produced on a considerable scale, and jade, wolfram, and rubies are mined. The fauna include monkeys, jackals, tigers, elephants, bison, and deer.

Climate.—About half of India is within the tropics, but the greatest extremes of heat and cold are in the N.W. In the Himalayas the climate is moist and cold. In Northern India it is dry, and the winters are rather cold. In tropical Southern India the climate is more equable. Calcutta, Bombay, and Madras all have an equable climate, owing to proximity to the sea. India depends for its fertility upon the monsoon rains. The S.W. monsoon brings moisture from the ocean south of the Equator, and reaches the west coast early in June and the northern provinces late in June. The mountains arrest these currents and precipitate rainfall, which averages 60 inches in the sub-Himalayan region, 39 inches in the Indo-Gangetic plain, and 30 inches in the Deccan, but is small in Sind and Rajputana. Madras benefits by the N.E. monsoon in the autumn.

Population.—The fifth general census of India was taken on the 18th March, 1921. The provisional census returns gave a population of 319,075,132, as compared with 315,156,396 in 1911 (for details see p. 603), an increase in the ten years of about 1 1/2 per cent. The census total of 1921 is divisible into 247,138,396 (or over 77 per cent.) for British India, and 71,936,736 (or over 22 per cent.) for Indian States. India is not over-populated, for two-thirds of the people live on one-quarter of the area. In Burma, Assam, and elsewhere a much larger population might subsist. There were in 1921 30 towns with a population of over 100,000. Urban areas of over 5,000 people comprise only about 10 per cent. of the total population.

Caste.—Owing to the operation of the caste system India is broken up into a large number of mutually exclusive aggregates, the members of which are forbidden by an inexorable social law to marry outside the group to which they themselves belong. A caste may be defined as a collection of families, or groups of families, bearing a common name, which usually denotes or is associated with a specific occupation. The boundary of a caste may be said to be fixed by the rule restricting intermarriage, but its social status depends on the occupation of its members and their habits in respect of diet.

Religions.—The population by religions in 1911* includes 217,586,892 Hindus (69 per cent. of the total), 66,647,299 Muhammadans (21 per cent.), 10,721,453 Buddhists (3 per cent.), nearly all in Burma, leaving 7 per cent. for all other religions, including 3,876,203 Christians (three-fifths of whom are in Madras, Travancore, and Cochin), 3,014,466 Sikhs (a large increase), 1,248,182 Jains (a decline, ascribed to plague), 100,006 Parsis, and 10,295,168 described as Animists, who believe in magic and strive to propitiate impersonal forces. The Muhammadans, who are increasing faster than the Hindus, are infected with the caste system and other Hindu characteristics. The number of Indian Christians has increased nearly threefold since 1872.

Occupations.—Over 72 per cent. of the population was in 1911* dependent on pasture and agriculture. Industrial occupations support 35,000,000 persons, of whom nearly one-fourth are dependent on textile industries. The most important of these are industries connected with cotton, which employ nearly 6,500,000 persons, the majority of whom depend on hand-weaving. The public services support over 5,000,000 persons.

Sex.—Marriage is almost universal owing to religious obligations. The movement against infant marriage and enforced widowhood is gaining ground. There were in 1911* over 26,400,000 widows in India. The males outnumbered the females in 1921 in the proportion of 1,000 to 945.

* Census figures for 1921 not yet available.

Languages.—India has 220 vernacular languages, of extraordinary variety. The languages spoken by 312,912,624 persons in 1911 are grouped in four families; and 23 languages belonging to these families are spoken by not less than one million persons each. The principal languages are Hindi (spoken by 82,003,235 persons), Bengali (48,367,915), Telugu (23,544,861), Marathi (19,806,636), Tamil (18,128,365), Punjabi (15,876,758), Rajasthani (14,067,590), Western Hindi (14,037,882), after which come Gujarati, Kanarese, Oriya, Burmese, and Malayalam. Hindustani, a dialect of Hindi, has become the literary language of Hindustan, and is the lingua franca of India. English is understood by many.

India under the Crown.

For a brief sketch of Indian History from 326 B.C. the date of Alexander's invasion of India, to 1858, see WHITTAKER'S ALMANACK for 1917, page 566 et seq.

IN 1857, during Earl Canning's administration, a mutiny of sepoys broke out on the 10th May at Meerut, and spread through the whole Bengal Army. Delhi was for some months in the possession of the rebels, and many chiefs joined the revolt. The siege of Delhi, the massacre at Cawnpore, the relief of Lucknow, and the Central India campaign stand out among the stirring events of that momentous time. Although the control of Indian affairs was vested in the Cabinet through the Board of Control, the great mutiny was laid to the charge of the East India Company, whose eventful annals were brought to a close by the transfer of the entire administration of India to the Crown.

INDIA UNDER THE CROWN.—The "Act for the Better Government of India" established the authority of the Crown; and a Proclamation to the Princes, Chiefs, and People of India, dated the 1st Nov., 1858, announced the resolution of Her Majesty to assume the government of the territories in India "heretofore administered in trust by the Honourable East India Company." Legislative Councils were established. Lord Canning was succeeded in 1862 by Lord Elgin, who, however, died in Nov., 1863.

Sir John (Lord) Lawrence (1861-69) reformed the finances, which had been seriously burdened by the heavy military expenditure necessitated by the Mutiny. His administration was marked by the Bhutan War (1864) and by the terrible Orissa Famine of 1866. He encouraged irrigation.

Lord Mayo (1869-72) effected many administrative reforms, instituted State railways, promoted the construction of roads and canals, and inaugurated the system of provincial finance, which has since been extended.

During the tenure of office of Lord Northbrook (1872-76) the late King Edward VII., then Prince of Wales, visited India. The Viceroy devoted attention to finance and to famine relief. In

The principal publications relating to India presented to Parliament in the past year were:—Statistical Abstract, 1909-10 to 1918-19 (Cmd. 1245); Moral and Material Progress Report, 1920 (H.C. 202); Indian Financial Statement for 1921-22 (H.C. 133); Home Accounts, 1919-20 (H.C. 119); Explanatory Memorandum regarding the Accounts and Estimates of 1921-22 (Cmd. 1,517); Return of Net Income and Expenditure, 1917-18 to 1919-20 (H.C. 126); Estimate of Revenue and Expenditure, 1920-21 (H.C. 118); Constitutional Reforms in Burma (Cmd. 1,194); Elections in India (Cmd. 1,261); Report of Jails Committee (Cmd. 1,302); Indians in Kenya and Uganda (Cmd. 1,311); Proposed Settlement of Indian Agriculturists in Tanganyika Territory (Cmd. 1,312); Report of the Indian Railway Committee (Cmd. 1,312); Report of Standing Joint Committee on Indian Affairs (H.C. 86, 125, 177, 180); East India Press Acts—Report of Committee (Cmd. 1,299). They can be purchased through any Bookseller, or direct from H.M. Stationery Office, Imperial House, Kingsway, W.C. 2.

One-inch Ordnance Survey Maps are published by the Survey of India, and can be obtained from the India Office Sale Agents, Messrs. E. Stanford, Ltd., 12 to 14 Long Acre, London, W.C. 2 (12. to 18. 6d. each).

1875 the reigning Gackwar of Baroda was deposed for misrule and disloyalty.

Lord Lytton's administration (1876-80) was made eventful by a terrible famine in Southern India and by the Second Afghan War. In 1877 the Queen assumed the title of EMPRESS OF INDIA.

The peaceful term of the Marquess of Ripon (1880-84) was marked by the extension of local self-government, and by fiscal, judicial, educational, and other reforms.

His successor was the Marquess of Dufferin (1884-88). In 1885-6 occurred the Third Burmese War, by which Upper Burma with the Shan States was annexed. The N.W. frontier of Afghanistan was delimited, the frontier of India strengthened, and the army increased. The first Indian National Congress met in 1885.

The Marquess of Lansdowne (1888-94) continued his predecessor's policy of strengthening the army and consolidating British influence on the frontier. The Indo-Afghan boundary was defined, and a serious outbreak in Manipur was suppressed. He took the first step in currency reform by closing the Indian mints to the free coinage of silver. He reconstituted the Legislative Councils in 1892 by introducing a more popular element, and conferring a limited right of interpellation and criticism in financial matters.

The viceroyalty of Lord Elgin (1894-99) was full of events. In 1895 an outbreak in Chitral made necessary a large military expedition to relieve the garrison. Plague broke out in 1896, and has raged more or less severely ever since. In 1896-7 an area of 307,000 sq. ms. with a population of 70 millions, was visited by a grievous famine. In 1897 the border tribes from Chitral to Baluchistan rose against the British garrisons. In the Tirah campaign that followed over 40,000 troops were employed. Several boundaries were settled under Lord Elgin, notably those with Russia on the Pamirs and with France on the Mekong. The frontiers of Afghanistan, Persia, and China were also defined. The general Customs tariff, abolished in 1882, was reimposed in 1894.

Lord Curzon (1899-1904 and 1904-5) succeeded Lord Elgin. In 1899 the pound sterling was made legal tender in India concurrently with the rupee, at the exchange of Rs. 15 to £1. In 1899-1900 occurred one of the worst famines on record, the tracts affected covering 475,000 sq. ms. with a population of 60 millions. Lord Curzon's term of office was a period of reform and reconstruction. He appointed Commissions of Inquiry on irrigation, railways, universities, agricultural banks, excise, and police, all of which suggested important reforms. He instituted agricultural banks and departments, and initiated legislation to free the cultivators from the money-lenders. The famine codes were amended. A new province, under the direct control of the Governor-General in Council, was created, called the North-West Frontier Province (1901). The Aden and the Perso-Afghan boundaries were delimited. An Imperial Cadet Corps of native princes and nobles was inaugurated. Educational policy was reviewed and reforms introduced. A much-needed reform of the police was undertaken. Lord Curzon also secured a perpetual lease of Berar from the Nizam. In 1904 a mission with a military escort proceeded to Tibet, and secured a favourable treaty. During Lord Curzon's absence in England for a few months in 1904 Lord Ampthill occupied the post of Viceroy. Lord Curzon was reappointed in Dec., 1904. In 1905 the treaty with Afghanistan was renewed. The Viceroy reduced the dimensions of Bengal, and constituted a new province, called Eastern Bengal and Assam, by combining parts of Bengal with Assam. He carried out great reforms in the Army in conjunction with Lord Kitchener (appointed Commander-in-Chief in 1902), but, differing from certain proposals made by the latter, and finding that he lacked the support of the Home Government, he resigned (Aug., 1905).

Lord Minto succeeded in Nov., 1905. The Prince of Wales (now H.M. King George) made a tour in India during the winter of 1905-6. For some years after 1905 there was agitation among Bengalis owing to the partition of Bengal, and a Seditious Meetings Act was passed in Nov., 1907. In his Budget speech in 1907 the Secretary of State, Viscount Morley, foreshadowed important reforms in Indian administration, designed to associate the people more closely with the Government. He nominated two Indian members to his own Council, and an Indian member to the Governor-General's Council. He appointed Commissions to inquire into railways, into the possibilities of financial and administrative decentralisation, and into the conditions of factory labour, and action was taken on their reports. In 1908 the unrest in Bengal assumed an anarchical character. To mark the fiftieth anniversary of the transfer of India to the Crown a royal proclamation was issued in Nov., 1908, promising extended self-government. Owing to the continued unrest in 1909 and 1910, a Press Act, to control printing presses, was passed.

Lord Hardinge succeeded in Nov., 1910. The Indian Legislative Council in June, 1911, prohibited indentured emigration from India to Natal after 1 July, 1912, and a new Seditious Meetings Act was passed. A great Durbar was held at Delhi on 12 December, 1911, by H.M. King George, to announce his Coronation. On this occasion the King-Emperor also made announcements of new and far-reaching steps in Indian policy, viz., the transfer of the seat of Government from Calcutta to Delhi, and the creation of a Governorship for the presidency of Bengal, of a Lieut.-Governorship for Bihar, Chota-Nagpur, and Orissa, and of a Chief Commissionership for Assam. Delhi was chosen as the capital on geographical, historical, and political grounds. The provincial changes involved a partial rescission of the partition of Bengal and the abolition of the province of Eastern Bengal and Assam, created in 1905. Bengal as reconstituted is a compact Bengali-speaking province, placed under a Governor in Council. A new province, Bihar and Orissa, was formed, including Chota-Nagpur and the Sambalpur district. Assam again became a separate province, under a Chief Commissioner. The reconstituted provinces came into existence on 1 April, 1912. In pursuance of recommendations by the Decentralisation Commission, enhanced powers in respect of appointments and expenditure were granted to local governments having a quasi-permanent provincial settlement. Moreover, greater permanency was arranged for in financial settlements with the provinces, the control of the Government of India being relaxed. A Royal Commission was appointed in 1912 to inquire into the public services in India. In Dec., 1912, the Viceroy took formal possession of the new headquarters at Delhi. The State entry was marred by an attempt on the life of the Viceroy. A Royal Commission was appointed in April, 1912, to examine and report on Indian Finance and Currency. The outbreak of war in Europe in August, 1914, was the signal for a great outburst of loyalty and devotion to the King-Emperor on the part of the princes and peoples of India. Practically all the ruling chiefs placed their military forces and the resources of their states at the disposal of the Government, and large forces of Indian troops were despatched for service in Europe, Asia, and Africa.

Following on the outbreak of war serious disturbances were started in the Punjab and elsewhere by emigrants returning from Canada and the United States imbued with revolutionary ideas. Order was restored as a result of measures taken under the Defence of India Act, which was passed in March, 1915. Several tribal risings on the North-West Frontier were promptly and rigorously suppressed. Lord Hardinge's term of office as Viceroy was extended from November, 1915, to March, 1916. The Viceroy announced in March, 1916, that it had been decided eventually to abolish the system of indentured emigration from India. Lord Hardinge put forward proposals for post-war constitutional reforms.

Lord Chelmsford succeeded in April, 1916. A strong Commission was appointed to examine and report on the possibilities of further industrial development in India. The year 1917 was marked by certain symptoms of unrest and the development of an agitation for constitutional changes towards self-government, or, in its extreme form, "Home Rule for India."

The Mesopotamia Commission strongly criticised the administration from India of the early stages of the campaign. The Public Services Commission, appointed during Lord Hardinge's administration, reported. Three leading Indians attended the Imperial War Cabinet. As regards indentured Indian labour in the Colonies, the Dominions' representatives accepted the principle of reciprocity of treatment. Action was taken against the Mahads and Mohmands on the North-West Frontier. The Lahore and Burma conspiracy trials were concluded and the leaders sentenced. During the year the Viceroy made the following important announcements.—The grant of King's Commissions to Indians, a contribution of £100,000,000 towards the cost of the war, and further grants towards the improvement of education. The special conditions arising from the war induced the Government of India to anticipate the findings of the Commission by organising at once, as far as was possible, the resources of the country, with a view to making India more self-contained. It also devoted itself to the supply of essential stores for the armies in the field, and a Munitions Board was created for the purpose of mobilising the resources of India for the war.

Towards the end of 1917 the Secretary of State visited India in connexion with a development of constitutional progress, for some time under consideration by the Home and Indian Governments.

The year 1918 was marked by some symptoms of unrest; the Bowlett Committee, appointed in 1917, reported, and revealed evidence of the assassination of the Bengal seditionists with German plots; anti-Moslem riots broke out in Berar, and Muhammadans organised agitation leading to disturbances in Madras and Calcutta. Recruiting for the Army broke all records; the operations against the Maris were closed; a War Conference was held at Delhi with the object of stimulating India's efforts in the war. The Bombay Government took the first steps towards obligatory primary education; a policy of more complete local self-government was decided on by the Government of India. Reckless speculations in Broach cotton prevailed, and a certain amount of discontent due to high prices was manifested. The Home Rule League continued its activities. The influenza epidemic spread to India, and it is estimated that over 7 million deaths in British India and Indian States resulted. The Industrial Commission, appointed in 1916, issued a report; its broad general conclusions were that—India is rich in raw materials and in industrial possibilities, but poor in manufacturing accomplishment. The deficiencies in her industrial system are such as to render her liable to foreign penetration in time of peace and to serious dangers in time of war. Her labour is inefficient, she relies almost entirely on foreign sources for foremen and supervisors; and her educated people have yet to develop a right tradition to industrialism. Her stores of money lie inert and idle. The necessity of securing the economic safety of the country, and the inability of the people to secure it without the co-operation and stimulation of Government impose on Government a policy of energetic intervention in industrial matters. Two representatives of the Indian people, appointed by the Government of India, attended the Imperial War Cabinet in London. In 1919 a bill was introduced into Parliament embodying the proposals of the "Montagu-Chelmsford Joint Report," and eventually passed. During the year considerable distress occurred in consequence of the partial failure of the 1918 autumn crops throughout Northern India and the Peninsula, and relief measures were undertaken. A strike, of brief duration, of mill-hands, due partly to economic and partly to political causes, occurred in Bombay. Serious disturbances in the Punjab and Delhi, resulting in many deaths, followed on a "passive resistance" movement, inaugurated by Mr. Gandhi against the "Rowlatt" Bills, introduced by the Government of India, on the recommendation of the "Rowlatt" Committee, for renewing some of the powers which the Government had provided themselves during the War to deal with sedition. The movement spread to Bombay, and the local government was forced to disport Mr. Horniman, the Editor of the Bombay Chronicle. A Commission was appointed to enquire into the whole matter of the disturbances and the steps taken to suppress them. The murder of the Amir and the subsequent events in Afghanistan were followed by an invasion of Afghan and some frontier tribes into India, necessitating prompt military action by the Government of India. Hostilities were terminated in August and a treaty of peace concluded (see p. 632). The attitude of the frontier tribes was, however, on the whole good. Committees were appointed (1) to enquire into the organization and procedure of the civil secretariat of the Government of India; (2) to enquire into the administration and organization of the Army in India, whose conduct of the campaign on the North-West Frontier, following the troubles with Afghanistan, was much criticised; and (3) to advise in regard to the future of currency and exchange: (a) to investigate the system of prison administration. The "Sadler" Commission on the Calcutta University reported during the year, and made drastic proposals for recasting the Indian secondary and university educational system. After the publication of the report, the Government of India, in October, introduced a Bill for the establishment of the proposed University at Dacca. A scheme for the amalgamation of the three Presidency banks was formulated; the recommendations of the Indian Cotton Committee, appointed in 1927, for the extension and improvement of cotton cultivation in India, aroused much interest; there was an awakening of interest in industrial enterprise in India, attended, however, by some reckless speculation; and, as elsewhere, the rise in prices necessitated improvement of pay in the various branches of the public service. The Union Government appointed a Commission to enquire into the Indian question in South Africa. Noteworthy features in the progress of India during the year were the appointment of an Indian, Lord Sinha, as Under-Secretary of State for India in the Home Government, and the representation of India at the Peace Conference by two Indians, H.H. the Maharajah of Bikanir and Lord Sinha. The policy underlying the Government of India Act, 1919, mainly based on the recommendations of the "Montagu-Chelmsford" Report, viz., the increasing association of Indians in every branch of the Administration, with a view to the progressive realisation of responsible government, was carried forward a further stage in 1920 by the Home Parliament, which, by rules, laid down the details of the constitution of the new Central and Provincial Governments (see pp. 613-4), and in furtherance of which elections were held during the year, preparatory to the inauguration of the new Councils early in 1921 by H.R.H. the Duke of Connaught. One section of the India Home Rule for India party, dissatisfied with the Act, threatened non-co-operation with the Government in the future working of the reforms, and with the assistance of some Muhammadans, Mr. Gandhi, a Hindu, commenced a movement to carry out the threat, but the support of the "Moderate" wing of the party, including that of Mrs. Besant, was given to the Government. A prominent and distinguished Indian, Lord Sinha, was designated as the first Governor of Bihar and Orissa. In consequence of the agitation in support of more lenient Peace terms for Turkey, some Muhammadans, estimated to number over 20,000, emigrated to Afghanistan, but many of these Muhajirins returned greatly disabused by the reception accorded to them. The Amir's representatives visited India and discussed with officers of the Indian Government the possibility of a resumption of more friendly relations. Bolshevik propaganda created an unhealthy political atmosphere in some quarters. Fighting with the Mahands on the North-West frontier continued throughout the year, in consequence of which the Viceroy announced Government's intention to occupy Central Waziristan, and to continue the railway from Jamrud towards the Khyber. Unrest, due in some measure to labour trouble, evidenced by an unprecedented number of strikes, and partly to unsatisfied political aspirations, was prevalent during the year. Government, in pursuance of its policy of making India commercially more self-supporting, instituted several inquiries into various trades and industries, and appointed a committee to inquire as to whether the adoption of a system of preferential tariffs would be beneficial. Further steps towards employing more largely Indians in the various Government services and for the improvement of conditions of service and pay of both European and Indian members of the same were taken. Several large works' programmes were sanctioned. A committee was appointed to inquire into the administration of the railways. The recommendation of the Exchange and Currency Committee for the linking of the rupee to gold and the adoption of an exchange rate equivalent to one-tenth of the gold contents of the sovereign, i.e., an exchange rate of Rs. 20 to the £, was adopted. With a view to increasing banking facilities steps were taken to establish a large Imperial Bank. A High Commissioner for India in London, with a separate establishment, responsible to the Government of India for certain agency work, previously performed by the India Office, was appointed. The Army in India and the Medical Services Committees respectively reported. The Army in India Committee attempted to determine the part to be played by the Army in India in a scheme of Imperial Defence and to analyse the steps which must be taken to make the Army, both in its administration and its personnel, more efficient and more attractive to the right type of soldiers.

The recommendations of the Army in India Committee postulate:—(1) control by the Government of India over Indian military affairs; (2) giving to India a voice in Imperial defence; and (3) allowing to the Imperial General Staff a considered influence on Indian military policy. To ensure uniformity of military policy between Great Britain and India the Committee recommended:—a diminution of detailed control by the India Office; abolition of the Military Member of the Council of the Secretary of State for India; the Chief of the Imperial General Staff, either directly or through the Military Secretary at the India Office (appointed on his recommendation) to be the sole military adviser of the Secretary of State for India; the attendance of the Chief of the Imperial General Staff at meetings of the India Council; the attendance of the Military Secretary of the India Office at meetings of the Army Council; the Commander-in-Chief in India to be the administrative and executive head of the Army, subject to the control of the Governor-General in Council; the appointment of Commander-in-Chief on the recommendation of, and with the right of communicating with, the Chief of the Imperial General Staff; a Military Council of high staff and other officers to assist the Commander-in-Chief in India; the abolition of the Secretary to the Government of India in the Army Department; decentralisation of responsibility by the creation of four commands. A majority of the Committee recommend the placing of production and supply under a Civilian Member of the Viceroy's Executive Council, instead of under a Surveyor-General, responsible to the Commander-in-Chief, as recommended by the Minority. The Committee also recommend:—Closer relations, co-operation in training, distribution of high appointments, and adjustments of pay, between the British and Indian Armies; a corps of officers fitted to serve with either British or Indian troops; the amalgamation of certain Corps; the removal of grievances, more sympathetic treatment of all ranks; re-organisation of existing, and the development and equipment of new, services.

In January, 1922, the new Indian Legislature, Provincial Councils, and the Chamber of Princes, were inaugurated by the Duke of Connaught.

Lord Reading succeeded in April, 1921. The struggle between constitutionalism and revolution continued. Unrest, riots, agrarian disturbances, strikes, and movements designed to embarrass the Government were prevalent. A conflict between Sikhs at Nankana resulted in many deaths. Mr. Gandhi, the All brothers, and their associates, continued to advocate non-co-operation with the Government and boycott of the reforms. The utterances of the All brothers forced Government to order their arrests. The Moplahs, Muhammadan fanatics of Malabar, resisted the ordinary processes of law, and a widespread outbreak of violence ensued, directed against Government, civil officers, and Hindus, forced the authorities to take strong military measures for its suppression. Frontier disturbances and fighting continued. Failure of the crops in some parts necessitated the opening of relief works. The deficit in the Budget, due mainly to war commitments, compelled Government to impose additional taxation (see p. 623). Special missions were sent to Afghanistan and Tibet. The Railway Committee reported and recommended drastic changes, including the termination of the system of management of railways by Government companies domiciled in England. The Sugar Commission, appointed to examine conditions of sugar growing and manufacture in India, reported. A Fiscal Commission was set up to examine, among other questions that of Imperial Preference; its appointment marked, in Lord Reading's words, "the recognition of India's advance towards fiscal autonomy." The Jails Committee reported, and Government announced its intention to abolish the Andaman penal settlement. Large development and irrigation schemes were sanctioned.

IMPERIAL LEGISLATION.—Legislation for India in England is chiefly of a constitutional or financial character. The Regulating Act (1773), which created the first Governor-General, a Council of five members, and a supreme court with a chief judge, was the first statute that recognised the East India Company as a ruling body. Pitt's India Act (1784) left the business and most of the patronage to the Court of Directors, but gave the supreme civil and military authority to a Board of Control, whose president represented India in the House of Commons. In 1800 the Company's charter was renewed; in 1813, on a further renewal of the charter, the trade of India was thrown open; while on the next renewal in 1833 the Company's monopoly of the China trade was abolished, and they became a non-commercial governing body. In 1858 the Company's charter was renewed for the last time, and the Indian Civil Service was thrown open to competition. By "An Act for the Better Government of India" (1858), all the territories governed by the East India Company were transferred to the Crown, and all the powers exercised by the Company and the Board of Control were vested in the Secretary of State for India, assisted by a Council. Under this Act, as amended by Acts of 1860, 1867, 1885 and 1890, at least one-half of the members of Council must have served in India for 20 years, and must not have left India more than 3 years prior to their appointment. The number of members may be 12 and must not be less than 8, and is at present 9. Their term of office is now 5 years, with power of extension. There are now 3 Indian members. In 1877 (under the Royal Titles Act) Queen Victoria assumed the title of Empress of India. By the Indian Councils Act (1909) the Imperial and provincial Legislative Councils were enlarged, their powers of interpellation and criticism enhanced, and the elective element extended, special provision being made for the representation of landholders, the professional classes, Muhammadans, and European and Indian traders and planters. The executive councils of Madras and Bombay were increased in size, and power was given to constitute executive councils in provinces under Lieut. Governors. The Government of India Act (1919) created a Governor of Bengal, established an Executive Council for Bihar and Orissa, and authorised the creation of legislative councils in provinces under Chief Commissioners. The Indian High Courts Act (1911) empowered the Government of India to increase the number of High Court judges from 15 to 20, to establish new High Courts, and to appoint temporary judges. An Act to consolidate the Imperial Legislation relating to the Government of India was passed in 1925. The Government of India Act, 1929, confers on provinces a larger measure of independence of the Government of India; it distinguishes the functions of local governments and local legislatures from the functions of the Governor-General in Council and the Indian Legislature; it provides for the devolution of authority in respect of provincial subjects to local governments, for the allocation of revenues to those governments and for the use under the authority of the Governor-General in Council of the agency of local governments in relation to central subjects; it provides for the transfer of some provincial subjects to the administration of the Governor acting with Ministers. It gives borrowing powers to local governments. It lays down that the 8 major provinces shall be governed, in relation to reserved subjects by a Governor in Council, and in relation to transferred subjects by a Governor acting with Ministers, appointed from among the elected Members of the local legislative Council. It confers extended powers on local legislatures. For the Supreme or Central Government, it provides that the Legislature shall consist of the Governor General and two Chambers, viz., the Council of State and the Legislative Assembly. It provides for the appointment of an Auditor General and a Public Services Commission on India. A Statutory Commission is to be appointed 10 years after the commencement of the Act for the purpose of enquiring, among other matters, as to the desirability of a further extension of the principle of self-government in India.

INDIAN LAW.—The law administered in the Indian courts consists mainly of: (a) The enactments of the Indian Legislative Councils (Imperial and provincial) and of the bodies that preceded them; (b) statutes of the British Parliament applicable to India; (c) the Hindu and Muhammadan laws of inheritance and domestic law; (d) the customary law affecting particular castes and races.

The Government of India.

EMPEROR OF INDIA—H.I.M. GEORGE V.

Secretary of State—The Rt. Hon. EDWIN SAMUEL MONTAGU, P.C., M.P.

THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA is the head of the Indian Administration in England, and as a member of the Cabinet he is solely responsible to, and represents the supreme authority of, Parliament. Subject to the provisions of the Government of India Act and rules made thereunder, the Secretary of State can impose his orders on the Government of India. In matters requiring secrecy (e.g., foreign policy and the affairs of Indian States) the Secretary of State can act on his own authority without consulting his Council, and in most other matters can overrule the majority of his Council. Indian Government business in England is transacted at the India Office and at the office of the High Commissioner for India (see pp. 120, 124).

The King-Emperor appoints the Governor-General, the Governors of the 9 major Provinces (Bengal, Madras, Bombay, the United Provinces, Bihar and Orissa, the Punjab, the Central Provinces, Assam and Burma), the Commander-in-Chief, the Members of the Executive Councils of the Governor-General and of Governors, and the Judges of the High Courts. The term of these appointments, except judgeships, is usually 5 years.

Subject to the Secretary of State's direction, the supreme executive authority in India, in both civil and military affairs, is the Governor-General in Council. The Governor-General's Executive Council now contains 8 members including the Commander-in-Chief (three of whom must have served in India 10 years), as well as himself. Ordinarily, the opinion of the majority prevails, but the Governor-General is empowered in special circumstances to overrule the majority. In accordance with the Government of India Act, 1858, and rules thereunder, the Indian Legislature consists of the Governor-General and two Chambers, viz., the Council of State and the Legislative Assembly (see pp. 613-4 as to their constitution). Except as otherwise provided by or under the Act, a Bill is not deemed to have been passed unless agreed to by both Chambers. The Act confers powers on the Governor-General of securing essential legislation in emergencies, subject to disallowance by His Majesty in Council; of returning Bills for reconsideration, and of vetoing proposed legislation affecting the safety or tranquillity of British India. The Indian Budget is submitted to both Chambers, and is voted on by the Legislative Assembly except in regard to certain specified heads, but the Governor-General in Council can act, notwithstanding a refusal or reduction of grants, where essential to the discharge of his responsibilities, and he may authorise expenditure necessary for the safety and tranquillity of British India or any part thereof. Differences of opinion between the two Chambers may be referred for decision by the Governor-General to a joint meeting of members of both Chambers appointed for the purpose. Although the Government does not command a majority in the Indian Legislature, it is necessarily given the power to reject adverse votes, since its responsibility is not to the Indian Legislature, but to Parliament.

The seat of the Supreme Government is at Delhi, the summer headquarters being still at Simla.

Business is conducted by 11 Departments—Finance, Foreign and Political, Home, Legislative, Revenue and Agriculture, Public Works, Commerce, Industry, Education, Army, and Railway. Each Department is in the charge of a Secretary to Government (the Foreign and Political Department has both a Foreign and a Political Secretary), and is under the care of a member of the Viceroy's Executive Council, who has authority to deal with affairs of minor importance, and to select what is worthy of the consideration of the Governor-General and his Council. The Governor-General himself superintends the Foreign and Political Department. The Finance Department deals with public accounts, loans, taxation, opium, currency, banking, mints, &c. The Foreign and Political Department conducts relations with Afghanistan, Nepal, and other neighbouring countries, and, through its Political Residents and Agents in the various native States, supervises their administration and regulates their relations with the paramount Power. The Political Residents in the Persian Gulf, Muscat, and Turkish Arabia look after the commercial and political interests of India in those quarters. The Home Department deals with the civil service, judicial affairs, prisons, police, &c. The Legal Member of Council takes charge of Government Bills in connexion with the Legislative Department. The most important subjects that come before the Revenue and Agriculture Department are land revenue and surveys, forests, agricultural development, famine, and meteorology. The Public Works Department deals with irrigation, roads, buildings, &c. The department of Commerce deals with trade and shipping, customs, excise, ports, post-office, telegraphs, &c. The department of Industries deals with munitions, industries, stores, factories, &c. The Army is under the Army Department, of which the Commander-in-Chief has charge in Council. The Education Department has the control of education, local government, sanitation, &c. Railway administration is entrusted to a Railway Department, which is in the charge of the Commerce Member of Council.

British India is divided into 15 Local Governments and Administrations, viz.:—Under Governors, Madras, Bombay, and Bengal, still termed Presidencies, the United Provinces, the Punjab, Bihar and Orissa, the Central Provinces, and Assam; under Chief Commissioners, who are under the immediate authority of the Governor-General in Council, the North-West Frontier Province, British Baluchistan, Delhi, Ajmer-Merwara, Coorg, and the Andaman and Nicobar Islands. Burma will be, in future, under a Governor.

The Governors of Madras, Bombay and Bengal are permitted to communicate direct with the Secretary of State.

The unit of administration throughout British India is the District, the executive head of which is the District Officer, called Collector-Magistrate or Deputy-Commissioner, as the case may be. In subordination to a Commissioner, who PROVINCIAL GOVERNMENTS AND ADMINISTRATIONS.*

Under the Government of India Act, 1919, and rules made thereunder, the local governments are given a large measure of independence of the Supreme Government. The Act distinguishes the functions of local governments and local legislatures of the Provinces from the functions of the Governor-General in Council and the Indian Legislature. The Supreme Government is given authority over certain subjects, classified as "Central," such as defence, political relations, railways, tariffs, etc. Other administrative heads, classified as "Provincial"—viz., local self-government, public health, education, public works, water supply, land revenue administration, famine relief, agriculture, excise, administration of justice, etc., are wholly or partly handed over to Provincial Governments with responsibility, subject to certain limitations, within their own areas, for administering them. In the nine major or "Governor's" Provinces—i.e., Madras, Bengal, Bombay, the United Provinces, Bihar and Orissa, the Central Provinces, the Punjab, Assam and Burma—provincial subjects are further divided into "reserved" and "transferred subjects," the administration of, and responsibility for, which rests with the Governor and his Executive Council and with the Governor and Ministers respectively. Ministers are chosen from among the elected members of the Legislative Council by, and hold office during the pleasure of, the Governor. They are directly responsible to the Legislative Council for the administration of the "transferred" subjects, but can be overruled by the Governor if he considers their policy inconsistent with the discharge of his responsibilities.

The Act legislates for a transition from a bureaucratic to a self-government system and for the gradual transfer of more subjects to the Ministers. Matters of departmental or minor importance are dealt with, as a rule, by the Governor, his Council, and the Ministers sitting in conclave, but the decision on reserved subjects rests with the Governor in Council, and that on transferred subjects with the Ministers, subject to the Governor's intervention and control.

Legislative Councils have an elected majority, and normally a life of three years, but may be sooner dissolved by the Governor. The previous sanction of the Governor-General in Council is required to the introduction of certain classes of Provincial Bills. The Governor has powers of veto in regard to proposed legislation affecting the safety or tranquillity of his Province or any part of it, or of another Province, and can secure legislation essential to the discharge of his responsibilities for reserved subjects. Such Bills must be sent to the Governor-General for the signification of His Majesty's pleasure, but in emergencies the Governor-General may assent to them, subject to disallowance by His Majesty in Council. The Governor has powers of assenting to, of withholding assent to, or of returning for reconsideration, other Bills, but must in certain circumstances send them for consideration to the Governor-General, who may reserve them for His Majesty's pleasure.

* The areas and populations of the separate provinces are for British territory only. The populations are according to the Census of 1921.

Provincial Budgets are voted on by the Legislative Councils, but the Governor has power to act, in respect of a demand for reserved subjects, notwithstanding a refusal or a reduction of grants, if the demand is essential to the discharge of his responsibilities for the subject, and in cases of emergency he can authorise such expenditure as may be necessary for the safety or tranquillity of his Province. Certain heads of expenditure do not require an annual vote: a deadlock is thus avoided in case of irresponsible action by the Legislative Council in the matter of supply.

Of the members nominated to the Indian Legislature and Provincial Legislative Councils some represent certain communities and interests. Males over 21 years of age possessing certain qualifications (residence within the constituency and the possession of certain property qualifications, the payment of land revenue, rent, local taxes, income-tax or municipal rates) are eligible for the franchise. Women are not qualified for registration, but the disqualification may be removed in certain circumstances in any Province, or in all. The franchise is low, and gives the vote to small cultivators and some wage earners. The electorate of 1921 comprised over 5,000,000 persons.

(1) MADRAS (area, 142,330 sq. miles; pop. 42,322,270) was not only the oldest, but the most important of the three original Presidencies before Clive's conquest of Bengal, though it was small in extent until the annexation of the Carnatic in 1801. With a coast-line of 1,730 miles the province has no good natural harbour, but an artificial harbour has been constructed at Madras at great expense. The province is not naturally fertile, though irrigation systems in the river deltas have enormously increased the produce of the soil, and have yielded a large profit to the State. Rice, millet, and other food-grains, oilseeds, cotton, indigo, spices, tobacco, tea, &c., are cultivated. Manganese ore is mined and exported. Madras is served by the South Indian and by the Madras and Southern Mahratta Railways, the latter connecting it with Bengal on the north and Bombay on the west. About 90 per cent. of the people are Hindus. There are about 1,200,000 native Christians, mainly Roman Catholics. Many natives of the Presidency emigrate to Burma and Ceylon, some only temporarily. The languages principally spoken are Tamil and Telugu. Madras (12,894) and Trichinopoly (110,521) famous for their Hindu temples, are the chief cities after the capital.

(2) BOMBAY.—The Island of BOMBAY was part of the dowry of the Infanta of Portugal (1662), and was made over by Charles II. to the East India Company in 1668. The greater part of the present territory was obtained by annexations from the Mahrattas, and by the lapse of the Satara State. Sind was conquered in 1843. The province (including Sind, but not Aden and Perim, which are also attached to it) contains 122,977 square miles (about equal in size to the British Isles), with a population of 19,253,763. Eastern Sind is desert. The administration of Sind (which occupies about two-fifths of the Presidency) is in some respects separate. About 75 per cent. of the people of the Presidency are Hindus, and 20 per cent. Muhammadans. The Parsis, who are very prominent in trade, are mainly found in Bombay. Marathi, Gujarati, Sindhi, and Kanarese are the principal languages. Millet and other food-grains and oilseeds are cultivated. Cotton is largely produced for export and for manufacture in the constantly extending cotton-mills of Bombay and Ahmedabad. The chief railway systems are the Bombay, Baroda and Central India with the lines worked by it to the north, and the Great Indian Peninsula (with the Indian Midland) eastwards; south-eastwards is the Madras and Southern Mahratta system; while Karachi (Sind) is the port for the extensive North-Western Railway system. Ahmedabad (274,202), Poona (276,671), Surat (121,299), and Karachi (215,721), the capital and chief port of Sind, are the most important cities. For Aden and Perim, see p. 619.

(a) BENGAL (area of newly-constituted province, 74,699 sq. miles, with population of 46,523,177) was placed under a Lieutenant-Governor in 1854. The old Bengal Presidency included practically all Northern and Central India, but subsequently the province consisted of part of Bengal proper with Bihar, Orissa, and Chota-Nagpur. Fifteen districts of Eastern Bengal were detached in 1905 and combined with Assam, while one district from the Central Provinces was added to Bengal. This partition was revoked in 1911, and Bengal now includes five Bengali-speaking divisions. About 53 per cent. of the population are Muhammadans and 45 per cent. Hindus. The principal languages are Bengali and Hindi. For the most part the province is a great alluvial plain, very populous and productive. The chief products are rice, jute, oilseeds, sugra, tobacco, silk, tea, and coal. The East Indian Railway is the great artery of the Ganges Valley. The Eastern Bengal Railway, running north, and the Bengal-Nagpur, south, from Calcutta, are also important. Important cities are Dacca (127,304), now the second capital, and Howrah (192,756), a great jute-manufacturing centre adjoining Calcutta.

(a) THE UNITED PROVINCES OF AGRA and OUDH, called "North-Western Provinces and Oudh" until 1902 (area, 127,267 sq. miles; pop. 45,500,046), forms the upper part of the great Ganges plain to the W. of Bengal, lying between the Himalayas and the hilly border of the central plateau. Originally (excluding Oudh) it formed part of the Bengal Presidency, but in 1825 a separate administration was formed under a Lieutenant-Governor. OUDH was annexed in 1856 and placed under a Chief Commissioner. After 1877 the two administrations were combined. The chief products are wheat, rice, barley, pulse, tobacco, millet, cotton, sugar, and oilseeds. About 85 per cent. of the population are Hindus and 14 per cent. Muhammadans. Hindi and Western Hindi are the chief tongues. The province is varied by the East Indian, Oudh and Rohilkhand, and Rohilkhand and Kumaon Railways. In 1874 a Legislative Council was established. Among the important cities may be named the ancient city of Agra (125,046), containing the Taj Mahal and other great works of architecture, the sacred Hindu city of Benares (225,000), the great manufacturing centre, Cawnpore (123,046), Bareilly (127,250), and Meerut (122,257).

 (g) The PUNJAB (area, 99,222 sq. miles; pop. 20,678,393) occupies the N.W. angle of the great northern plain of India, and derives its name from the "Five Rivers" which, descending from the Himalayas, traverse the plain and unite in the Indus. It was annexed in 1849. Up to 1853 it was under a Board of Administration, who were then superseded by a Chief Commissioner, who was made Lieutenant-Governor in 1859, when also the Delhi Division was transferred to the Punjab from the North-West Provinces. The Punjab is mainly agricultural, and, owing to the scanty rainfall, depends largely for its harvests on vast irrigation canals, which are still being greatly extended, and are highly remunerative. The principal crops are wheat, millet, barley, maize, pulse, oilseeds, sugar, and cotton. The Punjab possesses rich deposits of rock-salt, which, with wheat and other grains and cotton, form the principal exports. Timber is scarce. More than half the population are Muhammadans, and more than a third are Hindus. The Sikh number about 2,000,000 in the Punjab and Frontier States, to which they are mainly confined. Punjabi and Hindi are the chief languages. The various branches of the North-Western and Southern Punjab Railways serve the province. Amritsar, the sacred city of the Sikhs, has 260,499 people.

(6) BURMA is bounded by Tibet on the north, by China, French Indo-China, and Siam on the east, and by Assam, Bengal and the sea on the west. It is the largest province, having a total area of 230,839 sq. miles, about equal to Spain and Portugal, with a population of 13,205,564. These figures include the Shan States and Chin Hills. Many immigrants come from Bengal, Madras, and China. Tenasserim and Aracan were annexed after the first Burmese war in 1826, Pegu after the second war in 1852, and Upper Burma and the Shan States after the third war in 1885. The Shan States are administered by local sawbaws, or chiefs, under the superintendence of a political officer. The province is thinly peopled; but, owing to remarkable prosperity, the population has increased 9 per cent. in 20 years. The inhabitants belong to numerous tribes, who are distinguished by a variety of manners, languages, and religions. Burmese and Karen are the chief languages. Buddhism, now almost confined to Burma, so far as the Indian Empire is concerned, is the religion of 85 per cent. of the people. The Burmese are much better educated than the natives of India proper, education being conducted by Buddhist monks. The delta country of Lower Burma is flat, but above Frome there is upland, hilly country. Rice, the main product of the delta region, is largely milled at Rangoon and exported. The principal export after rice is teak, which comes from the extensive forests of Burma and the Shan States, and overlaid from Siam. Burma is fairly rich in minerals, especially petroleum, rubies, jade-stone, and wolfman. The Irrawaddy and its chief tributaries, the Chindwin, the Salween, and the Myittha, form important waterways. The main stream is navigable beyond Bhamo, 900 miles from its mouth, and carries much traffic. There are considerable exports by land to Western China. The Burma Railways have reached Myitkina on the Upper Irrawaddy, while a branch has been built to the Shan States, which lie in the Salween basin. Burma is to be constituted a Governor's province.

(7) BIHAR AND ORISSA (area of new province, 83,182 sq. miles, with pop. of 33,998,778). This province, which came into existence on 1 April, 1902, comprises Bihar, Orissa, and Chota-Nagpur, hitherto forming part of Bengal, as well as the Sambalpur district transferred to Bengal from the Central Provinces in 1905. Bihar is liable to extreme temperatures. The population is exceedingly dense. Orissa and Chota-Nagpur are ill-watered and liable to drought. Orissa has a variety of races and a considerable seaboard. The highlands of Chota-Nagpur are thinly peopled and contain a large aboriginal population. The Patna High Court came into existence on March 1, 1906. Bihar and Orissa yields the greater part of India's output of coal and mica. Rice, wheat, oilseeds, sugar, and tobacco are cultivated. The bulk of the people are Hindus, and the great Hindu temple of Juggernaut is at Puri, in Orissa. There is a variety of languages, Hindi and Oriya being the chief. The railway systems are the East Indian, Bengal and North-Western, and Bengal-Nagpur.

(8) THE CENTRAL PROVINCES AND BERAR (area, Central Provinces alone, 82,057 sq. miles; pop. 10,827,302). The Central Provinces were formed in 1861 out of territory taken from the North-West Provinces and Madras, but originally belonging to the Mahratta Kingdom of Nagpur. The country, hilly and forest-clad, contains a large population of aboriginal tribes. The people are mostly Hindus, and they speak mainly Hindi and Marathi. The province, which is served by the Indian Midland, Great Indian Peninsula, and the Bengal-Nagpur Railways, possesses coal and manganese ore, and produces rice, wheat, millet, pulse, oilseeds, and cotton. There are cotton mills at Nagpur.

Since 1st October, 1902, BERAR has been amalgamated with the Central Provinces. Berar (area, 17,766 sq. miles; pop. 3,021,222), which lies to the north of Hyderabad, was placed in British hands by the Nizam in 1853, in payment of arrears, and its revenues were charged with the future cost of the Hyderabad Contingent (which was in 1903 incorporated in the Indian Army). In 1902 Berar was leased in perpetuity to the Government of India on payment of £169,000 a year to the Nizam. Berar is purely agricultural. It is very fertile, and yields cotton, millet, oilseeds, &c. The chief language is Marathi, and most of the people are Hindus.

(9) ASSAM (area, 52,035 sq. miles; pop. 7,258,841), was constituted a separate administration in 1874 out of certain Bengal districts, most of which had been ceded by Burma in 1826. It was combined in 1892 with part of Bengal to form a new province, Eastern Bengal and Assam, but again became a separate administration in 1912. A range of mountains divides Assam into the Surma and Brahmaputra valleys, of which the chief towns are Sylhet and Gauhati respectively. The people are mainly Hindus and Muhammadans, and the chief languages are Bengali and Assamese. The Assam-Bengal railway serves the province. Tea and rice are the principal products. Assam contains nearly 600,000 immigrants from other parts of India, chiefly coolies for tea-gardens. Seat of Government, Shillong.

Attached to the Province are the five trans-border political agencies of Malakand, Khyber, Kurram, Tochi, and Wano, together with tribal areas under the control of the Deputy Commissioners of the five settled districts first above mentioned. The officer in charge is directly responsible to the Government of India. The people are chiefly Muhammadans. The province produces wheat, barley and other grains, oilseeds, cotton, &c. It has a considerable trade with Afghanistan.

(13) BRITISH BALUCHISTAN (area, 94,008 sq. ms.; pop. 421,679) was constituted a separate administration in 1883, under the Governor-General's Agent in Baluchistan, who also controls the affairs of the native States of Baluchistan up to the Persian frontier. The districts it comprises (Sibi, Quetta, Pishin, Thal-Chotali, Nushki, Zhob, Chagal, Nasirabad, and the Bolan) were acquired partly from Afghanistan by the treaty of Gundamuk (1879), partly from the Khan of Kalat by arrangement. Baluchistan consists largely of mountains and sandy deserts, and is sparsely populated. A large part of the people lead a pastoral, nomad life. In religion they are Sunni Muhammadans. The Afghan-Baluch frontier was demarcated in 1896-7. To Chaman, on this frontier, a railway runs via Quetta and is continued to Mirjawa. The Khan of Kalat, the head of a loose confederacy, receives about £19,000 per annum for quit-rents, subsidy, &c. British troops occupy Quetta, commanding the Bolan Pass, and have the treaty right to occupy any other position.

(15) THE ANDAMANS AND NICOBARS (area, 3,143 sq. miles; pop. 26,833) form a chain of islands in the eastern part of the Bay of Bengal. Since 1858 Port Blair, in South Andaman, has been used as an Indian penal settlement. Much valuable timber, worked by convict labour, is obtained. The Nicobar Islands, almost due south of the Andamans, were first occupied by the British in 1860. They comprise 19 islands. The principal products are coco-nuts.

Chief Commissioner, Lt.-Col. H. C. Beadon, C.I.E., Rs. 3,000

The Laccadive Islands comprise 14 islands (nine inhabited), distant 200 miles from the Malabar coast of the Madras Presidency, in which they are included. (Pop. 20,600 in 1911.)

Aden and Perim.—From old time the peninsula of Aden, situated on the southern coast of Arabia and lying on the Red Sea trade-route between Europe and the East, has been an important trade centre. Its trade decayed after the Portuguese discovery of the Cape route, but with the opening of the Suez Canal it regained more than its old importance. It was occupied by the British in 1839. It is now a great coaling-station and port of call, and an entrepot for the trade of the adjacent African and Arabian coasts. It is the only fortified point between Egypt and Bombay, and may be regarded as an outpost of the Indian

Empire. Aden and Perim—a small unfortified island serving as a coaling station at the southern entrance to the Red Sea, occupied in 1827—form part of the Bombay Presidency, and have an area of 80 square miles and a population of 54,727. Aden is a free port. The traffic in arms and ammunition is subject to special regulations. The total trade in 1919-20 was £13,545,000. In 1919-20, 1,205 vessels called at Aden, and 430 at Perim. The British Government has treaty engagements with, and subsidises, the neighbouring Arab tribes, both inland and along the coast (Hadramaut), from the Straits of Bab-el-Mandeb to Muscat territory at Ras Sair.

Aden: Political Resident, Maj.-Gen. T. E. Scott, C.B., C.I.E., D.S.O.... per mensem Rs. 3,000. The Kuria Muria Islands, to the S. of Omã, have been in British possession since 1824. In 1834 the East India Company occupied Sokatra (area, 1,400 sq. miles), 150 miles from Cape Guardafui, which has a pastoral Muhammadan population roughly estimated at 5,000, mainly Arabs. A formal protectorate was established in 1886. The Sheikh receives a small subsidy, and is pledged not to cede the island to any foreign Power.

INDIAN APPOINTMENTS.

THE higher civil administration of British India is recruited from four sources—1. Open competitive examination in England. 2. The Indian Army. 3. The patronage of the Secretary of State. 4. The patronage of the Local Governments.

The Civil Service of India.—The annual examination ordinarily commences in London July-August. Candidates must be over 21 and under 24 on Aug. 1 in the year of examination. Application for permission to compete must be made on or before June 1, on forms that can be obtained from the Secretary, Civil Service Commission, London, W.1. Examination fee, £8. Selected candidates are on probation in England for one or two years, and receive an allowance of £200 if they pass their probation at one of the Universities or Colleges approved by the Secretary of State, conduct themselves well, and comply with all the rules laid down for their guidance. A final examination is held in Indian law, language, &c. An allowance of £40 on account of passage to India (£50 in case of passage to Rangoon) will be paid to newly appointed civilians. In case of failure to pass the final examination, or failure to execute the usual covenant and to proceed to India, all allowances received must be refunded. The salary of a covenanted civil servant commences usually at Rs. 7,000 a year. No person will be eligible for admission to the Indian Civil Service who has made before any tribunal established under the Military Service Acts, 1916, an application for the issue to him of a certificate of exemption from the provisions of those Acts on the ground of a conscientious objection to the undertaking of combatant service.

Concessions as to the age limits, in the case of candidates who have served in the Army or Navy, are made, and full particulars can be obtained from the Civil Service Commissioners.

The Indian Army.—Candidates for commissions in the Indian Army are required to pass the Army Entrance Examination held by the Civil Service Commissioners. Candidates must be between 17½ and 19 years of age (in the case of candidates already serving in the Army the upper limit of age will be 21). Of the cadetships for the Indian Army offered, some are allotted to King's India Cadets nominated by the Secretary of State for India and by the War Office, the remainder being offered to candidates in the order of their passing the entrance examination. At the end of the period of training at Sandhurst, cadets recommended for commissions are gazetted to the Unattached List for the Indian Army. On appointment to an Indian regiment, an officer's minimum initial pay is at the present moment Rs. 425 a month (equale £42 10s. at the statutory exchange of 2s. per rupee). Regulations and examination papers can be obtained from His Majesty's Stationery Office, Imperial House, Kingsway, W.C.

Indian (Imperial) Police Force.—It has been announced that a competitive examination will be held in London and other centres in the summer of 1922, in conjunction with the Army and Air Force Examination. A fee of £4 will be required from candidates examined in London, and a larger fee from those examined in other centres. At the time of a candidate's birth his father must have been a natural-born British subject, but exceptions to this condition may be made in the case of candidates who served in His Majesty's Armed Forces during the war. Candidates must be above 21 and under 25 years of age on Aug. 1, 1922; must be unmarried, and if they marry before reaching India will be required to forfeit their appointments. Applications to compete at the examination must be made on forms to be obtained from the India Office, Whitehall, London, and must be returned not later than May 10, 1922. Successful candidates will be required to undergo a strict medical examination; will be examined as to their ability to ride, and will be required to provide themselves with uniform, towards which a contribution of £30 will be made by the India Office. Newly appointed officers may be required to provide themselves, in India, with a horse and saddlery, towards the cost of which the Government may contribute up to Rs. 600. Free passage to India will be granted to probationers. The initial pay for officers recruited in the United Kingdom is Rs. 325 per month, plus an overseas allowance of Rs. 125 per month in the case of probationers with non-Indian domicile. The pay proceeds by increments to Rs. 675, and thence to Rs. 1,450 per month, subject to efficiency bars. There are superior appointments (not reserved, however, exclusively for officers so recruited), with pay proceeding from Rs. 1,750 to Rs. 3,000 per month. Officers are subject to certain Leave, Pension, and Provident Fund Rules, details of which may be obtained from the India Office.

The patronage of the Secretary of State for India is small, and is now chiefly dependent on the requirements of the Government of India in the Judicial Department. Some appointments to the Indian Educational Service, which includes teaching and inspecting posts, are made on the recommendation of a Selection Committee, constituted by the Secretary of State for India, from among candidates who must have received a liberal education and who seem to be most suitable by the Board of Education or the Scottish Education Department. The age is usually from 23 to 30. Appointments are in the first instance for two years, the salary beginning at Rs. 400 a month, rising by annual increments of Rs. 50 a month to Rs. 1,250, with prospects of promotion if service is extended. Officers of non-Indian domicile receive additional ("Overseas") pay of Rs. 250 per month during the first few years, but the amount is increased later. Initial salary and date of increments will be ordinarily determined in future by age. Appointments of Chaplains of the Church of England and the Church of Scotland to the Indian Ecclesiastical establishments are normally made, on the occurrence of vacancies, by the Secretary of State for India from amongst candidates nominated by the Indian Chaplains Board of the Church of England and the General Assembly's Committee on Indian Churches respectively. Church of England candidates must be between 27 and 34 years of age, and Church of Scotland candidates must be under 34 years of age. On appointment chaplains are on probation for two years and receive a salary of Rs. 600 per month, rising by annual increments to Rs. 1,300 per month.

The superior Engineer establishment of the Indian Public Works Department is engaged on the construction and maintenance of the various public works undertaken by the State in India. In 1922 the Europeans appointed by the Secretary of State for India were selected from among candidates who had served in His Majesty's forces during the war and who were in possession of certain University engineering degrees or diplomas, or, not being able to produce one of the recognised degrees or diplomas, had received a general education high enough to fit them to receive proper professional training and to become members of the engineering profession, had received some technical education in engineering, and had some practical training and experience in engineering as civilians and in military or quasi-military service. In 1922 only those who had been born on or after Aug. 2, 1894, and on or before Aug. 1, 1899, were considered. The pay and allowances of Europeans so appointed commence at Rs. 325 a month in case of men under 24 years of age, but candidates, if above 24, are credited with service as though they had been appointed in their 24th year. The pay rises by annual increments to Rs. 1,425 per month, with possibilities of promotion to higher posts. There is a prospect of pension, and there is also a Provident Fund. Appointments are usually made in June in each year. From time to time appointments to the Locomotive, Carriage, Wagon and Traffic Departments of Indian State Railways are made, full information regarding which can be obtained from the Public Works Secretary, India Office, London.

Indian Forest Service.—The date of the next recruitment may possibly be about July, 1923. No information can be given at present as to what regulations will be in force for this recruitment, but it is expected that further details will be available about March or April, 1923. The ordinary regulations, under which appointments were made in 1922, were briefly as follows:—

The Regulations apply to all candidates, other than those eligible under Regulation 2 of the Special Regulations for Officers and Men who have served in His Majesty's Forces during the war. In making appointments, the Secretary of State for India in Council acts with the aid of a Selection Committee. Applications for appointment must be made on a printed form to be obtained from the Secretary, Revenue Department, India Office, Whitehall, London, S.W. 1. Candidates must be not less than 22 but under 32 years of age on the 1st January. Applicants whose course of study has been interrupted owing to the War, but whose total war service is not sufficiently long to enable them to qualify under the special regulations, will be admitted as candidates, at the discretion of the Secretary of State, subject to the condition that their age does not exceed by more than one year the limit fixed above. No person will be deemed qualified who shall not satisfy the Secretary of State that, save as provided in the Regulations, he is a British subject. A European candidate must be prepared to give an undertaking, if selected, that he will not marry before he reaches India. If he marries, after giving such an undertaking, he forfeits his appointment. Every candidate must be of good physique, and must produce evidence of character: to satisfy the Secretary of State for India in Council that he is suited for the Indian Forest Service. Candidates must have obtained a degree with Honours in some branch of Natural Science in a University of England, Wales, or Ireland, or have passed the Final Bachelor of Science Examination in Pure Science in one of the Universities of Scotland. A degree in Applied Science will not be considered as fulfilling these conditions. Candidates are required to produce evidence that they have a fair knowledge of either German or French. Weight will be attached to the possession of a diploma or degree in Forestry. Should there in any year be more candidates considered to be qualified in every respect than vacancies to be filled, the Secretary of State reserves the right to require them to pass a competitive examination conducted by the Civil Service Commissioners, on the results of which their final selection would depend. Selected candidates are required to undergo a strict examination by a Medical Board at the India Office. Candidates who do not satisfy the Secretary of State for India that they are physically fit for appointment to the Indian Forest Service are not admitted to the examination, and before appointment a probationer is required to undergo a special course of instruction and to pass examinations in special subjects. The period of probation is in ordinary cases two years. The probationers are required to defray all expenses of lodging, board, tuition, and excursions to forest centres in the United Kingdom while at the University. The Secretary of State for India in Council makes payments to each probationer at the rate of £200 a year, not exceeding a total of £400. The grant of the allowances is subject to certain conditions. On appointment to the Indian Forest Service a probationer's salary commences at Rs. 325 (plus an overseas pay of Rs. 150 in the case of officers in non-Indian domicile) per mensem, and rises by increments to Rs. 1,400, with prospects of promotion.

Further information regarding these and other Indian appointments, viz., to the Indian Agricultural, Civil Veterinary, Geological, Finance, Medical, Queen Alexandra's Military Nursing, Royal Indian Marine and Bengal Pilot Services, can be obtained, on application, from the Under-Secretary of State, India Office, Whitehall, London, S.W. 1. Pay, Leave, and Pensions Regulations of the Indian Services are contained in the Civil Service Regulations, which can be consulted at the India Office.

In 1915-16 there was a deficit of Revenue as compared with expenditure of £1,222,662, in 1916-17 a surplus of £7,478,720, a surplus of £3,087,000 in 1917-18, a deficit of £3,280,000 in 1918-19, a deficit of £13,768,000 in 1919-20, an estimated deficit of £2,622,000 in 1920-21.

Under the Government of India Act, 1919, provision was made for the definite assignment to each of the Provincial Governments of a part of the revenues of India. The revenues so allocated consist, in the main, of the receipts accruing from provincial loans and from those provincial subjects which are revenue producing, the principal heads of which are land revenue, irrigation, stamp duties and excise. In addition, a local government is given a share in any expansion of income tax due to an increase of the assessed incomes within the Province. This division of the sources of revenue leaves the Central Government, under present conditions, insufficiently provided. It has, therefore, been arranged that an annual contribution shall be made by eight of the nine local governments to the Central Government. The annual contributions fixed at the outset aggregate 983 lakhs of rupees (Madras 348, Bombay 66, Bengal 63, United Provinces 240, Punjab 175, Burma 64, Central Provinces 22, Assam 15, Bihar and Orissa nil), but these contributions will cease at the earliest possible moment. The revised financial arrangements came into force from 1 April, 1921, as from which date all "provincial" revenue and expenditure ceased to be included in the estimates and accounts of the Central Government.

BURDEN OF TAXATION.—If taxation proper be divided among the population of British India, without allowing for certain portions of Salt, Excise, and Customs duties which fall on persons in the Indian States, the burden in 1918-19 was 2s. 3d. per head, or, if land revenue (which is akin to rent) be added, 2s. 20d. per head. The Budget for 1919-20 introduced a super-tax on large incomes, enhanced the export duties on raw jute, increased the import duties on cotton manufactures, and imposed, as a war measure, a surcharge on railway goods and traffic. The Budget of 1919-20 introduced a duty of 50 per cent. on excess profits, but this tax was discontinued in 1920-21. The Budget for 1920-21 amended the super-tax law. The Budget for 1921-22 imposed additional taxation under the heads of postal charges, railway surcharge, import duties and taxes on income.

DEBT AND ASSETS.—On 31 March, 1921, the debt of India amounted to Rs. 57,351 lakhs (sterling and rupee debt having been combined at the rate of Rs. 10=£1). Miscellaneous obligations (Savings Bank balances, &c.) amounted to about Rs. 8,056 lakhs, besides a charge of Rs. 383 lakhs for various railway annuities. Its advances to Native States, corporations, agriculturists, &c., stood at Rs. 874 lakhs. Other assets were the Gold Standard Reserve of £38,921,000, and the cash balances in England and India, £7,093,000 and Rs. 1,387 lakhs respectively.

LAND REVENUE.—This is the oldest and the most important source of revenue. The State is the paramount landlord in India, and the land revenue is the State's share in the rent of the soil. In most of Bengal and Bihar and Orissa, about one-fourth of Madras, and part of Assam the land revenue has been permanently fixed; elsewhere generally the assessments, or settlements, are revised periodically (usually once in 20 or 30 years). The nature of the settlements varies in different provinces. In parts of Bengal and Bombay, the greater part of the United Provinces, the Punjab, the N.W. Frontier Province, and the Central Provinces the settlement is with large proprietors or proprietary village communities (zamindari), and the estate is assessed as a whole. Elsewhere (especially in Burma, Berar, Bombay and Sind, Assam, and most of Madras) the ryotwari tenure prevails, and each ryot, or peasant proprietor, holds direct from the State. In temporarily settled zamindari districts the land revenue usually amounts to about 50 per cent. of the rental paid to the landlord by the cultivating tenant, while in temporarily settled ryotwari districts the revenue varies from 20 per cent. of the gross produce down to much smaller proportions, averaging about 8 per cent. Private improvements are exempt from assessment. The gross land revenue paid to the State in 1919-20 amounted to £24,555,000, of which £1,945,000 was due to irrigation and credited under that head.

THE OPIUM REVENUE.—Poppy may now be grown only in parts of the United Provinces (Bengal opium) and in the Central Indian (Malwa) native States. Except in these States the manufacture is a Government monopoly. In 1919-20, 3,600 chests of Bengal opium were sold for export, in addition to 7,797 chests sold direct to Governments of Hong Kong, Straits Settlements and Netherlands (Indies), &c. The gross revenue from Bengal opium, including the value of opium sold by the Excise Department for consumption in India, was £3,037,421. The expenses of production, &c., were £869,000. Formerly, most of the opium exported from India was consumed in China; but the Government of India, in furtherance of the efforts of the Chinese Government to suppress the growth and consumption of opium in China, decided in 1907 to reduce progressively the amount of Indian opium exported to China, and as from 31 March, 1907, export of Indian opium to China is prohibited.

LICENCE.—Licence fees and duties are levied on the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors, opium, and other drugs. The revenue, owing partly to stricter administration, and partly to enhanced duties, has greatly increased in recent years, and amounted to £12,554,000 net in 1913-14.

CUSTOMS.—The net revenue was £14,297,000 in 1913-14. (For tariff see page 627.) The export duty on rice yielded £248,000, and the countervailing duty on Indian cotton goods £1,034,000 in 1913-14. New and enhanced duties were brought into effect on 1 March, 1912, 1 March, 1917, and 1 March, 1921.

INCOME TAX is levied on non-agricultural incomes at the following rates:—

Annual Income.	Rate of Tax. Per Rupee *
Ra. 2,000 and over	5 ples
" 5,000 "	6 "
" 10,000 "	9 "
" 20,000 "	12 "
" 30,000 "	14 "
" 40,000 "	16 "

* 12 ples = 1 anna, 20 annas = 1 rupee; 10 rupees = 1 (statutory rate), but at present the rupee has a fluctuating value.

Super-tax is leviable in addition to ordinary income tax on incomes of individuals and registered firms above Ra. 50,000, of Hindu undivided families above Ra. 75,000, at 1 to 4 annas in the rupee, and on the taxable incomes of companies above Ra. 50,000 at a flat rate of 1 anna in the rupee.

STAMPS.—Stamps yielded £7,194,000 (net) in 1913-14. About two-thirds of the revenue is from court fees and one-third from commercial stamps.

SALT.—The salt duty was reduced from Ra. 2½ to Ra. 2 a maund (Salb.) in 1903, to Ra. 1½ in 1905, and to R. 1 in 1907. It was increased to Ra. 1½ with effect from 1 March, 1916.

FORESTS.—About 99,000 square miles of forests are reserved and scientifically worked by the State, while about 250,000 square miles besides are under State control. A third of the revenue comes from Burma.

POSTS AND TELEGRAPHS.—The Post Office in 1913-14 conveyed 4,329 millions of letters, postcards, newspapers, &c., and issued 20 millions of money orders. Inland letter rates are the lowest in the world. The length of telegraph wires in India on 31 March, 1920, was 353,000 miles, and the number of messages sent in 1919-20 was over 25 millions. Their capital cost to the end of 1919-20 was £9,792,000. The Indian Postal and Telegraph services were amalgamated on 1 April, 1914. The combined services yielded for the year 1919-20 a net income of £1,381,000. The Indo-European Telegraph Department yielded a profit of 21½ per cent. on its capital expenditure of £1,231,000.

RAILWAYS.—Nearly all the railways in India are owned by the State and administered by a Railway Board, though many are leased to and worked by companies. The mileage open for traffic on 31 March, 1920, was 36,722, while the mileage under construction was 1,222. Of this mileage open about 90 per cent. was on the standard gauge (5½ ft.), and about 10 per cent. on the metre gauge. On the 31st March, 1920, the total capital at charge was £428,462,000. The net earnings of the railways in 1919-20 amounted to £29,664,000. The number of passengers increased to 533 millions, and the goods traffic dropped to 25 million tons. Rates are very low, third-class passengers travelling on the average over four miles for a penny. The net working profit from State railways was £9,207,000 in 1919-20. The total capital expenditure on State and other railways in 1919-20 was about £6,586,000.

IRRIGATION.—The total capital outlay on State irrigation works up to 31st March, 1920, was £1,447,000, which, apart from the advantages to cultivators and protection against famine, yielded a profit to the State, after payment of interest charges, of about £1,275,000. The area irrigated by Government irrigation works was over 25 million acres, while the annual value of the crops raised is estimated at over 150 per cent. on the capital outlay. Two-fifths of the irrigation revenue comes from the Punjab.

HOME CHARGES.—The net expenditure in England, chargeable to Revenue, amounted in 1919-20 to £21,043,000: Interest on Railway Debt and Annuities, £9,336,000; Interest on Irrigation Debt, £5,000; Interest on Ordinary Debt and Management of Debt, £1,223,000; other Debt Services, £1,855,000; Stores, £3,303,000, of which £1,217,000 was for Marine and Military Stores; payments for British forces, troop service, &c., £1,070,000; Army non-effective charges, £2,978,000; Civil annuities, pensions, &c., £1,803,000; Furlough payments, civil and military, £1,274,000; home administration, £387,000. The expenditure of the Indian Government in England is met by bills or telegraphic transfers drawn on India by the Secretary of State, and sold by him in London for sterling.

CURRENCY.—The principal coin in use is the silver rupee, containing 165 grains of fine silver and 13 grains of alloy, and weighing in all 178 grains troy. Up to 1823 the Indian Mints were open by law for the unrestricted coinage of silver into rupees. Owing, however, to the almost continuous fall in the value of the rupee from 1871 to 1893, legislation in the latter year closed the mints to the public, with a view to eventually fixing the exchange. For a time the rupee continued to fall, but subsequently it rose, and between 1898 and 1902 was practically stable at 1s. 4d. The Act of 1899 made the British sovereign legal tender in India at the ratio of 15 rupees to the sovereign, the rupee, however, remaining also legal tender to any amount, but the ratio was altered to 20 rupees in 1900. In 1907 it was decided that half the profit on silver coinage should be applied to capital expenditure on railways; the other half of the profit, and the whole of the interest, being added to the gold standard reserve. In June, 1920, it was decided that no portion of the profit was to be used for railway purposes until the total sterling assets of the Gold Standard Reserve amounted to £25,000,000. The total receipts from profit on coinage, interest and discount, and profit by exchange up to 31 March, 1921, amounted to £42,075,000. Of this sum £1,121,655 has been used for capital expenditure on railways; the remainder has been paid to the Gold Standard Reserve, for the purpose of maintaining the rate of exchange between England and India. On 31 March, 1921, the investments of this fund in sterling securities amounted to £38,951,000 (estimated value), while £4,883 was held in cash in England. India has a paper currency. The 1, 2½, 5, 10, 50, and 100 rupee notes are legal tender everywhere in India, but other notes only within their circles of issue. In 1921 a branch of the Royal Mint was established at Bombay for the minting of gold coins.

ARMY.—In peace time, the Army in India consists, first, of British troops, about 75,000; and, secondly, of Indian troops (largely Muhammadans), about 180,000. In addition, the native Army Reserves number nearly 40,000 men, and the Imperial Service Troops furnished by native States contribute 21,000, including cavalry, transport corps, and sappers. Further, there are 38,000 European and Eurasian volunteers (efficients). For police duties and frontier service the regular military is supplemented by frontier militia and local levies. During the period (1905-9) when Lord Kitchener was Commander-in-Chief, considerable changes were effected in the organisation and training of the Army. On 1 June, 1907, there was a redistribution of the Army of India. The net military expenditure (including marine) has risen from about £30,000,000 in 1912-13 to about £57,985,000 in 1919-20. During the war of 1914-18 the Government of India recruited on a voluntary basis over 800,000 combatants and more than 400,000 non-combatants, giving a grand total of about 1·3 million men. 1,215,000 officers and men were sent on service overseas from India; the total Indian casualties were 105,000. In 1917 the bar hitherto precluding the admission of Indians to King's Commissions was removed; the pay and pensions of the Indian soldiery were improved. It is proposed to form an Auxiliary Force on a volunteer basis. The "Escher" Committee, appointed in 1919, reported in 1920, and made various recommendations (see p. 609), which are now under consideration. Ague is the chief cause of sickness among British troops, and enteric fever the chief cause of death.

The ROYAL INDIAN MARINE consists of ten sea-going vessels, and numerous smaller steamers and launches.

Director R.I.M., Bombay, Rear-Admiral H. L. Mawbey, C.B.Rs. 2,500

EDUCATION.—The main features of the Indian educational position are:—A middle class widely instructed in those arts which qualify for the learned professions; a proletariat, of which only a fraction is literate; a whole sex almost totally devoid of any education whatever. Elementary education is based, so far as possible, on an adaptation of indigenous institutions and traditions. Higher education is an imported product. It is popular, and has undoubtedly been attended with beneficial results. As is natural with an imported product, its development is marked by some crudities, and its influence has to some extent been unsettling. It has appealed to the natural intellectuality of the people, and has succeeded only partially in stimulating practical application. There are eleven Universities, viz., those of Calcutta, Madras, Bombay, Allahabad, Benares, Patna, Dacca, Aligarh (Muhammadan), Lahore, Hyderabad and Mysore. In State institutions education is secular. The institutions in 1919-20 numbered 202,000 and the scholars 8,206,000, including 1,377,000 females. Of the institutions, about 28 per cent. are maintained by the State or aided by grants, the rest being private and unaided. Of the total expenditure on education in 1919-20, £9,926,000, £2,459,000 came from fees, and £5,631,000 from provincial revenues or local and municipal funds. The census of 1911 showed that only 106 males and 10 females per thousand can read and write.

LOCAL SELF-GOVERNMENT, municipal and rural, in its present form, is a product of British rule. The municipalities at the end of 1919-20 numbered 739, controlling a total population of nearly 17½ millions, and receiving an income of £4,968,000 from rates and taxes (octroi, taxes on houses and lands, water, lighting, and conservancy rates, &c.) and £2,639,000 from other sources (excluding loans). Out of 10,187 members of municipal bodies 9,389 were Indians, and 8,967 were non-official. In almost all districts in British India there are local district boards, partly representative. Nearly one-half of their total expenditure of about £5,918,000 in 1918-19 was devoted to civil works, one-fourth to education, and the remainder largely to sanitation and hospitals.

JUSTICE, POLICE, AND PRISONS.—There are about 11,000 officers exercising civil and criminal jurisdiction. Many of the superior and the great majority of the inferior officers are Indians. In 1918, 2,150,000 civil suits were instituted; 1,930,000 persons were tried, and 919,000 convicted, in criminal cases, of whom 454 were sentenced to death, 2,149 to transportation, and 163,724 to imprisonment. The strength of the police in 1918 was 14,385 officers and 188,973 men. There were 774 prisons, with a daily average of 127,000 prisoners, in 1919. At the convict settlement of Port Blair (Andamans) there were 11,553 prisoners on 31 March, 1920.

VITAL STATISTICS.—The reporting of vital occurrences is still defective, and proposals have been formulated with a view to securing more complete and accurate vital statistics. The recorded death rate for British India in the decennium ended 1913 ranged between 38·1 per 1,000 in 1908 and 28·7 in 1913; it was 25·9 per 1,000 in 1919. There were over 7 million deaths from influenza during 1918. Fevers of various kinds are by far the commonest cause of death, cholera, dysentery and diarrhoea, smallpox, and (since 1896) plague being other chief causes. The reported deaths from plague up to the end of 1919 were about 10,540,000 in India as a whole. Over 20,000 people were killed by snakes in 1919. In 3,242 hospitals and dispensaries, maintained mostly from public funds, 35,870,000 patients were treated in 1919. The number of persons vaccinated in 1919 was 10,740,000. According to the census of 1911 there were 120,000 lepers.

SURVEYS.—The Survey Department superintends forest and cadastral surveys, as well as trigonometrical and topographical surveys, special explorations, and map production. Marine, geological, botanical, and archaeological surveys are in operation. The Meteorological Department is of great service in forecasting rainfall.

TRADE OF INDIA.—Among the countries constituting the British Empire, India comes second to the United Kingdom itself in the volume of its sea-borne trade, which almost equals that of Canada and Australia combined. During the five years ending 1923-24 both imports and exports were, on the average, twice as great as they were 25 years ago. The ordinary course of Indian trade shows yearly a large net export of merchandise and a net import of treasure, but in 1920-21 there was an excess of imports. The table below exhibits the leading figures for the last five years in thousands of pounds sterling (Rupees being converted at the rate of 15 to the £).

In 1923-24 both imports and exports of merchandise were of unprecedented magnitude, but the outbreak of war during the course of the year 1924-25 brought the figures for the year down to the level at which they stood five or six years earlier. There was, however, a recovery in 1926-27. The rise in prices was a very potent factor in the increase in values. During the year 1920-21 as compared with 1919-20 the value of the imports increased by £53,743,000 and the exports decreased by £36,366,000. These figures exceed all previous records. In imports the principal articles showing increases were:—cotton goods (£28,548,000), iron and steel (£9,980,000), machinery (£8,906,000), railway plant (£6,366,000), cotton yarn (£6,346,000), motor cars, &c. (£5,610,000), paper, &c. (£3,906,000), hardware (£3,148,000), woollen goods (£2,681,000), instruments (£2,304,000), haberdashery, brass, and dyes. There were decreases in amber (£2,993,000), grain (£2,023,000), silk goods and seeds.

In the export trade grain and pulse increased by £4,997,000, opium by £317,000, lac by £222,000, metals by £1,122,000. The other principal items show considerable decreases.

As will be seen, the bulk of the imports consists of manufactured articles, while two-thirds of the exports consist of food, tobacco, and raw materials.

The following statement shows the chief articles of the foreign trade of India in 1920-21:—

CUSTOMS DUTIES.—The Indian Tariff (Amendment) Acts, 1916 and 1917, and the Finance Bill of 1921, introduced new and enhanced Customs duties with effect from 1 March, 1916, 1 March, 1917, and 1 March, 1921, respectively. The general import tariff, which stood at 5 per cent. ad valorem since 1854, was raised to 7½ per cent. in 1916, and to 11 per cent. in 1921. The principal exceptions to the general rate are as follows:—Cotton yarn and thread are exempt, but the duty on other cotton goods is 11 per cent., an Excise duty of 3½ per cent. being levied on those woven in Indian mills. Arms and ammunition, and certain "luxury" articles, including silver manufactures, pay 20 per cent., sugar 15 per cent., cigars and cigarettes 75 per cent., spirits generally Rs. 18 As. 12 a gallon, salt Rs. 1½ a maund (56 lb.), silver plate, silver thread and wire 20 per cent., refined petroleum As. 1½ a gallon (with an additional As. 6 per gallon on motor spirit; an excise duty of As. 6 per gallon is levied on motor spirit produced in India), coal As. 8 a ton. Iron and steel goods, grain, tea- chests, printing materials, machinery, railway materials, and a few other articles pay 1½ per cent. The duty on manufactured tobacco is Rs. 2 As. 4 per lb., matches As. 12 per gross, beer As. 6 p. 6 per gallon, perfumed spirits Rs. 30 a gallon. Gold, living animals, raw hides, skins, raw cotton and wool, certain agricultural requisites, quinine, and a few other articles are free. There are export duties of As. 3 a maund on rice, Rs. 1½ per 100 lb. on tea, Rs. 4½ per bale of 400 lb. on raw jute other than cuttings, in the case of which the rate is Rs. 1½ per bale; Rs. 20 per ton on jute sacking, Rs. 32 per ton on hemstems, and 15 per cent. ad valorem on raw hides and skins, with a rebate of two-thirds of the duty on hides and skins exported to countries within the British Empire.

SHIPPING.—In 1929-30 the number of vessels engaged in the foreign trade which entered and cleared at ports in British India was 8,222, with a tonnage of 12,000,000. Of this tonnage, 84 per cent. was under the British flag.

PORTS.—The chief ports are Calcutta, Bombay, Karachi, Mangalore, and Madras. These ports are administered by port trusts having wide powers, but subject to Government supervision.

FOREIGN LAND TRADE OF INDIA.—The most important countries in the land trade are Nepal and the Shan States. The imports of merchandise and treasure in 1929-30 were £12,072,000, and the exports £10,544,000.

AGRICULTURE is by far the most important occupation of the people of India. In British territory in 1929-30, 255 million acres were cropped, an increase of 27 million acres as compared with 1918-19. Of the total area cropped about 9 per cent. was under wheat, 31 per cent. under rice, and 28 per cent. under other food-grains and pulses, 5 per cent. under oilseeds, and 7 per cent. under cotton, jute, and other fibres. Jute cultivation has been extraordinarily profitable. Sugar, tea, and tobacco are other important crops. The total area under irrigation was 49 million acres. The agricultural departments (central and provincial), which have been much developed since 1906, supply information as to crop prospects, new staples, manures, crop experiments, implements, cattle-breeding, &c., and distribute seeds. There is also a civil veterinary department.

BANKS AND CO-OPERATIVE CREDIT SOCIETIES.—Besides the three Presidency Banks, closely associated with the Government, there are joint-stock banks, European and Indian, and many small native banks. Much success has been achieved in rural districts by co-operative credit societies. In 1929-30 there were in British India and Indian States 1,394 central, 36,726 agricultural and 2,662 non-agricultural societies, with a total membership of 1,521,148 and a capital of £14,270,000.

MINERALS.—The output of coal in India in 1929 was 22,628,000 tons. The production has much increased in recent years. Nine-tenths of the total comes from Bengal and Bihar and Orissa. The production of crude petroleum in India (chiefly Burma) has increased from 19 million gallons in 1897 to 306 millions in 1929. The production of salt is about 1,821,000 tons. The production of manganese ore in 1929 was about 538,000 tons, and of saltpetre 18,000 tons. The yield of gold (nearly all from Mysore) was about 507,000 oz. in 1929. There is a considerable output of mica and a fluctuating output of rubies and jade. Monazite and wolfram have now taken an important place in the list of minerals of economic value produced in India. The output of the former in 1929 was 2,024 tons, and of the latter 3,577 tons.

MANUFACTURES.—In India the ancient village handicrafts still survive, though they suffer more and more from the competition of machine-made goods. Cotton-weaving is by far the most important hand industry. Power mills have grown up under European auspices, but are now largely owned by natives. The 623 cotton mills at work in British India and Native States in 1929-30, mostly in Bombay and Ahmedabad, contained 6,724,000 spindles and 128,000 looms. Up-country cotton mills have increased. The production in 1929-30 was 626 million lb. of yarn (mostly of low counts) and 354 million lb. of woven goods. There is a tendency to produce finer yarns and to pay more attention to weaving. The 76 jute mills, mostly situated in or near Calcutta, contained 840,000 spindles and 40,000 looms. There were, in 1929, 3 woollen and 9 paper mills, 25 breweries, and various other factories.

STATES OF THE RULING PRINCES AND CHIEFS OF INDIA.

THE States in India whose chiefs are in subordinate alliance with, or under the suzerainty of, the King-Emperor, comprise about two-fifths of the area, but only two-ninths of the population of India. Their administration, with a few unimportant exceptions, is not under the direct control of British officials, but it is subject, in varying degrees, to the Supreme Government. The chiefs are entitled to British protection, but have no power of making war and peace, or of sending ambassadors to one another or to foreign States; the military force they maintain is strictly limited; no European is allowed to reside at any of their courts without special sanction; and in case of misrule the Supreme Government can dethrone the chief or temporarily suspend him from the exercise of his powers. In matters of Imperial interest, trade, main lines of railway, &c., the Supreme Government has jurisdiction. Some States pay tribute, most do not. Tributes aggregating £222,222 (£222,222 from Mysore) were paid to the Government of India in 1919-20. Generally speaking, the States are governed by their Princes, Ministers, and Councils, with the advice of a political officer of the Supreme Government. This officer may have charge, as British Resident, of one large State, or may be the Agent for a group of States. A common characteristic of all Indian States, important or insignificant, is that in their territory British Indian law does not run. For them the Indian Legislature or the Provincial Legislative Councils cannot legislate; and over them the High Courts or Chief Courts of the Provinces have no jurisdiction.

The Assigned Districts of Mysore (Bangalore), Kalat (Quetta), and Berar are still technically Indian States territory. The Shan States, on the other hand, are technically part of British India, though administered by local Sawbwas or petty chiefs. Excluding these territories, the Indian States have a combined area of 709,583 square miles, and a population of 71,936,736. They maintain in the aggregate a considerable body of troops of inferior military organisation in addition to their Imperial Service troops. Many treaties provide that States shall furnish troops on the requisition of the Supreme Government, and troops of Indian States served in almost every Indian campaign of the 19th century. Lord Curzon inaugurated an Imperial Cadet Corps of Indian princes and nobles. The States vary greatly in size and importance. Hyderabad is nearly as large as Great Britain, and the Nizam enjoys a very large revenue. On the other hand, in Kathiawar and elsewhere, where family custom has led to minute sub-division, there are many chiefs of single villages. In these petty estates the nominal chief may have some very limited magisterial powers, but the administration is regulated and carried on by the Supreme Government in its executive capacity. The amount of control thus exercised over an Indian State in its internal affairs depends on a number of considerations, and varies from State to State. The rulers have not necessarily any religious or tribal connexion with the majority of their subjects. Thus the Nizam of Hyderabad is a Muhammadan, but most of his people are Hindus. Although the Indian States, large and small, number 693, only about 200 are of any real importance. The majority represent the scattered military chiefships which sprang from the ruins of the Moghul Empire in the 18th century. The rulers of Gwalior, Indore, and Baroda are all descendants of successful generals who then rose to power. Most of these States are of more recent origin than the British power in India. A unique step was taken in 1920, when a new Indian State was created out of the family domains of the Maharaja of Benares.

The salutes enjoyed by the Indian princes indicate their relative importance. Those with eleven guns or more are addressed as His Highness. On pages 628-9 are the names of 73 ruling chiefs who have salutes of eleven guns or more, with some particulars of their States. Some well-known Indians of title, such as H.H. the Agha Khan, G.C.S.I., G.C.I.E., the Maharaja of Darbhanga, G.C.I.E., and the Maharajah of Burdwan, K.C.S.I., K.C.I.E., are not ruling chiefs.

The States of Hyderabad, Mysore, Baroda, Kashmir, Sikkim, and Kalat, and those belonging to the Rajputana and Central India Agencies, 175 in all, are under the direct supervision of the Governor-General in Council. The remainder, chiefly minor States, are under the supervision or control of various Provincial Governments. The States of first magnitude, which have a superior Resident, are Hyderabad, Mysore, Baroda, Kashmir, Jaipur, Udaipur, Gwalior, Indore, and Travancore and Cochin.

The Indian States may be thus classified:—
1. Hyderabad, the premier State in India (capital, Hyderabad, pop. 404,253—the fourth city in India). This State is in the centre of the Deccan or central plateau of Southern India. The ruling dynasty is of Turkoman origin, and is descended from Asaf Jah, who became Viceroy of the Deccan in 1722, and then independent of the Mogul Emperor. Telugu and Marathi are the chief languages. Wheat, rice, and cotton are produced. The Nizam's Guaranteed Railway is the principal line. 2. Mysore. This State, situated on a plateau in Southern India, was administered by the Indian Government from 1831 to 1882, when it was restored to native rule, under a somewhat strictly framed instrument of transfer. In Dec., 1923, the instrument was replaced by a new Treaty putting the relations between the British Government and the State on a footing more in consonance with the actual position of the Maharaja among the Feudatory Chiefs of India. Kanarese and Telugu are the chief languages. There is a Mysore State Railway. Millets, pulses, and rice are the principal crops. Mysore has important goldfields. 3. Baroda, situated in Western India in Gujarat and Kathiawar and much interlaced with British districts. The reigning Gaekwar was the adopted heir of the ruler deposed in 1875 for misgovernment and misconduct. 4. The Himalayan Hill States, west of Nepal, including Kashmir. The important frontier State of Kashmir (capital, Srinagar, pop. 241,631) was granted to Gholab Singh by Lord Hardinge, after the First Punjab War (1846). It comprises Jammu, Kashmir, Ladakh, Gilgit, and Baltistan. A British force stationed at Gilgit watches the northern passes and controls the feudatory chiefships of Hunza and Nagar; while on the west the subordinate chiefship of Chitral is occupied by British troops, depending for their support on the Peshawar border. 5. Sikkim, a frontier State situated on the borders of Tibet, between Nepal and Bhutan, acknowledged the British protectorate in 1860, when also the boundaries of Tibet were defined by the Sikkim-Tibet Convention. 6. The Sikh States, in the Sirhind plain, south of the Sutlej. The most important of these is Patiala. 7. Rajputana, comprising the ancient sovereignties lying between Sind and the United Provinces. Rajputana (pop. 9,857,012) extends some 400 miles from north to south, and is 230 miles in breadth, and is larger than the British Isles. About half of the area is desert. It comprises 20 States of varying size and importance. Of these 17 are ruled by hereditary Rajput chiefs, two by Jat chiefs, and one by a Muhammadan. The Governor-General's Agent's headquarters are at Ajmer; he has under him Residents for Eastern and Western Rajputana, and about twenty other officers, distributed among the States to supervise the administration, and give advice when it is required. The most important States are Jodhpur (Marwar), Udaipur (Mewar), and Jaipur. The Rajput dynasties, the most ancient in India, go back before the Mogul Empire, and resemble feudal monarchies. 8. The States of Central India, lying to the north of the Nerbudda and to the south and east of Rajputana, although in the aggregate one-third less in extent than those of Rajputana, are nearly four times as numerous. All but 17 are petty chiefships. The most important are Gwalior and Indore, which include between them one-half of the whole area. The 31 minor States of Bundelkhand (largest, Rewa) are in political relation with the Central India Agency. Bhopal, one of the principal Muhammadan States in India, is now for a fourth generation under female rule. 9. The Malayalm States of Travancore and Cochin, lying together in S.W. India. These important States, attached to Madras Presidency, represent ancient Hindu dynasties. 10. The three northern Muhammadan States of Khatwar (Sind), Bahawalpur, and Rampur. 11. Kalat (including Makran and Kharan) and Las Bela, with tribal areas in the possession of the Marri and Bugti tribes. 12. Gujarat, including Kutch and the numerous petty chiefships of Kathiawar. 13. The Southern Marhatta States. 14. The numerous Afghan and Baluch tribes of the N.W. frontier, inhabiting the mountains from the north of Peshawar to the base of the Sulaiman range, a distance of 800 miles. The names of some of these tribes, Waziris, Orakzais, Afridis, &c., have become familiar owing to the many expeditions against them. 15. The aboriginal Gond and Kol tribes, under petty princes of aboriginal or Rajput blood, in Chota-Nagpur, Orissa, the Central Provinces, and the Jaipur (Vijaypatnam) Agency. 16. The Indo-Chinese group of States, and the numerous hill tribes of the N.E. frontier.

NEPAL.

Sovereign, His Majesty Maharaja Dhiraja Tribhuhana Bir Bikram Jung Bahadur Shah Bahadur Shamsher Jang; etc. 1911. Salute in British territory, 21 guns.

Prime Min., H. H. Maharaja General Sir Chandra Shamsher Jang, Bahadur Rana, G.C.B., G.C.S.I., G.C.M.G., G.O.V.O., D.C.L.

Nepal (area, about 54,000 sq. miles; pop. 5,629,000) lies between British India and Tibet on the S. slopes of the Himalayas, and includes Mt. Everest (29,141 ft.). Amid the sterile mountains lie many fertile valleys. The lower hills are covered with jungle, in which wild animals abound. Rice, wheat, &c., are grown. Nepal is divided into four provinces. In 1900-1 its exports to British India were £4,112,000, while its imports amounted to £1,913,000. The chief trade route is that between Kathmandu and the Bengal frontier (56 miles). Nepal exports rice and other grains, hides, cloths, ghee, cattle, jute, &c., and imports cotton goods and yarn, sugar, salt, spices, metals, &c. The revenue, realised chiefly from land rent, forests, customs, &c., is over £1,000,000. The aborigines are Mongolian in type, and their religion is Buddhism. The country was conquered in 1769 by the Gurkhas, who are Hindus and claim to be Rajputs. Their frequent aggressions led to a war with the British in 1814-6. Relations have now long been friendly. The policy of seclusion is, however, consistently followed by the native rulers. The real political power rests with the Prime Minister, who paid a most successful visit to England in 1908. The British Envoy does not interfere in internal affairs. The army numbers about 45,000. By arrangement with Nepal, India obtains many fine recruits for its Gurkha regiments.

BHUTAN.

Bhutan (area, about 30,000 sq. miles; pop. about 350,000, mainly Buddhists) also lies on the S.E. of the Himalayas, and its products resemble those of Nepal. In 1863, owing to outrages on British subjects, portions of it were annexed to India, an annual allowance being paid by the Indian Government as compensation. By a treaty in 1900 this allowance was fixed at £6,667, and Bhutan agreed to be guided in its external relations by the advice of the British, who, however, will not interfere in its internal affairs. The former dual government of a spiritual chief and a temporal chief came to an end when the Tongsa Penlop, the chief councillor and virtual ruler, Sir Ugyen Wangchuk, K.C.S.I., K.C.I.E., was chosen hereditary Maharaja in 1907. He has a salute of 15 guns in British territory. The estimated annual revenue is £73,000. Bhutan's total trade with India in 1900-1 was £129,474. There is no British Resident.

AFGHANISTAN.

Amir of Afghanistan and its Dependencies, H. H. Amir Amanulla Khan; etc. 1909. Salute in British territory, 21 guns.

Afghanistan (called Khorassan by the natives) lies on the N.W. frontier of India.

Estimated area, 250,000 sq. miles, and pop. 4,600,000. It is bounded on the W. by Persia (boundary fixed 1857 and 1904), on the S. by Baluchistan (boundary fixed 1896-7), on the N. by Asiatic Russia (boundary fixed 1886-7 and 1893-5), and on the E. by the N.W. Frontier Province (boundary fixed 1895). The northern boundary runs from Zulfikar on the Persian frontier to Kushk, the Russian railway terminus on the branch line from Merv, and thence N.E. to the Oxus, which forms the boundary from Khamiab to Lake Victoria, whence the line to the Chinese frontier was fixed by the Pamir agreement of 1895. The Indo-Afghan frontier was settled by the Durand agreement of 1903. On this frontier from the Pamirs to the Gomal Pass are many Pathan tribes, who are much influenced by mullahs.

Mountains, chief among which are the Hindu Kush, cover three-fourths of the country, the elevation being generally over 4,000 feet. There are three great river basins, the Oxus, Helmand, and Kabul. The climate is dry, with extreme temperatures. The population is very mixed. The Afghans (or Duranis) have predominated since 1747, especially in Kandahar; next come the Ghilzais (military and commercial) and the Tajiks (aboriginals, who are cultivators or retail traders). All are Sunni Muhammadans, except the Hazaras and Kizilbashs, who belong to the Shiite sect. The national tongue is Pushtu.

Afghanistan is divided into six provinces, Kabul, Kandahar, Herat, Turkestan, Farrah, and Badakhshan (with Kafiristan and Wakhan), which are under governors, with subordinate nobles and judges, police, and revenue officers. Amir Abdurrahman (1880-1901) established a strong central government, with a regular civil and military organisation, including offices for public works, posts, police, finance, trade, &c. He first formed a national army, paid and controlled by himself. It comprises about 90,000 regulars and irregulars, but lacks discipline and cohesion. Considerable quantities of rifles and artillery have been purchased in Europe under arrangements made with the Government of India. Factories for arms and ammunition, and for various commercial products, have been erected in Kabul. The Afghan laws are Islamic sacred laws, tribal laws, and those of the Amir, who is the Court of Appeal. The law is bulky and the criminal law severe. Recently steps have been taken to develop education, hitherto controlled by the mullahs. Most of the people are industrious cultivators, and the country has become fairly settled, peaceful, and prosperous. There is excellent irrigation and all profitable soil is utilised. There are generally two crops a year, one of wheat (the staple food), barley, or lentils, the other of rice, millet, maize, and dal. Afghanistan is rich in fruits, sheep and transport animals are bred. Silk, woollen, and hair cloths and carpets are manufactured. Salt, silver, copper, coal, iron, lead, rubies, and gold are found. The roads are generally unsuitable for wheeled traffic, but are being improved. Goods are conveyed by pack animals. The chief trade routes to India are the Khaibar Pass, from Kabul to Peshawar (191 miles), along which a motor service was established by the late Amir, and the road from Kandahar to Quetta (225 miles). The Shikhar railway is now completed to the Baluchistan-Persian frontier. The trade of Afghanistan with India in 1900-01 was over £1,014,000. The exports to India are mainly fruits and nuts, raw wool, and ghis; while the imports therefrom are chiefly cotton yarn and piece goods, metals, leather goods, tea, and sugar. The Afghan customs duties are heavy. There is a large export of wool to Persia and Russia, cotton and silk goods, sugar, &c., being taken in exchange. The annual revenue is unknown, and consists largely of payments in kind. It may amount to £750,000. There are taxes on land, a grazing tax, customs duties, stamps, fines, poll-taxes, receipts from State lands, monopolies, and factories, and mining royalties.

As the result of a British mission to Kabul in 1900-01 the engagements which had existed with the Amir Abdurrahman since 1860 were renewed by the treaty of 21 March, 1905. By the Anglo-Russian Convention of August, 1907, Russia declared Afghanistan outside the Russian sphere of influence.

His Majesty the late Amir Habibullah Khan was assassinated on February 20, 1919; his brother, Nusrulla Khan, by a coup d'état thereupon seized and temporarily held the reins of government at Kabul, but the Amir's third son, Amanullah Khan, soon after declared himself, and was recognised as, Amir. Afghan troops crossed the Indian frontier on May 2, on which the Indian Government took immediate steps to expel them; fighting followed and Dacca was occupied by British troops, but overtures were made by the Amir and a treaty of peace was signed in August.

The treaty provided that the privilege enjoyed by former Amirs of importing arms and ammunition through India should be withdrawn; the arrears of the late Amir's subsidy were confiscated, and no subsidy is to be granted to the present Amir; the British Government expressed willingness, conditionally, to receive another Afghan mission, after six months, for the discussion and settlement of matters of common interest and the re-establishment of the old friendship on a satisfactory basis; the Afghan Government agreed to the Indo-Afghan frontier accepted by the late Amir and agreed to the early demarcation by a British Commission of the West Khyber where the Afghan aggression happened, and to accept such boundary as the British Commission may lay down. By this treaty Afghanistan is left officially free and independent, both internal and external. All previous treaties have been cancelled by the war. Representatives of the Indian Government and of the Amir met at Mussoorie in 1902 to discuss questions affecting the relations between the two governments, and further negotiations are now proceeding at Kabul.

CAPITAL. Kabul (about 180,000). The chief commercial centre is Kandahar (80,000). Other provincial capitals are Herat (20,000) and Tashkurgan (17,000). British Agent (vacant), Rs. 1,000.

MESOPOTAMIA AND THE PERSIAN GULF.—For three centuries England has taken the lead in the Gulf trade. She has suppressed piracy, slavery, and inter-tribal warfare on land and sea, made surveys, and laid down buoys and cables. Vigorous measures have been taken against gun-running. England and India still have the lion's share of the trade, the bulk of which is conducted by Indians, who make Bombay their entrepôt. The Arabian shores are low-lying deserts, the Persian coasts mountainous; at the head of the Gulf are great alluvial plains. The heat is intense in summer. Natural harbours are few. The British Government have been entrusted with the mandate for Mesopotamia. Municipal Councils, representative divisional councils, and a Council of State have been set up. Emir Feisal was elected King in 1921. The port of Basra has been greatly developed and a large capital expenditure has been incurred on railways during the British occupation. High Commr., Mesopotamia, Maj.-Gen. The Hon. Sir P. Z. Cox, G.C.I.E., K.C.S.I.

Bahrain (capital, Manama), governed by Sheikh Isa bin Ali and under the protectorate of the Indian Government, is the largest of a group of islands half-way up the Gulf, near the Arab coast (El Katr). It is the headquarters of extensive pearl fisheries, and a distributing centre for the adjacent mainland. Pearls are the only notable export; rice, cotton goods, dates, sugar, and spices the chief imports. In 1918-19 the value of the exports was £1,328,000, and of the imports £1,330,000. The people (about 200,000) are Muhammadans. The Sheikh has been in treaty relations since 1820 with the Government of India, who have a Political Agent at Bahrain. In 1880 he engaged not to make treaties with any other State.

The Sultan of Oman (Muscat) is in treaty relations with, and subsidised by, the Government of India, who have a Political Agent at his Court.

The independent tribes on the Pirate (Arab) Coast from Ras-el-Kheima to Odeid are bound under treaties with the Indian Government (dating from 1820, and confirmed in 1853 by a Treaty of Perpetual Peace) to maintain a maritime truce for the prevention of piracy and slavery, and for the cessation of hostilities at sea. Hence their chiefs are sometimes called the "Trucial" chiefs. The British Political Resident in the Persian Gulf is the recognised arbiter and adviser of these tribes, and peace is maintained by the British flag. In 1820 these tribes agreed not to enter into relations with, or cede territory to, any other Power than the British. The trade of the Arab coast ports largely consists in exports of pearls to India via Lingah and Bahrain.

Important caravan routes converge at Koweit, which has an excellent harbour. The Sheikh is under treaty obligations with the Indian Government.

PERSIA (g.v.) borders on Baluchistan and Afghanistan. The demarcation of the Perso-Baluch frontier, partially carried out in 1879 and 1893, was completed in 1905.

ASIATIC RUSSIA.—A portion of what was once the Russian Empire is continuous with Persia and Afghanistan. The Trans-Caspian Railway runs, via Merv, to Samarkand and Andjan, with a branch to Tashkent. The Murghab Valley branch from Merv to Kushk on the Afghan frontier, opened in 1898, brings the Russian railways within 20 miles of Herat, and within 400 miles of the Chaman terminus of the Indian railways.

Another important strategic line connects Tashkent directly with Orenburg. The Amu-Darya, or Oxus, which separates Bokhara from Afghanistan for 330 miles, is navigated by Russian steamers.

CHINA.—India is in contact with two dependencies of China, Chinese Turkistan and Tibet, and one province, Yunnan.

Chinese Turkistan is surrounded by the mountains of Tianshan, the Pamirs, and Kuenlun. There are three difficult passes into Russian Turkistan and two still more difficult ones into India. The boundary between Kashmir and Chinese Turkistan has not been officially defined. There is a British consul-general at Kashgar (Lt. Col. P. T. Etherton). Trade with India is chiefly carried over the Karakoram Pass (18,500 feet) via Ladakh, in Kashmir.

Tibet, a plateau seldom lower than 10,000 feet, forms the northern frontier of India (boundary imperfectly defined), from Kashmir to Burma, but is separated therefrom by the Himalayas. India imports from Tibet wool, borax, salt, and musk, in exchange for cotton and woollen goods and grain. The total trade in 1900-1 was about £700,000. Trade passes from Bengal (through Sikkim) and from the Punjab and the United Provinces. Under the Anglo-Chinese Sikkim Convention of 1890, a trade mart was opened at Yatung; but as the Tibetans persistently disregarded the Convention, a political mission was despatched from India, with a military escort. It reached the capital, Lhasa, after sharp fighting, on 3 August, 1904. A new Convention was signed (7 Sept.), providing for the erection of boundary pillars between Sikkim and Tibet; for three trade marts, with British and Tibetan agents; for unrestricted traffic by existing routes; and for payment of an indemnity. The Tibetans pledged themselves not to alienate any territory or grant concessions to, or permit the intervention of, any foreign Power. By the Convention of Peking (April, 1906) China accepted the Conventions of 1890 and 1904, and declared that no foreign State should interfere in Tibet, while England also undertook not to interfere in the administration of Tibet or annex territory. By the Anglo-Russian Convention of Aug., 1907, both Powers recognised the suzerain rights of China in Tibet, agreed to maintain its territorial integrity, to refrain from intervention in its internal administration, to treat with Tibet only through the Chinese Government, not to send representatives to Lhasa, not to assign any territory to either Power, and not to obtain railway, mining, or other concessions; but direct relations between British commercial agents and Tibetan authorities under the Conventions of 1904 and 1906 are permitted. In Dec., 1909, the ruler of Tibet, the Tashi Lama, visited India. The Dalai (or Sacred) Lama, who fled before the British advance on Lhasa, returned to Tibet in Jan., 1910. The Chinese had meanwhile strengthened their hold over the administration, despite the opposition of the Lamas, or monks, who resented the loss of their authority. In Feb., 1910, the Dalai Lama again fled to India, pursued by Chinese troops. He was then deposed by the Chinese Emperor. The British Government refused the Dalai Lama's appeal for their intervention, but allowed him to remain at Darjiling. He left India in June, 1912, for Lhasa, where sharp fighting occurred between the Chinese and Tibetans, the former being worsted. In August, 1912, the British Minister at Peking presented a Note to the Chinese Government, urging that China should not actively intervene in internal administration in Tibet. To this the Chinese Government agreed, and representatives of the British, Chinese, and Tibetan Governments met in conference at Simla in Oct., 1913, to discuss the relations between the three countries. A convention, the terms of which have not been made public, was initiated by the three representatives, but the Chinese Government have so far refused to ratify it.

Yunnan is a Chinese province to the N.E. of Burma. By Anglo-Chinese agreements of 1894 and 1897 a boundary was fixed between Burma and Yunnan, and arrangements were made regarding trade, extradition, &c. Part of the boundary is still undefined. By an agreement of 1896 Great Britain and France agreed to share equally all privileges or advantages that might be conceded by China in Yunnan. Trade with Yunnan is chiefly by a difficult route from Bhamo, in Upper Burma. The direct trade was about £1,552,000 in 1901-2. Burma imports from Yunnan hides, raw silk, &c., and exports cotton goods, &c. Têng-yueh and Saumao, near the Burma frontier, are treaty "ports." There are British consuls at Têng-yueh and Yunnan-fu.

SIAM (S.E.) marches with Burma for many hundreds of miles through mountainous country, and considerable trade is carried on over this frontier, mainly with Chienmai. Burma imports from Siam teak, cattle, silk goods, &c., and exports cotton goods, &c. In 1900-1 the value of the total trade was about £627,000. The boundary of Burma and N.W. Siam was demarcated in 1893-3. France in 1904 recognised the portion of Siam west of the Menam basin, including the Malay peninsula and adjacent islands as within the British sphere of influence.

PHYSIOGRAPHY.

Canada was originally discovered by Cabot in 1497, but its history dates only from 1534, when the French took possession of the country. The first settlement (Quebec) was founded by them in 1608. In 1759 Quebec succumbed to the British forces under General Wolfe, and in 1763 the whole territory of Canada became a possession of Great Britain by the Treaty of Paris of that year. Nova Scotia was ceded in 1713 by the Treaty of Utrecht, the Provinces of New Brunswick and Prince Edward Island being subsequently formed out of it. British Columbia was formed into a Crown colony in 1858, having previously been a part of the Hudson Bay Territory, and was united to Vancouver Island in 1866. By the British North America Act, passed in 1867, the Provinces of Canada (Ontario and Quebec), Nova Scotia, and New Brunswick were united under the title of THE DOMINION OF CANADA, and provision was made in the Act for the admission at any subsequent period of the other provinces and territories of British North America.

The Dominion of Canada occupies the whole of the northern part of the North American Continent (with the exception of Alaska and part of the coast of Labrador), from 40° North latitude to the Arctic seas, and from the Pacific to the Atlantic Ocean. The boundaries between the Ungava district of the Labrador peninsula (transferred to Quebec in 1912) and the Labrador coast region of Newfoundland are expected to be settled shortly by a Judicial Commission.

Relief.—From a physical point of view Canada may be divided into an eastern and a western division, the Red River Valley, in long. 97°, forming the separating line. The eastern division comprises three areas, presenting radically distinct aspects:—(1) The south-eastern area, bounded by the line of the Gulf and River St. Lawrence, from Belle Isle to Montreal, thence by a line running directly south to Lake Champlain, which is generally hilly, and sometimes mountainous, with many fine stretches of agricultural and pastoral lands. (2) The southern and western area, presenting, in the main, a broad, level, and slightly undulating expanse of generally fertile country, with occasional step-like ridges or rocky escarpments. The main hydrographical feature is the chain of lakes, with an area of 150,000 square miles, contributing to the great river system of the St. Lawrence. (3) The northern area, embracing nearly two-thirds of the Dominion, with an average elevation of 1,000 feet above the level of the sea, pre-eminently a region of waterways, and including the great Laurentian mountain range. In this area are found the other great river systems, the Nelson and the Mackenzie. The western division referred to may also be said to possess two areas equally distinct in character. The first stretches from the Red River Valley to the Rocky Mountains. Here, between lat. 40° and 54°, is the great Prairie Region, rising to the west in three terrace-like elevations, the lowest of which is 700 feet, and the third about 3,000 feet above the level of the sea. North of the 54th parallel the country passes again into forest. The second area, from the western edge of the Prairie to the Pacific coast, is a distance of 400 miles, and contains the Rocky Mountains (Mount Hooker, 15,700 feet) and the Gold and Cascade Ranges, whose summits are from 4,000 to 16,000 feet high, the country being on the whole densely wooded.

Climate.—The climate in the eastern and central portions of the Dominion presents greater extremes of cold and heat than in corresponding latitudes in Europe, but in the south-western portion of the Prairie Region and the southern portions of the Pacific slope the climate is milder. Spring, summer, and autumn are of about seven to eight months' duration, and the winter four to five months. The soil is generally fertile and all the products of the temperate zone are cultivated.

GOVERNMENT.

Canada is a self-governing Dominion within the British Empire, its constitution resting on the British North America Act of 1867, under which the Dominion of Canada came into being on July 1, 1867 (Dominion Day). The Executive power is vested in a Governor-General appointed by the Sovereign and aided by a Privy Council.

THE LEGISLATURE.

Parliament consists of a Senate and a House of Commons. The Senate consists of 87 members, nominated for life by the Governor-General, distributed between the various provinces thus: 24 for Ontario, 24 for Quebec, 10 for Nova Scotia, 10 for New Brunswick, 4 for Prince Edward Island, 3 for British Columbia, 4 for Manitoba, 4 for Alberta, and 4 for Saskatchewan; each nominee must be thirty years old, a resident in the province for which he is appointed, a natural-born or naturalised subject of the King, and the owner of a property qualification amounting to $4,000. The Speaker of the Senate is chosen by the Government of the day. The House of Commons is chosen every five years at longest, and the 1917-1922 Parliament consists of 234 members, elected as follows: 82 for Ontario, 65 for Quebec, 16 for Nova Scotia, 11 for New Brunswick, 15 for Manitoba, 13 for British Columbia, 3 for Prince Edward Island, 12 for Alberta, 16 for Saskatchewan, and 1 for Yukon. The House of Commons is also composed of natural-born or naturalised subjects of the King; no property qualification is necessary, and its members are elected upon a very wide suffrage. For electoral purposes each province is divided into districts, returning a member on a majority of votes taken by ballot. The members of the House themselves elect their Speaker, and twenty, including the Speaker, form a quorum. Members of the Upper and Lower Houses receive $4,000 per Session, with travelling expenses and deductions for non-attendance.

The Houses of Parliament were destroyed by fire in 1916, the new buildings being started the same year; the foundation stone was laid by H.R.H. the Duke of Connaught (Gov. Gen.), Sept. 1, 1917, and the corner stone of the main tower by H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, Sept. 1, 1919. The Speaker's Chair in the new House of Commons (a replica of that at Westminster) was presented in 1921 by Viscount Ullswater (ex-Speaker of the House of Commons of the United Kingdom) on behalf of the Empire Parliamentary Association of the Houses of Lords and Commons.

THE JUDICATURE.

The Judiciary.—Justice is administered, as in England, by judges, police magistrates, and justices of the peace, of whom the first-named are appointed by the Governor-General, for life, from among the foremost men at the Bar in the several provinces. The highest court is the Supreme Court of Canada, composed of a Chief Justice and five puisne judges, and holding three sessions in the year at Ottawa. The only other Dominion Court, viz., the Exchequer Court of Canada, is presided over by separate judges, and its sittings may be held anywhere in Canada. The Provincial Courts include the Court of Chancery, Court of King's Bench, Court of Error and Appeal, Superior Courts, County Courts, General Sessions, and Division Courts. The duties of coroners are generally analogous to those in force in England, as are also methods of civil and criminal procedure, while trial by jury prevails.

Rt. Hon. Chief Justice of Canada, Rt. Hon. Sir Louis Davies, K.C.M.G. $10,000
Puisne Judges, Hon. J. Idington; Rt. Hon. Lyman Poore Duff; Hon. F. A. Anglin; Hon. Louis Philippe Brodeur; Hon. Pierre B. Mignault..... each 9,000
President of the Court of Exchequer for the Dominion, Hon. Sir Walter Cassels 8,000
Puisne Judge of the Exchequer Court, Hon. Louis A. Audette, I.L.D. 7,000
Registrar of the Supreme Court, E. R. Cameron, K.C. 5,000
Registrar of the Exchequer Court, C. Morse, K.C., D.C.L. 3,900

DEFENCE.

Service in the Militia is universal and compulsory on all male citizens from 18 to 60. Service in the Active Militia is for 3 years with 8-16 days' annual training. The Peace Effective consists of a Permanent Force of 7,000 officers and men, and about 100,000 Active Militia. The War Effective consists of four classes: the unmarried men 18 to 30; the unmarried men 30 to 40; the married men 18 to 45; and, finally, the remaining male citizens of 18 to 60, a total of 2,200,000.

Expeditionary Force.—The number enlisted up to the cessation of hostilities was 595,441, of whom 418,052 were sent overseas. Up to Nov. 30, 1918, the total outlay for the War was $1,068,607,000.

Militia Council.

Royal Canadian Navy.

There are Naval stations on the Atlantic and Pacific, and H.M.C.S. Aurora, Niobe, and Rainbow (cruisers), and Patriot and Patrician (t.b.d.) are maintained and used as training ships for the Royal Canadian Navy.

EDUCATION.

Education is under the control of the Provincial Governments, the cost being met by local taxation, aided by grants from the several Provincial Governments. There are (1917) 28,007 elementary and secondary schools (attendance at the former being compulsory except in the Province of Quebec), with over 1,385,722 pupils; and 65 universities and university colleges with about 24,050 students. The 22 universities had about 16,000 students in 1917.

Agriculture and Live Stock.—The total area is 234,163,030 acres, and in 1920 the area of cleared land was 14,897,839 acres, of which 10,108,872 acres were under crops. The total value of the agricultural production in 1929 was $397,238,400. In 1920, 886 cheese factories produced 98,847,769 lb. of cheese valued at $24,615,290, and 1950 creameries made 37,148,898 lb. of butter valued at $21,245,664. In 1920 there were 704,640 horses, 2,881,827 cattle, 1,120,084 sheep, 1,614,356 pigs, and 11,005,645 poultry. Free grants of land are obtainable in the great clay belt of Ontario, opened up by the Tamiakaming and Northern Ontario railway. Improved farms, orchards and small holdings can be bought on reasonable terms in the older settled parts of the Province. There is a scheme of land settlement, with free land and financial assistance for returned soldiers, both Imperial and Canadian. There is always a demand for farm workers.

Log Products.—The total production of log and timber products and wood pulp amounted in 1926 to $42,260,053, or 24 per cent. of the lumber and pulp trade of the whole Dominion.

Manufactures.—Ontario is the chief manufacturing province of Canada. The total value of its manufactures in 1925 was $715,431,839, an increase since 1920 of $136,000,000. There were, in 1925, 6,538 factories with nearly 250,000 employees, an invested capital of $946,619,114, and an annual wage bill of $144,609,691.

Minerals.—Ontario is the leading mineral Province in the Dominion, the mines yielding $68,456,781 in 1920, and non-metallic minerals $22,227,984. The principal metals are: gold, output in 1920 $11,665,735, silver, $10,819,678, nickel, $15,690,131, and copper, $2,928,750.

Hydro-Electric Power.—One of the greatest Government-owned public utility organisations in the world is the Ontario Hydro-Electric Commission, supplying light and power from Niagara and elsewhere. These works are now developing 237,733 horse-power, and a further development of 300,000 horse-power is now under construction.

Principal Cities.—CAPITAL, TORONTO, population (1919) 499,278, with great shipping interests on the Lakes, and the chief centre of industrial and commercial activity; Hamilton, the "Birmingham of Canada" (208,143); Ottawa, the Federal capital (107,739), with a large lumber trade and woodware manufactures; London (59,120); Brantford (32,199); Kingston (32,261); Peterborough (21,290); Windsor (31,629); Port William (19,886); Kitchener (21,056); Guelph (17,032); St. Thomas (17,759); Stratford (12,106); Owen Sound (12,218); St. Catharines (19,195); Port Arthur (15,094); Sault Ste. Agent-General for Quebec in England, Lt.-Col. J. P. Pelletier, 38 Kingsway, W.C. 2.

Finance.—The actual revenue for the year 1919-20 was $14,498,661 and the actual expenditure $13,520,740. The Debt is stated at $44,153,714.

Production and Industry.—The total value of manufactured products in 1915 was $387,900,585 (1900, $158,287,994), the principal manufacturing centres being (1915): Montreal ($443,237,575), Quebec ($18,933,777), Hull ($6,737,574), Maisonneuve ($5,033,541), and Lachine ($3,257,812). The lumber industry is still by far the most important trade, but the settled portion of the country has been too much denuded of wood, and the provincial Government has found it necessary to organize an effective service of rangers to prevent the destruction of trees by forest fires. The forest lands cover an area of over 150,000,000 acres, of which 45,000,000 are under licence to cut timber. The wood-pulp industry is assuming great importance; several large factories have recently been built, and the value of the output, which was only $2,516,683 at the Census of 1921, was, in 1916, $6,840,489. Improved farms may often be obtained in the eastern townships, largely occupied by settlers from Great Britain, at from £4 to £6 per acre, including dwelling-house, outbuildings, and fencing; while unimproved lands may be bought from the Government at from 20 to 60 cents per acre, and the purchase-money paid in five instalments. The area of land subdivided for the purpose of settlement unsold on June 30, 1917, was 7,297,471 acres. In 1920 there were 1813 cheese and butter factories. The total value of dairy industry products was $35,708,621.

Education.—The Superintendent of Instruction, assisted by a Council of 44 members, is invested with the central control of Education. The schools, both Roman Catholic and Protestant, are maintained partly by local taxation and partly by Government grants. There were, in 1919-20, 7,589 schools with 516,968 scholars, including the high and superior schools and 14 normal schools supported by the State. There are also Schools of Agriculture, Commercial and Classical Schools, and four Universities—two Protestant, McGill College, Montreal, and Bishop's College, Lennoxville; and Laval University (Quebec) and Montreal University, Roman Catholic.

Principal Cities.—CAPITAL, QUEBEC (population, 116,000), with a large export timber trade, and the great seaport town of Canada; and Montreal (population, 775,000), the commercial metropolis, and the principal centre of the grain export trade north of New York, situate at the confluence of the Ottawa and St. Lawrence Rivers. Ocean-going steamers ascend the St. Lawrence as far as Montreal. Other important cities are Hull (30,586), Sherbrooke (32,212), Westmount (19,000), Trois Rivières (26,000), Verdun (28,310), St. Hyacinthe (12,491), Sorel (9,229), and Lévis (9,672).

NOVA SCOTIA.

Area and Population.—NOVA SCOTIA is a peninsula between 43° 25'–47° N. lat. and 59° 40'–66° 25' W. long., and is connected with New Brunswick by a low fertile isthmus about thirteen miles wide. It comprises an area (with Cape Breton Island) of 20,907 square miles (one-fifth of which consists of lakes, rivers and inlets of the sea) with a total population, at the Census of 1921, of 544,579, an increase since the last census of 32,241 persons.

Government.—The Government is administered by a Lieutenant-Governor, aided by an Executive Council, a Legislative Council of 21 members, and a Legislative Assembly of 43 members.

Lieut.-Governor, Hon. MacCallum Grant.

Agriculture and Live Stock.—About 10,000,000 acres are fit for tillage, and the soil is of good average fertility. The climate is delightful, the winter being less severe than in most of the other parts of the Dominion. In 1920 there were 5,260,455 acres of land occupied, of which 3,093,633 acres were under crop, 3,166,822 acres in pasture and partially wooded lands, of which about 70,000 acres were in gardens and orchards. Hay is the most important crop of the Province. Fruit is extensively cultivated, and Nova Scotia apples are claimed to be the best in the world. The principal fruit belt being the Annapolis Valley. The total returns from the agricultural industry in 1920 were $49,456,500. Improved farms of 100 to 250 acres, with house and buildings, may be obtained at from £100 to £1,000, whilst the Government offer uncleared Crown lands at $80 per 100 acres, or 80 cents per acre for any additional quantity. Through the Land Settlement Act, the Government gives practical assistance to skilled farmers. There is a Government agricultural college and experimental farm at Truro for men and women, and a well-equipped technical college at Halifax.

Manufactures.—In 1917 there were 2,147 industrial establishments with a capital of $236,521,655, paying 31,298 wage-earners' salaries amounting to $23,533,090. The value of the total output in 1917 was $75,766,000 (1900, $23,520,513).

Fisheries.—Up to March 31, 1918, the sum of $6,695,812 represented the amount invested in the fisheries. The total value of the fish marketed in 1920 was $13,890,000 and the number of persons employed was 35,000.

Minerals.—The coal deposits are extensive and of quality ranging up to 14,000 B.T.U.; 5,687,970 gross tons were produced in 1920; 249,993 tons limestone, 174,520 tons of gypsum, and 5,069 tons of calcined gypsum. Iron ores are plentiful, and extensive manufactures of iron and steel are carried on at Sydney and Sydney Mines, Cape Breton.

Principal Cities.—CAPITAL, HALIFAX (population 57,674), one of the terminals of the Intercolonial Railway, with a magnificent harbour, is the principal winter port of Canada, and the entrepôt of a large trade with the West Indies and South America. A shipyard for the building of large ocean-going steamers is one of the leading industries. Other towns are Sydney (22,527); Glace Bay (16,992); Amherst (9,975); Sydney Mines (8,328); Truro (7,651); Yarmouth (7,062); New Glasgow (8,959); Spring Hill (4,955); North Sydney (6,780); and Dartmouth (11,700).

CAPE BRETON ISLAND.

Cape Breton Island, formerly a distinct Colony, now incorporated with Nova Scotia, contains an area of 3,975 square miles, with a population of 230,000 inhabitants. The chief city, Sydney (pop. 22,527), on the eastern coast, has valuable collieries in the neighbourhood and is the site of the largest steel works in Canada. The plate mill recently erected will supply the steel plates required by the various steel shipbuilding plants of Canada. The Canadian Government Railway connects the island with the mainland.

NEW BRUNSWICK.

Area and Population.—NEW BRUNSWICK is situated between 45°—48° N. lat. and 63° 47'—69° W. long., and comprises an area of 27,985 square miles, with a population in 1921 of 358,092 (199,867 males and 178,022 females in 1911), an increase since the last census of 6,203 persons. It was first colonised by British subjects in 1761, and in 1783 by the inhabitants of New England, who were dispossessed of their property in consequence of their loyalty to the British Crown.

Government.—The Government is administered by a Lieutenant-Governor, assisted by an Executive Council, and a Legislative Assembly of 48 members elected by the people.

Agriculture and Live Stock.—In 1920, 29,485 acres were under wheat, 309,071 under oats, and 66,366 under buckwheat, with 8,177 acres under barley. The produce in 1920 was 464,400 bushels of wheat, 9,177,600 bushels of oats, and 1,509,800 bushels of buckwheat. 78,335 acres of potatoes produced 15,510,300 bushels, and 20,030 acres of turnips 7,070,600 bushels. The total value of the field crops in 1920 was $47,257,290. The live stock (1920) included 232,988 cattle, 280,090 sheep, 92,925 pigs, and 76,737 horses. Free grants of land are offered, and settlement encouraged. Improved farms are obtainable at reasonable rates. The fisheries include salmon, cod, mackerel, herring, and albacore; the capital invested in this industry is upwards of $5,000,000, giving employment to 22,000 persons. In 1920 there were 23 cheese factories in operation, producing 1,207,964 lb., value $308,496, and from 17 creameries 1,064,365 lb. of butter.

Manufactures.—The value of the total output of manufactured goods in 1920 was $35,422,302 (1900, $20,972,470), the principal manufacturing centre being St. John ($10,082,667). The chief industrial pursuits arise from the produce of the forests and the fisheries. Natural gas has been found in immense quantities in Albert County, and the south-eastern section of the Province is remarkably rich in oil shales. Coal is found; also silver, lead, antimony, copper, iron, manganese, and other valuable minerals in considerable quantities.

Principal Cities.—CAPITAL, FREDERICTON; population (1921) 7,208. St. John (pop. 52,000) is one of the principal winter ports of Canada, and is connected by C.P.R. and Intercolonial Railways with Montreal; Moncton (12,260); Chatham (4,666).

MANITOBA.

Area and Population.—Manitoba, formerly the Red River Settlement, is situated in about the centre of the continent, between 49°—60° N. lat. and 95°—101° W. long., with a total area of 251,832 square miles and a population (1916 Census) of 553,860 (294,609 males and 259,251 females), an increase since the last census of 200,403. The population was estimated at 625,000 in 1921.

Government.—The Government is administered by a Lieutenant-Governor, assisted by an Executive Council of 7 members and a Legislative Assembly of 55 members.

Agriculture.—The soil is fertile and productive; immigration is invited and encouraged, and liberal grants of land are made to settlers. In 1920 6,000,310 acres were cultivated, of which 2,705,622 acres were under wheat, and 37,542,000 bushels of wheat were produced. 1,873,954 acres were under oats, 839,000 under barley, 328,000 under flax, rye, and peas, &c., and 27,000 under potatoes. Dairy Products (1920): 17,200,000 lb. butter, value $2,320,000; cheese, 226,000 lb.; total value, including milk and cream, $15,940,000. In 1920 there were 256,800 horses, 758,000 cattle, 157,000 sheep, 213,000 pigs, and 3,373,000 turkeys, geese and chickens. The production of honey was 1,000,000 lb.

Manufactures.—The value of the total output in 1920 was $90,000,000 (1900, $12,927,430), the principal manufacturing centres being Winnipeg and St. Boniface.

Principal Cities.—CAPITAL, WINNIPEG; population (1919), 186,000 (with suburbs, 276,000), the third largest city in Canada. Brandon (15,215), St. Boniface (11,021), Portage La Prairie (5,892).

BRITISH COLUMBIA.

Area and Population.—British Columbia has a total area estimated at 390,344 square miles, with an estimated population in 1920 of approximately 718,000; the Census of 1921 gave 392,480 (251,619 males and 140,861 females), an increase since the former census of 213,823.

Government.—The Government consists of a Lieutenant-Governor and an Executive Council, together with a Legislative Assembly of 47 members.

Production and Industry.—The total value of the output of manufactures in 1917 (estimated) was $68,500,000 (1900, $19,447,778), the principal manufacturing centres being Vancouver and Victoria. The yield of the other industries in 1900 was: minerals, $35,580,645; lumber, $92,628,807; fisheries, $22,320,161; fruit and farm products, $68,906,090. There are extensive coal measures, and a vast and compact area of merchantable timber; the mines have produced over $670,650,000, and are still in the early stages of development. Only one-tenth of the available agricultural and fruit lands is at present settled, and there are acres of pulpwood as yet unexploited. There are undeveloped deposits of magnetite and hematite iron. The climate is healthful and temperate. Shipbuilding (1918) 145,000 tons, valued at $25,000,000. The principal exports are fish, coal, gold, silver, minerals, and timber.

Revenue, 1920-21 $15,219,264

Expenditure, 1920-21 15,236,931

Education.—There are 48 high schools, 98 city, 122 rural, 575 rural district and assisted schools, with a total of 78,943 pupils and a University.

PRINCE EDWARD ISLAND.

Area and Population.—Prince Edward Island lies in the southern part of the Gulf of St. Lawrence, between 46°-47° N. lat. and 62°-64° 30' W. long. It is about 130 miles in length, and from 4 to 34 miles in breadth; its area is 2,133 square miles (rather larger than that of the English county of Norfolk), and its population (Canada, 1921) 88,536 (47,069 males and 46,659 females in 1921), a decrease since the last census of 4,808 persons. The island was first settled by the French, who held it for many years as a fishing station. The British took it from them in 1755, but afterwards restored it; they seized it again, however, during the Seven Years' War (1756-1763) and compelled the greater part of the French inhabitants to leave, and from that time it has remained British.

Government.—The Government is vested in a Lieut.-Governor and an Executive Council, and a Legislative Assembly of 30 members elected by the people.

Agriculture and Live Stock.—There were (1918) 709,644 acres of improved land, of which 429,306 acres are under crops, 217,927 acres of pasture land, and 2,411 acres of gardens.

Production and Industry.—The value of the field crops in 1918 was estimated at $17,000,000, including oats (5,839,000 bushels), $4,535,200; wheat (606,000 bushels), $1,344,000; potatoes (5,362,310 bushels), $3,27,386; roots (5,008,800 bushels), $1,023,370.

The soil consists for the most part of a rich red loam, uniform in character and peculiarly suited to the growth of grasses. Nearly the whole of the land is now cleared, and improved farms can be bought at from $20 to $60 an acre (including buildings), according to condition and locality. The breeding of silver black foxes in captivity, after passing through an experimental stage for over twenty years, has now become an established and profitable industry. There are about 450 fox ranches, conducted by about 300 incorporated companies and also a number of private partnerships or individuals.

Manufactures.—The total value of the manufactures in 1910 was $3,136,470, against $2,326,708 in 1900.

Principal Cities.—CAPITAL, CHARLOTTETOWN, on the shore of Hillsborough Bay, which forms a good harbour. Other towns are Georgetown, Summerside, Souris, Kensington, and Alberton.

ALBERTA.

Area and Population.—The Province of Alberta has an estimated area of about 257,000 square miles, including about 2,500 square miles of water, with a population (1926) of 498,127, estimated at 650,000 in 1920.

Government.—The Government is vested in a Lieutenant-Governor and Legislative Assembly composed of 55 members, elected for five years, representing 55 electoral districts into which the Province is divided. The Executive Council consists of eight members.

Agriculture and Live Stock.—There is a succession of wheatfields, homesteads, villages, and towns; while settlers from the U.S., Eastern Canada, and the British Isles arrive in annually increasing numbers. The total area in crops, 1919, was 7,654,981 acres. The Department of Agriculture in the Provincial Government has established seven Demonstration Farms at different points, and on three of these are free schools of agriculture. Free homesteads are available for thousands of settlers in desirable localities. Animals slaughtered and sold, $50,000,000; dairy products, $31,625,000; wool clip (2,114,319 lb.), $1,268,591; game and furs, $2,250,000; poultry, $5,000,000. There were, in 1919, 800,380 horses, 445,858 swine, 364,498 sheep, 336,596 dairy cows, 1,247,448 other cattle, and 4,426,375 poultry.

Manufactures.—The total value of the output in 1910 was $18,788,806, against $1,313,375 in 1900, the principal manufacturing centres being Calgary ($7,751,011) and Edmonton ($4,493,304).

CAPITAL, EDMONTON. Population, 60,000; Calgary (70,000). Lethbridge, Medicine Hat, Red Deer, and Westaskiwin are the principal cities of the Province.

SASKATCHEWAN.

Area and Population.—The Province of Saskatchewan lies between Manitoba on the east and Alberta on the west, and has an estimated area of 251,700 square miles, the population at the Census of 1916 being 647,825, an increase of 636,556 persons since the Census of 1901. PHYSIOGRAPHY.

The Island of Newfoundland is situated between $46^{\circ} 37' - 51^{\circ} 37' N.$ latitude and $52^{\circ} 44' - 59^{\circ} 30' W.$ longitude, on the north-east side of the Gulf of St. Lawrence, and is separated from the North American Continent by the Straits of Belle Isle. The island is about 370 miles long and 250 miles broad, and is triangular in shape, with Cape Bauld (N.), Cape Race (S.E.), and Cape Ray (S.W.) at the angles. The coast is extremely rugged, and the coastal regions are mountainous, the north and east being cold during winter and early spring owing to the quantities of ice brought down from the Greenland seas. The interior is undulating and is covered with tolts (round hills) interspersed with lakes, rivers, and swamps, but containing many fertile valleys, where the climate is favourable to agriculture, and a great wealth of forests, mainly of spruce, pine, and birch. The climate is salubrious, and the people are a strong, brave, healthy, hardy, industrious race. The thermometer seldom falls below zero in winter, and ranges in the shade in summer from 70° to 80° .

GOVERNMENT.

Newfoundland, the oldest English colony, was discovered by John Cabot on June 24, 1497; the first land seen was hailed as Prima Vista—the present Cape Bonavista. The island was afterwards visited (1500) by the Portuguese navigator Gaspar de Cortereal, and soon became the centre of an extensive fishing industry, with settlements of Portuguese, Biscayans, and French. In August, 1583, the island was formally occupied by Sir Humphrey Gilbert, in the name of Queen Elizabeth, and by the Treaty of Utrecht (1713) the whole island was acknowledged to be British. A Governor was first appointed in 1708, and in 1855 "Responsible Government" was accorded to the island.

The executive is entrusted to a Governor, appointed by the Crown, aided by an Executive Council, with a Legislature of two houses. The Legislative Council is appointed by the Crown and consists of 24 members; the House of Assembly consists of 36 members, elected by the people, every male British subject aged 21 being entitled to the franchise.

1918-19	9,535,725	6,766,389	42,032,786

EXTERNAL TRADE.

The external trade of the island for the five years ending June 30, 1920, is stated as follows:—

Year.	Imports.	Exports.	Total.
	$	$	$
1915-16 ...	16,833,500	19,466,400	36,379,900

1918-19 ..	33,297,184	36,784,616	70,081,800
1919-20 ...	39,982,947	34,391,688	74,374,635

The trade was chiefly distributed in 1919-20 as under:—

Country.	Imports from.	Exports to.
United Kingdom	$4,637,074	$6,411,967
United States	13,414,067	4,426,142
Canada	18,767,238	5,602,859

The principal imports in 1918-19 were flour, textiles, coal, hardware, and provisions; the principal exports were codfish, value $24,316,830; cod and seal oil, value $3,128,251; pulp and paper, $2,080,522; herrings, $2,535,534; seal-skins, $228,575; tinned lobsters, $102,334; copper, copper ore, iron pyrites, and other minerals, $723,844; total value of the fishery products in 1918-19 was upwards of $26,784,612.

PRODUCTION AND INDUSTRY.

The inhabitants are chiefly located on the coast-line of the shore and bays, nearly 10,000 being engaged in fishing—for cod in summer, a large proportion of which is exported to South America—and seal fishing in winter and spring. Agriculture, mining, and lumbering are also engaging attention and affording means of employment, while large pulp and paper mills have been erected. The larger portion of the interior is practically in a state of nature, but the railways have opened up large tracts of rich agricultural, mineral, and timber lands hitherto of small value. A valuable discovery of copper has been made at Little Bay, about 200 miles from St. John's.

COMMUNICATIONS.

Railways.—There were 904 miles of railway open in 1919. The trans-insular line runs to Port-aux-Basques, via Exploits River and Bay of Islands, with branch connexions to Placentia, Bonavista, Bay de Verde, Hearts Content, Trepassay, the principal settlements in Conception Bay, and to Lewisporte (in Notre Dame Bay).

Posts and Telegraphs.—There were 891 post-offices in 1919, dealing with 4,000,000 letters and post-cards, 3,600,000 newspapers and books, and 248,123 parcels. There are 4,600 miles of telegraph line and 665 of telephone wire.

Shipping.—On Dec. 31, 1919, the Mercantile Marine of Newfoundland consisted of 3,226 sailing vessels of 149,197 tons, and 136 steam vessels of 22,205 tons. In 1918-19 the tonnage of vessels entered and cleared at Newfoundland ports was 1,711,668 tons, of which 1,315,704 tons were British.

TOWNS.

The CAPITAL, ST. JOHN'S (population 34,650), contains two cathedrals, several banks, and numerous public buildings. Other towns are Harbour Grace (4,279), Bonavista (3,911), Carbonear (3,540), and Twillingate (3,348).

HIGH COMMISSIONER.

High Commissioner in London, Hon. Sir Edgar R. Bowring (1918).

Secretary, Capt. Victor Gordon, 58 Victoria Street, S.W. 1.

LABRADOR.

Labrador, a dependency of Newfoundland, forms the most easterly part of the North American continent, and extends from Blanc Sablon, in the Straits of Belle Isle, on the south, to Cape Chidley, at the entrance to Hudson's Straits (or to Cape Wolstenholme), on the north; the boundaries between Quebec and Labrador being a matter of keen controversy which is expected to come up for settlement before the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council. Labrador possesses valuable cod, herring, trout, and salmon fisheries. One of the grandest spectacles in the world is provided by the Great Falls of Labrador, on the Hamilton River. The inhabitants of this 850 miles of coastal America are mainly Eskimos, engaged in fishing and hunting. There are no towns, but there are Moravian Mission stations at Makkovik, Hopedale, Nain, Okak, Hebron, and Killinek. Pulp and paper mills have been founded at Sandwich Bay and Hamilton Inlet to deal with the almost inexhaustible supply of timber.

PHYSIOGRAPHY.

The territory of the Commonwealth includes the Continent of Australia, the Island of Tasmania, Norfolk Island, Lord Howe Island, and part of the island of New Guinea (Papua).

Australia (mainland) is probably the oldest of all land surfaces in either hemisphere, and may be regarded as the largest island or the smallest of the Continents, being surrounded by the following waters:—North, the Timor and Arafura Seas and Torres Strait; East, Pacific Ocean; South, Bass Strait (which separates Tasmania from the Continent) and Southern Ocean; and West, Indian Ocean. The total area of the Continent is 2,948,366 English square miles, the island of Tasmania having an area of 26,215 square miles, and making a total area for the States and Territories of 2,974,581 square miles. The coast-line of Australia is approximately 12,210 miles, and the geographical position of the Continent is between $10^{\circ} 41' - 39^{\circ} 8'$ South latitude and $113^{\circ} 9' - 153^{\circ} 39'$ East longitude; the greatest length East to West is 2,400 miles, and from North to South 1,971 miles. Its nearest distance to England is about 11,000 miles.

From a physical standpoint the continent of Australia is divisible into an eastern and a western area, the former containing a regular coast-line with a good harbourage, roadsteads, rivers, and inland waterways, and a greater development of fauna and flora; the latter a broken coast-line with estuaries rather than rivers, and but little inland water communication. The whole continent is, roughly speaking, a vast, irregular, and undulating plateau, part of which is below the level of the sea, surrounded by a mountainous coast-line, with frequent intervals of low and sandy shore on the north, west and south. The Great Barrier Reef extends parallel with the East coast for 1,200 miles, at a distance of about 60 miles from the mainland. A large part of the interior, particularly in the west, consists of sandy and stony desert, covered with spinifex, and containing numerous salt-marshes, though reaches of grass-land occur here and there. The geological formation of Australia is remarkable for its simplicity and regularity; the strike of the rocks is, with a single exception, coincident with the direction of the mountain-chains, from N. to S.; and the tertiary formation to be found in the N., S., and W. develops in the S.E. into a gigantic tertiary plain, watered by the Darling and the Murray Rivers. Nearly all round the coast, however, and in eastern and south-eastern Australia, stretching far inland from the coastal range, is a rich grazing country, admirably adapted to the rearing of sheep. The most extensive mountain system takes its rise near the S.E. point, and includes a number of ranges known by different names in different places, none of them being of any great height. The principal rivers are the Murray, with its tributaries, the Murrumbidgee, Lachlan, and Darling, in the S.E. part of the island, which fall into the sea on the south coast; on the east coast, the Hawkesbury, Hunter, Clarence, Richmond, Brisbane, Mary, Burnett, Fitzroy, and Burdekin; on the west, the Swan, Murchison, Gascoyne, Ashburton, Fortescue, De Grey, and Fitzroy; on the north, the Drysdale, Ord, Victoria, and Daly; and the Roper, the Flinders, and Mitchell, which debouch into the Gulf of Carpentaria. Lakes are numerous, but nearly all are salt; the scarcity of the natural water supply has been, however, mitigated by successful borings. Minerals comprise gold, silver, copper, iron, and coal in large quantities, antimony, mercury, tin, zinc, &c.

Climate.—The seasons commence about March 21 (Autumn), June 21 (Winter), Sept. 22 (Spring), and Dec. 22 (Summer). The climate is extremely dry, but, except in the tropical coast-land of the north, the continent is everywhere highly beneficial to Europeans, the range of temperature being smaller than that of other countries similarly situated.

GOVERNMENT.

The Government is that of a Federal Commonwealth within the British Empire, the executive power being vested in the Sovereign (through the Governor-General), assisted by a Federal Executive Council of nine Ministers of State and such honorary Ministers who may be appointed thereto. The Constitution rests on the fundamental law of March 16, 1898, ratified by the Imperial Parliament on July 9, 1900; and the Commonwealth was inaugurated on Jan. 1, 1901. Under the Constitution the Federal Government possesses limited and enumerated powers as surrendered by the federating States, the residuum of legislative power being in the Governments of the various States. Briefly stated, the enumerated powers include authority over commerce and navigation, finance, defence, posts and telegraphs, census and statistics, and conciliation and arbitration in extra-State industrial disputes; with authority to assume the control of railways and lighthouses, marriage and divorce, emigration and immigration, currency and banking, and weights and measures.

THE LEGISLATURE.

The Federal Parliament consists of a Senate and a House of Representatives. The Senate contains 36 members, six from each of the Original States, elected for six years by universal suffrage. The House of Representatives, similarly elected for a maximum of three years, contains members proportionate to the population, with a minimum of 5 Representatives for each State. The House of Representatives, 1921, is made up of 27 for New South Wales, 21 for Victoria, 10 from Queensland, 7 from South Australia, and 5 each from Tasmania and Western Australia, and consists of members of the Liberal, Labour, and Country Parties. Members of the Upper and Lower Houses receive £1,000 per annum, with travelling expenses.

President of the Senate, Hon. Thomas Givens.
Speaker, House of Representatives, Hon. Sir Elliott House, K.C.M.G.

THE JUDICATURE.

There is a Federal High Court with a Chief Justice and 6 Judges, having original and appellate jurisdiction, subordinate to the final Appeal Court of the Empire, the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council.

Chief Justice, Rt. Hon. Sir Adrian Knox, P.O., K.C.M.G.	£3,500

DEFENCE.

On Dec. 31, 1920, there was a total membership of the Defence Force of 276,525. Military force in Australia 129,788 (57,797 riflemen and 69,990 cadets). The expenditure on Defence (excluding War expenditure) in 1919-20 was £1,277,274.

this does not include Navy expenditure, the Estimates for which in 1919-20 amounted to £1,825,000. The total expenditure on defence, including war expenditure, was estimated at £79,823,942.

Navy.

Under the Australian Defence Scheme, the Commonwealth provides and maintains certain ships of war, which will form an Australian squadron of the Royal Navy, under the command of a Commonwealth officer in time of peace, and an integral part of the Eastern Fleet of the Royal Navy in time of war. Ships of the Royal Australian Navy are known as H.M.A.S. (His Majesty's Australian Ship), and served with the Royal Naval forces throughout the war. The Commonwealth fleet consists of the Australia, Melbourne (flag-ship), Sydney, Brisbane, 2 sloops, 6 destroyers, and 6 submarines. H.M.A.S. Sydney destroyed the German cruiser Emden at Cocos Island on Nov. 9, 1914. The personnel of the fleet is mainly Australian in character, although still supplemented to some extent by Imperial officers and men. The sea-going forces on June 30, 1918, consisted of approximately 400 officers and 4,500 petty officers and men. There is also a R.A.N. Brigade composed of members of the Citizen Naval forces, a section of the Commonwealth Compulsory Military Training System.

Army.

By a Federal Law of 1910 military training is compulsory on all male citizens between the ages of 12 and 26—in Cadet Corps 12-18, and Citizen Soldiers 20-26, with short periods of training in the field. The Peace Effective is about 110,000 of all ranks; the War Establishment about 127,000 upwards. The Commonwealth had, up to the end of the Great War, enlisted no fewer than 415,809 men, fully equipped for service in the war: New South Wales, 164,030; Victoria, 112,399; Queensland, 57,705; South Australia, 34,959; West Australia, 32,231; Tasmania, 15,485. The Australian forces, who are unrivalled as mounted infantry, behaved with the greatest gallantry whenever engaged with the enemy. To Aug. 5, 1918, their War record was 36 V.C., 370 D.S.O. (14 bars), 1,258 M.C. (48 bars), 920 D.C.M. (10 bars), 5,206 M.M. (267 bars and 2 double bars), 248 foreign decorations. The Total Casualties in the A.I.F. from the outbreak of the War to July 31, 1920, were: killed, 59,302; missing, 1; prisoners of war, 4,087; wounded, 166,819; sick, 87,957; not specified, 212—total, 318,384.

The total cost of the War to the Commonwealth Government from August, 1914, to the end of March, 1921, was £473,390,950, of which amount upwards of £107,558,115 was charged against revenue.

* In addition, the following amounts were spent from loans—1916-17, £53,124,227; 1917-18, £58,898,599; 1918-19, £53,802,780; 1919-20, £47,387,382.

The Customs and Excise Revenue is collected by the Commonwealth and partly repaid to the States at the rate of 95s. per head of the population.

DEBT.

The Commonwealth has now undertaken responsibility for the Northern Territory Debt and the Port Augusta-Coodanatta Railway Debt, whose combined amounts were £4,915,397 at June 30, 1920. The other State Debts remain at the charge of the State Governments. The total of the Commonwealth Public Debt on March 31, 1921, was £402,795,667, including a War Loan from the British Government of £49,082,059, and a debt of £42,696,500 for expenses incurred by the Imperial Government for A.I.F. and Naval Services. Adding the indebtedness of the States to that of the Federal Government, the total public debts of Australia amounted (June 30, 1920) to about £770,000,000, or about £145 per head of the population.

COMMUNICATIONS.

Railways.—The total length of Government (and private) railways open at June 30, 1920, is stated as follows, the private lines being included in the totals and shown in parentheses:—

State.	Miles open.
New South Wales	5,377 (362)
Victoria	4,285 (71)
Queensland	6,947 (1,261)
South Australia	3,458 (50)
Western Australia	4,846 (854)
Tasmania	840 (211)
Federal Territory	5 —
Northern Territory	199 —
Total	25,957 (2,809)

The gross earnings of all Government lines in 1919-20 were £32,109,319, working expenses £24,768,949, and net earnings £7,340,370, being at the rate of 2s. 2d. per train mile, and representing a return on the total cost (£32,115,722) of 3.18 per cent., as against 2.8 per cent. in 1918-19.

The great trans-continental railway from West to East, linking up Kalgoorlie in Western Australia with Port Augusta in Spencer's Gulf, a distance of 1,051 miles, was completed in 1917, and the first mail train made a successful run through on 22 October of that year. A scheme is under consideration to connect north and south by a line from Katherine River (Northern Territory) to Oodnadatta (S. Aust.), a distance of 1,011 miles.

Shipping.—The entrances and clearances of vessels engaged in overseas trade at the various Australian ports in the 6 years 1915-1920 were as follows (tonnage in brackets):—

Year.	Entered	Cleared.
1914-15	1,568 (4,174,955)	1,643 (4,444,303)
1915-16	1,654 (4,269,484)	1,670 (4,268,838)
1916-17	1,486 (3,851,292)	1,500 (3,843,130)
1917-18	1,079 (2,456,757)	1,118 (2,574,993)
1918-19	1,350 (3,239,060)	1,264 (2,941,422)
1919-20	1,476 (4,041,544)	1,505 (4,044,963)

Of the vessels entered (1919-20), 1,047 were under the British flag (Australia, 260, of 395,865 tons; U.K., 626, of 2,533,850 tons; N.Z., 117, of 147,585 tons); and 429 under foreign flags (Dutch, 26, of 70,966 tons; French, 93, of 121,899 tons; Japanese 130, of 307,896 tons; Norwegian, 16, of 39,760 tons; United States, 126, of 122,805 tons; other foreign, 38, of 104,543 tons).

Posts and Telegraphs.—In year ended June 30, 1920, there were 8,299 post and receiving offices, dealing with 768,000,000 letters, &c.; there were 6,251 telegraph stations, with 143,400 miles of wire, transmitting and receiving 24,000,000 cable and telegrams in 1919-20. Telephones are highly organised and generally used.

* Goods transferred from one State to another for transshipment to an overseas country are counted as an export from the State whence they were finally despatched from the Commonwealth; thus, much of the produce of Queensland is credited to New South Wales and of Tasmania to Victoria.

TOWNS.

CAPITAL.—CANNBERRA, in the Federal District, transferred to the Commonwealth by the State of New South Wales on Jan. 1, 1911, is to be laid out as the capital of the Commonwealth, £150,000 being provided for that purpose in the Budget of 1910-11. Meanwhile the seat of Government is MELBOURNE.

The following cities and towns had a population exceeding 20,000 at the Census of 1911, viz.:—

PHYSIOGRAPHY.

Relief.—The Eastern or coastal district is traversed by a mountain range known as the Great Dividing Range, which is called locally the Muntong Range in the south—the highest points being Mount Kosciuszko, 7,328 feet, and Townsend (7,260 feet)—in the centre the Main Range, and in the North the Liverpool Range, New England Range and Macpherson Range.

Rivers.—The eastern or coastal district is watered by the Tweed, Brunswick, Richmond, Clarence, Bellinger, Macleay, Hastings, Manning, Karuah, Hunter, Hawkesbury, George, Shoalhaven, Clyde, Moruya, Tueras, Bega, Tumbarumba, and Snowy Rivers. The western portion of the country is not well watered, but immense reservoirs are being constructed for irrigation purposes, and many artesian bores have been laid down. The Darling and the Murrumbidgee are both tributaries of the Murray, which has a total length of 1,719 miles, 1,250 miles forming the boundary between New South Wales and Victoria.

Climate.—The climate is dry and very healthy. At the capital (Sydney) the average mean shade temperature is 63°; the mean temperature in the shade for the north coast is 66° to 69°, south coast 57° to 62°, northern tableland 54° to 60°, southern tableland 56°. Western slopes, the mean annual temperature ranges from 65° in the north to 60° in the south; in the summer from 82° to 74°, and in the winter from 53° to 49°. Western Plains from 60° in the north to 60° in the south; in the summer from 82° to 74°, and in the winter from 53° to 49°.

* GOVERNMENT.

New South Wales was first colonised as a British possession in 1788, and after progressive settlement a partly elective legislature was established in 1842. In 1855 "Responsible Government" was granted, the present Constitution being founded on the Consolidating Act of 1902. The executive authority is vested in a Governor (appointed by the King), assisted by a Council of Ministers.

THE LEGISLATURE.

Parliament consists of two Houses, the Legislative Council and the Legislative Assembly. Members of the Legislative Council (67 in September, 1921), are appointed by the Crown for life. Members are not entitled to remuneration, but travel free on the State railways and tramways. The Legislative Assembly consists of 90 members, representing 24 electoral districts. Each member of the Legislative Assembly receives £875 per annum, and members travel free over the Government railways and tramways in the State, and are provided with official stamped envelopes for the free transmission of correspondence through the post. The Women's Legal Status Act, 1918, removed disqualification regarding the election of women to be members of the Legislative Assembly. With few exceptions all natural-born or naturalised persons 21 years of age, who have resided 6 months in the Commonwealth, 3 months in the State and one month in the electoral district, are entitled to the franchise, which was conferred upon women in 1902, and was first exercised by them in 1904. At the last General Election in March, 1920, of 593,244 male electors enrolled and qualified to vote 363,115, or 61.2, voted, and similarly of 561,193 female electors 285,504, or 50.9, voted.

EDUCATION.

Education.—Education is non-sectarian, compulsory between the ages of 7 and 14 years, and free, school fees in State, primary, and superior schools having been abolished in October, 1906. The total enrolment in 1919 in 3,326 State schools was 288,931, and the average daily attendance 225,790. The State expenditure on Education, Science, and Art was £2,670,593. The University of Sydney, with which 5 colleges are affiliated, including the Women's College, was incorporated in 1851. In addition to the State schools there were, in 1919, 677 private colleges and schools, with 74,306 scholars, exclusive of many business colleges and shorthand schools.

FINANCE.

The Revenue and Expenditure and Public Debt of New South Wales for the five years ended June 30, 1920, are stated as under:—

Year.	Revenue, including Advances repaid.	Expenditure, including Transfers and Advances.	Public Debt.
1916	19,703,518	19,553,927	130,514,018
1917	20,522,017	20,790,895	128,138,347
1918	21,543,742	21,519,918	126,584,693
1919	23,448,166	23,233,298	147,174,530
1920	28,650,496	30,310,013	152,776,082

To the total revenue during 1919–20, Railways and Tramways contributed £15,997,584; and other Business Undertakings, £1,967,459. A sum of £2,472,717—equal to £1.42. 0d. per head of the population—was returned to the State by the Commonwealth Government, in lieu of Customs and Excise revenue collected by the latter. Revenue from Taxation amounted to £4,962,528. Included in the total Expenditure were the following:—Interest upon Public Debt, £1,074,896 (exclusive of £3,258,576 charged to Business Undertakings); Public Instruction, £2,503,483; Business Undertakings, £12,851,432.

Banking, &c.—There were (June 30, 1921) 17 banks within N.S.W., with total assets, £120,433,933, including advances, £104,709,314; coin, bullion, and Australian Government Notes, £21,964,366; and liabilities, £111,409,428, including deposits, £207,676,412. The savings bank deposits on March 31, 1921, amounted to £54,213,302, representing 1,111,222 depositors.

Shipping.—Excluding coastal trade, 3,030 vessels entered ports of N.S.W. during 1900-01, the net tonnage being 7,157,639; the clearances were 3,056 vessels of 7,190,594 net tonnage. Sydney is the chief port. In 1900-01 the shipping entries, including coastal, were 8,698 vessels of 7,226,253 net tonnage. The dock accommodation includes four large graving docks, five floating docks, and six patent slips.

Railways.—The railways and tramways of New South Wales, with the exception of a few short lines, representing about 157 miles, are controlled by the State. At June 30, 1901, the mileage of the State railways open for traffic was 5,043, the capital cost amounted to £88,304,194, and the net earnings for the year 1900-01 to £3,234,528, or as. 10d. per train mile. There were also 227 miles of State tramways, the capital cost being £9,060,757, and the net earnings £528,486, or $\frac{1}{2}$ d. per train mile.

The population to each mile of railway line open was 406, and the area 61 square miles.

Posts, Telegraphs and Telephones.—The postal, telegraphic, and telephonic services are administered by the Federal Government. In 1900-01 there were 2,593 post offices in New South Wales. The postal matter carried included 256,062,161 letters, postcards, and registered articles, 61,407,865 newspapers, 28,989,399 books, packets and parcels, and 9,044,098 telegrams, including 528,199 cablegrams, were received and despatched. The telephonic line connections numbered 79,700.

TRADE.

The overseas imports into 'New South Wales during 1900-01 were valued at £78,129,934, and the overseas exports at £51,723,229.

PRODUCTION AND INDUSTRY.

Agriculture is one of the principal industries of the State; 3,773,577 acres, excluding areas double-cropped, were under cultivation during the year ended June 30, 1900, producing 4,388,022 bushels of wheat, 4,052,025 bushels of maize, 586,758 bushels of oats, besides other kinds of grain, with 49,986 tons of potatoes and 19,236 cwt. of dried leaf tobacco. The season was one of the worst ever experienced. Sugar-cane to the extent of 91,327 tons was crushed; and 717,893 gallons of wine, and 1,769,923 bushels of citrus fruit, and 322,266 cases of bananas; almost every kind of fruit and vegetable may be grown. The area sown for wheat for the year 1900-01 was 3,124,370 acres, which yielded 53,715,840 bushels. The total extent of land alienated and in process of alienation on June 30, 1900, was 63,125,561 acres, while the area of land leased for pastoral occupation and homestead, mining, and other purposes at the same date was 113,086,399 acres.

Live Stock.—The great plains are admirably adapted for sheep-farming, and several breeds of sheep, including the celebrated merino, were introduced in 1813. On June 30, 1900, there were 662,264 horses, 769,931 dairy cows, 2,314,401 all other cattle, 29,249,253 sheep, 253,920 pigs, and 1,272 camels. In 1900-01, 296,621,000 lb. (stated as in the grease) of wool were produced, in addition to 636,974 cwt. of tallow, 63,125,000 lb. butter, 6,762,467 lb. cheese, and 18,669,998 lb. bacon and hams. During 1900-01 there were 121,625 persons permanently employed in rural occupations, 226,909 being males, and 14,706 females.

Minerals.—The goldfields were discovered in 1821. Coal, coke, copper, silver, lead, zinc, blismuth, tin, iron, antimony, asbestos, platinum, alunite, wolfram, scheelite, molybdenite, cobalt, marble, and kerosene shale, diamonds, rubies, opals, and other precious stones are also found. The total value of minerals raised during 1900 was £10,611,615, coal accounting for £7,723,355, silver, silver lead and ore £123,481 and gold £207,746. The mining industry gave employment to 29,163 miners during the year.

Manufactories and Works.—In 1900-01 there were 5,662 manufactories and works; the employees numbered 144,454, of whom 109,836 were males and 34,618 females, the amount of £21,681,196 being paid in salaries and wages. Male workers received on an average £18 12. 1d., and females £7 6s. 8d. The capital value of lands, buildings and fixtures amounted to £16,176,860, and of machinery and plant £26,366,083. The machinery in use represented 265,801 h.p., including steam, 171,590 h.p., electric, 78,287 h.p., and gas, 13,242 h.p. The value of goods manufactured and of work done was £123,213,480; materials used, £81,888,497, and fuel consumed, £2,720,666; the production, i.e., value added to raw materials, was £39,314,317.

The principal products of the factories during 1900-01 were:—

INDUSTRIAL ARBITRATION.

Matters relating to the conditions of industrial employment in New South Wales are determined by a Court of Industrial Arbitration, which is empowered to make awards fixing the lowest rates of wages, the hours and times of work, rates of payment for overtime, &c., and the proportionate number of apprentices and improvers in any industry, and granting preference of employment to members of any trade or industrial union of employees. Industrial agreements between employers and employees may be enforced as an award. Awards were formerly made by subsidiary tribunals known as Wages or Industrial Boards, constituted for each industry, but their functions are now absorbed by Judges of the Industrial Arbitration Court. At June 30, 1901, there were 271 awards and 225 industrial agreements in force. The industrial laws provide for the registration of industrial unions of employers and employees, and for mediation in industrial disputes. Under certain conditions strikes may be recognised as lawful, except strikes by Government employees, or by persons engaged in military or naval contracts, or by employees in an industry of which the conditions are regulated by award or industrial agreement; but when an award has been in operation for twelve months, the employees may decide by secret ballot to withdraw from its conditions.

When a strike occurs or is contemplated, the Minister for Labour may order a secret ballot to ascertain if the majority of the employees favour a strike.

A "Board of Trade of New South Wales" was constituted in 1928 with extensive powers regarding industrial matters, one of its functions being to declare annually the rate of living wage for adult employees of each sex, to be used as a standard by the Court in determining rates of wages.

Industrial matters which extend beyond the limits of one State are determined by the Commonwealth Court of Arbitration and Conciliation.

LOCAL GOVERNMENT.

For purposes of Local Government, with the exception of an area of 125,009 square miles in the sparsely-populated western division, the State is divided into 124 municipalities and 136 shires, governed by councils which are elected triennially. The councils are empowered to levy rates on the value of land, to float loans, to acquire land and works, to construct and maintain streets, jetties, wharfs, &c., to make regulations regarding cattle slaughtering, maintenance of public places, traffic, street and road lighting, public health and safety, management of parks, &c.

The basis of rating is almost wholly on the unimproved capital value of land, which in 1929 was £96,792,615 for municipalities, including the city of Sydney, and £110,881,306 for shires.

PHYSIOGRAPHY.

Relief.—The Australian Alps and the Great Dividing Range pass through the centre of the state, and divide it into a northern and southern watershed, the latter sloping down to the ocean and containing, especially in the south-east, well-wooded valleys.

Rivers.—The Murray River forms the northern boundary of the State, and has many Victorian tributaries. The capital stands upon the Yarra-Yarra, which rises in the southern slopes of the Dividing Range.

Climate.—The mean temperature over a period of 65 years was 59° 4" Fahrenheit, the thermometer rising (on the average four days during the year) above 100° in the shade, and falling (on the average for three nights in the year) below 32° F. The average number of days on which rain fell was 137; and the average yearly rainfall was 25.60 inches.

GOVERNMENT.

Victoria was originally known as the Port Phillip District of New South Wales, and was erected into a separate colony in 1851, with a partially elective legislature. In 1855 Responsible Government was conferred. The executive authority is vested in a Governor appointed by the Crown, aided by an Executive Council of 12 members.

EDUCATION.

Primary Education is compulsory, secular and free between the ages of 6 and 14, there being 235,292 children on the registers in 1919, the average attendance being about 68 per cent.

Secondary Education is principally under private control, 56,684 pupils being in attendance at the 486 schools in 1919. There is a State-aided

University at Melbourne, with four affiliated colleges (Trinity, Ormond, Queen's, and Newman) and a School of Mines at Ballarat.

FINANCE.

The revenue and expenditure and State Debt for five years are given as follows:—

Year.	Revenue.	Expenditure.	Debt.
1916	11,470,875	11,683,353	75,324,562
1917	11,813,879	11,795,295	76,822,110
1918	12,672,767	12,631,169	78,192,361
1919	13,044,082	12,973,407	80,696,644
1920	15,866,184	15,752,459	86,324,454

Banking, &c.—There were (Dec. 31, 1920) 17 banks, with total assets £88,535,893, within the State, and Liabilities £68,049,730. The savings bank deposits at June 30, 1921, amounted to £43,653,735.

PRODUCTION AND INDUSTRY.

Agriculture.—Agriculture has of late years much improved, wheat and oats chiefly being cultivated; the dairy industry has also made marked progress. Of the 6,443,873 acres under cultivation in 1920-21, 2,295,865 were wheat crops and 443,636 oats, and 1,333,397 acres were cut for hay. In 1919-20, 1,634,680 gallons of wine were produced. The estimated value of production in 1919-20 was (including manufacturing values) £89,769,840.

Live Stock.—There were in 1921, 620,005 milch cows, producing 60,218,945 lb. of butter and 7,735,083 lb. of cheese; and 955,154 other cattle, 12,171,084 sheep, 139,275 pigs, and 487,503 horses.

Minerals.—Victoria is one of the leading gold-producing States in Australia, the amount produced in 1920 being 152,792 oz. (£648,969). Other minerals raised consisted principally of tin, copper, coal, and antimony.

Trade and Industry.—Wool, gold (including specie), wheat, flour, biscuit, and butter are the staple productions of the State; and the manufactures (6,038 factories, &c., employing 136,522 hands in 1919-20) are mainly for home consumption. The chief exports overseas are: wool, lead, butter, wheat, flour and biscuit, leather, skins and hides, tallow, live stock, jams and jellies, milk and cream and preserved and frozen meats. The principal overseas imports of the State are iron and steel, machines and machinery, metals and metal manufactures, silks, velvets, &c., apparel and attire, bags and sacks, tea, cottons and linens, woollens and timber.

TOWNS.

MELBOURNE, the chief city and seat of federal government, is an episcopal see, and is distinguished for its university, museum, mint, public gardens, observatory, public library, hospital, its churches and other institutions. With its suburbs it contained (Census of 1921) a population of 748,506 inhabitants. Other towns are Ballarat, 38,500; Bendigo (Sandhurst), 33,170; Geelong, 36,170; Castlemaine, 7,762; Warrnambool, 7,400; Mildura, 6,500; Wonthaggi, 5,176; and Hamilton, 5,098.

Transmission of mails, approximate, 30 days.

III.—SOUTH AUSTRALIA.

The State of South Australia is situated between 26° and 37° S. lat. and 129° and 141° E. long., the total area being 380,070 sq. miles.

POPULATION.

Year.	Males.	Females.	Total.
1915	212,080	226,205	438,285
1916	201,998	230,711	432,709
1917	201,433	234,781	436,214
1918	205,623	236,865	442,488
1919	224,631	243,563	468,194
1920	247,960	246,907	494,867

NOTE.—About 30,000 were on Active Service during war.

Increase of the People.

Year.	Births.	Deaths.	Marriages.
1916	11,857	5,077	3,600
1917	11,326	4,365	3,252
1918	11,357	4,390	3,190
1919	11,060	5,475	3,825
1920	12,028	5,083	4,081

Birth rate 25.45, death rate 10.76, marriage rate 20.33 per 1,000 of population. Infantile mortality, 67.09 per 1,000 births, being one of the lowest rates in the world.

Religions.

Religion is free and receives no State aid. At the Census, 1921, the persons belonging to the principal religious denominations were as follows:—Church of England, 113,761; Methodists, 100,402; Congregationalists, 13,357; Baptists, 21,863; Lutherans, 26,681; Roman Catholics, 50,964; Presbyterians, 22,567; and Church of Christ, 9,324.

PHYSIOGRAPHY.

Relief.—The eastern portion of the State is divided longitudinally by the Flinders Range, which extends from the eastern side of the Gulf of St. Vincent to the Lakes Torrens and Eyre. The western portion is partly desert which can never be brought into cultivation. The northern portion of the State, between Lake Eyre and 26° South latitude (the northern boundary since the transfer to the Commonwealth of the Northern Territory), is also unpromising in comparison with the fertile land that surrounds the hill country of the east.

Rivers.—Except for the Murray, which flows for some 250 miles through the south-eastern corner into the Southern Ocean, there are no rivers of importance in South Australia.

Climate.—The mean annual temperature at Adelaide is 63°, the winter temperature (July–August) averaging 53°, and the summer (November–March) 71°. During the summer months the maximum temperature at times exceeds 100°, but owing to the purity and dryness of the atmosphere the inconvenience is comparatively slight.

The average annual rainfall at Adelaide, derived from 82 years' record, is 21.03 inches. This total is rather higher than the approximate average annual rainfall over the whole of the agricultural areas extending from Melrose to Cape Northumberland.

In the Mount Lofty Ranges the mean yearly rainfall in places exceeds 40 inches, while on the Adelaide plains the precipitation has fallen as low as 16 inches.

GOVERNMENT.

South Australia was proclaimed a British Province in 1836, and in 1851 a partially elective legislature was established. The present Constitution rests upon a Law of Oct. 24, 1856, the executive authority being vested in a Governor appointed by the Crown, aided by a Council of 6 Ministers, and the Lieutenant-Governor.

THE LEGISLATURE.

Parliament consists of a Legislative Council of 20 members elected for 5 years, one-half retiring every 3 years; and a House of Assembly of 46 members, elected for a maximum duration of 3 years. Election is by ballot, with universal adult suffrage for the House of Assembly for all British subjects, male and female; there is a small property qualification for electors to the Legislative Council, who numbered 23,048 (23,062 women) in 1920, those for the Assembly numbering 272,022 (137,931 women).

President of the Legislative Council , Hon. Sir J. L. Stirling, K.C.M.G.	£600
Speaker of the House of Assembly , Hon. Sir Richard Butler	600

THE JUDICATURE.

Law and Justice.—The Supreme Court is provided over by the Chief Justice and three Puisne Judges; there are Courts of Vice-Admiralty and Insolvency, as well as Local Civil Courts, with stipendiary magistrates and the usual Police Courts. The Supreme Court convictions average about 50 annually, which is at the rate of 1 in every 10,000 of the population.

Chief Justice and Judge of Vice-Admiralty , Hon. Sir G. J. R. Murray, K.C.M.G., B.A., LL.B.	£2,000
Second Judge , Hon. Sir J. Hannah Gordon	1,700
Third Judge , Hon. T. S. Poole, LL.B.	1,700
Fourth Judge , Hon. H. A. Parsons, LL.B.	1,700

EDUCATION.

Public Education (Primary, Secondary and Technical) is provided by the State, and controlled by a responsible Minister; it is secular, compulsory, and free; there are 1,010 State schools, with 2,856 teachers and 75,991 scholars; the expenditure in 1910-20 was £450,000. The Government grants Exhibitions and Scholarships, carrying the holders to higher schools and the University. Private schools number 172, with 775 teachers and 14,142 scholars. There is an endowed University at Adelaide, founded in 1874, with 774 undergraduates, and 1,054 other students; all classes are open to women. A State School of Mines and Industries has also been established with branches at 5 country centres, and technical education is also provided. There are 5 Vocational Schools for the training of discharged soldiers. The public library, museum, art gallery and local institutes are supported or assisted by the State.

FINANCE.

The Revenue and Expenditure and Public Debt for the five years ended June 30, 1917-1921, are stated as follows:—

Year.	Revenue.	Expenditure.	Debt.
1917	4,874,603	5,190,453	39,364,280
1918	5,526,226	5,500,419	40,621,480
1919	5,798,313	5,876,811	42,650,206
1920	6,582,788	6,457,039	43,753,146
1921	7,142,800	7,540,000	...

Most of the revenue is derived from inland revenue, railways, and territorial receipts, while most of the expenditure is on account of public works and railways, and interest on public debt.

Banking.—There are 9 banking institutions in Adelaide, in addition to the Commonwealth Government Bank, with 279 branches and agencies, and £32,468,875 authorised capital, having a total liability of £23,186,867 and assets £17,717,783 in June, 1920. The Savings Banks on June 30, 1920, had 377,431 depositors with £15,494,143 to their credit. Nearly 80 per cent. of the population have Savings Bank accounts. The total banking deposits, £37,925,789, averages over £80 per head of population.

PRODUCTION AND INDUSTRY.

Agriculture.—Of the total area about two-thirds are farmed or grazed, and 5,000,000 acres cultivated—under wheat 2,200,000 acres, hay 600,000, oats 200,000, barley 200,000, orchards 30,000, and potatoes 4,000 acres, with 1,500,000 acres lying fallow. During the last ten seasons the quantity of wheat produced has averaged 24,000,000 bushels. English fruit, oranges, lemons, almonds, and olives are successfully grown, and fruit drying is profitable. There were 33,000 acres of vines, with an average annual production of about 5,500,000 gallons of wine; 60,000 cwt. of currants, and 45,000 cwt. of raisins. Considerable quantities of fruits (fresh and dried) and also wine are annually sent to overseas countries, principally the United Kingdom. Brandy and other spirits are also produced. The land is also very suitable for the growing of all kinds of root crops and vegetables.

Live Stock.—There were 6,014,565 sheep in 1920, cattle number 349,562, horses 264,902, pigs 60,205, and goats 8,202.

Minerals.—Copper and gold, silver, lead, manganese, bismuth, iron, gypsum, salt, phosphate rock, coal, &c., are found, the total annual mineral output being valued at £1,200,000. Over £32,000,000 of copper have been produced since the foundation of the State.

Manufactures.—In 1920 there were 1,368 factories, employing 29,442 hands, the gross value of the output being £30,454,539, and the wages paid £3,988,662. Plant, machinery, land, and buildings were valued at £7,008,661. A Department of Chemistry has been established for the purpose of fostering new industries by the utilisation of products at hand, and there is also an Advisory Board of Science and Industry.

Value of Production, 1919-20.—Crops, total value, £13,728,224, average per head, £29 (cereals, hay, &c., £11,559,029; orchards, vineyards, and gardens, £2,169,195); manufactures, £7,375,484; pastoral, £5,224,577; minerals and quarries, £277,427; dal-ying, £1,706,624; poultry, &c., £924,986; fisheries and game, £222,726; forestry, £431,197. Total value of production, £30,683,388, average £65 per head.

Exports of Produce.—A considerable quantity of the produce of South Australia is exported to Great Britain and other overseas countries, the average annual value being about £13,000,000. The main items are wheat, flour, wool, meats, skins and hides, butter, tallow, leather, minerals, wines, fruits (fresh and dried), jams and jellies, honey, manures.

Communication.—There are 3,342 miles of railway in South Australia, 114 miles of electric tramways, 44,000 miles of roads and several good harbours. The River Murray is used for conveying the produce grown on the irrigation settlements along its banks. There are 792 post offices in the State, which transmit annually 59,000,000 letters, 11,000,000 newspapers, 6,000,000 packets and parcels, and also 2,200,000 telegrams.

Ships entered and cleared number annually about 2,000. The larger part of the trade is with the U.K. and other British possessions, besides the U.S., France, Italy, and Japan. The export trade is equal to about £50 per inhabitant.

TOWNS.

ADELAIDE, the chief city and capital, population (1921) 255,318, inclusive of suburbs within 10 miles radius. Other towns are Moonta (4,000), Kadina (3,000), Wallaroo (5,500), Port Pirie (13,000), on the east and Port Augusta (3,000) on the west of Spencer Gulf, and Kapunda (2,500), Gawler (4,500), and Peterborough (2,500) on the line from Adelaide to the north, Strathalbyn (1,200) in the south, and Mt Gambier (4,500) in the south-east.

Transmission of mails, approximate, 29 days.

IV.—QUEENSLAND.

This State, situated in lat. 10° 40'—29° 8. and long. 138°—153° 30' E., comprises the whole north-eastern portion of the Australian continent.

Queensland possesses an area of 670,500 square miles (i.e., equal to more than 5½ times the area of the United Kingdom).

Religion.

Since 1861 no State aid has been afforded to religion. At the Census of 1911 there were 222,700 Church of England, 127,086 Roman Catholics, 75,560 Presbyterians, 59,220 Methodists, 24,225 Lutherans, 13,715 Baptists, and 47,394 other Christians, with 5,518 Muhammadans and Pagans, besides "Indefinite," "No religion," &c.

PHYSIOGRAPHY.

Relief.—The Great Dividing Range on the eastern coast of the continent produces a similar formation to that of New South Wales, the eastern side having a narrow slope to the coast and the western a long and gradual slope to the central plains, where the Kirby's Range divides the land into a northern and southern watershed.

Rivers.—The Brisbane, Burnett, Fitzroy, and Burdekin rise in the eastern ranges and flow into the Pacific, the Flinders, Mitchell, and Leichhardt in the Gulf of Carpentaria, and the Barcoo and Warrego rise in the central ranges and flow southwards.

Climate.—At Brisbane the average temperature for 1919 was 69° 5', the maximum and minimum shade temperatures being 99° 4' and 38° 4'; mean barometer, 30° 045. The coastal regions are warm and moist, the plateaus dry and temperate, whilst in the very far west the rainfall is scanty. The rainfall during 1919 was 19'353 inches, and there were 98 wet days.

GOVERNMENT.

Queensland was constituted a separate colony with Responsible Government in 1859, having previously formed part of New South Wales. The executive authority is vested in a Governor (appointed by the Crown), aided by an Executive Council of 10 members.

EDUCATION.

Primary Education is compulsory, secular, and free. In 1919 there were 1,574 State schools and six High Schools in operation, with 4,194 teachers and an average daily attendance of 99,569 children; and 156 private and 10 grammar schools, with 1,011 teachers and an average attendance of 19,783. A State-aided University was established during 1910.

FINANCE.

The revenue, expenditure, and debt of Queensland for the five years ended June 30, 1916-20, are stated as follows:—

Year	Revenue.	Expenditure.	Debt.
1917	*7,880,893	8,134,387	61,303,136
1918	*8,491,488	8,900,934	62,296,986
1919	*9,415,000	9,587,000	65,581,122
1920	11,293,743	11,266,910	69,680,764

Banking—The banking assets (1919) £28,904,265; liabilities £28,385,843. The deposits on Dec. 31, 1919, were £27,017,576, apart from the £14,567,608 (equal to an average of £53 18s. 3d. to each depositor) in the hands of the State Government Savings Bank, and Commonwealth Savings Bank deposits, an average of £33 0s. 4d. per head.

PRODUCTION AND INDUSTRY.

Agriculture and Live Stock.—Of the total area of 429,120,000 acres the Government have parted with the fee simple of 16,806,983 acres; under a system of deferred payment, 9,064,089 acres more are in process of alienation, and an additional area of 211,030,440 acres leased out for sheep and cattle runs, 76,437,428 acres for grazing farms and homesteads, 36,590,950 acres are held under occupation licence, 333,834 acres under gold-mining and mineral lease, 210,201 for special purposes, and 2,005,257 acres perpetual lease, and scrub selections 166,899 acres, leaving 76,379,196 practically unoccupied. Wheat, oats, and barley flourish on the Darling Downs, while a still larger area is devoted to maize, which yields an average crop of about 25 bushels per acre. Both English and sweet potatoes are cultivated, as also are coffee, cotton, oranges, peaches, pine-apples, grapes, bananas, coco-nuts, mangoes, plums, and various English fruits. India-rubber and sisal hemp plantations have also been recently started. In the year 1919, 162,126 tons of sugar were produced. The live stock in 1919 included 5,940,433 cattle, 17,379,332 sheep, 731,705 horses, and 99,593 pigs. Wool, meat, and butter are the principal products.

Forestry.—There are many varieties of fancy timber which are much utilised by cabinet-makers, &c.; among them may be mentioned "silky oak," largely used in furniture and office fittings; maple, a timber with a handsome grain and capable of taking a very high polish; "bean" is also much in demand for furniture; black walnut, penda, beech, crows' ash, quandong, bally gum, as well as many varieties of the eucalypt, pine, cedar, and sandalwood, the latter being mainly exported to China.

* Including net amount received from Commonwealth on a per capita basis.

Minerals.—The total mineral output in 1919 was £2,472,027. There are rich deposits of gold, copper, tin, lead, silver, antimony, limestone, ironstone, and wolfram, while coal is found in several districts. The gold output in 1919 was valued at £514,103; silver, £23,772; copper, £952,501; tin, £143,167; coal, £612,307; wolfram, £40,556; molybdenite £52,234.

Commerce.—The chief articles of export overseas, the produce of the State, in 1917-18 were: Wool, £6,765,217; meat, including extract, and bacon, hams, and pork, £3,882,720; hides and skins, £264,562; tallow, £640,612; butter, cheese, and milk, £693,447.

TOWNS.

CAPITAL, Brisbane. Population (1921), 209,699. The contour of the Queensland coast-line and the relative position of its inland parts operate against any centralisation similar to that at Melbourne, Sydney, or Adelaide, and numerous ports of considerable size extend along the coast:—Brisbane, Rockhampton (24,128), Maryborough (12,500), Townsville (17,200), Port Douglas, Mackay, Thursday Island, Cooktown, and Bundaberg (10,132). Other places of importance are Ipswich (20,526), Toowoomba (24,200), Charters Towers (17,268), Gympie (12,419), and Cairns, Mt. Morgan (12,023).

Transmission of mails, approximate, 32 days.

V.—TASMANIA.

Tasmania is an island in the South Pacific Ocean, off the southern extremity of Australia, from which it is separated by Bass Straits, about 120 miles wide, in which are situated the Furneaux Group and King Island, included within the State. It lies between 40° 33'—43° 39' S. lat. and 144° 39'—148° 23' E. long., and contains an area of 26,215 square miles.

Religion.

All religions are free. In 1921 there were 28,000 members of the Church of England, 20,000 Roman Catholics, 25,000 Methodists, 16,000 Presbyterians, and 11,000 Independents and Baptists.

PHYSIOGRAPHY.

The surface of the country is generally undulating forest land, with mountains from 1,500 to 5,000 feet in height, and expanses of level, open plains. There are numerous streams, the Derwent and the Tamar being the largest. The climate is fine and salubrious, and well suited to European constitutions; the hot winds of Australia do not reach the Island. At Hobart in 1900 the mean annual temperature was 55°·8°, the mean temperature for Dec., Jan., and Feb. being 60°·6°, and that of June, July, and Aug. 48°·1°. The western side of the island is very wet, the eastern side having a rainfall similar to that of eastern England; the average rainfall varies from 20 inches to 100 inches in different parts.

GOVERNMENT.

The island was first settled by the British in 1803 as an appendage to New South Wales, from which it was separated in 1825. In 1851 a partly elective legislature was inaugurated, and in 1896 Responsible Government was added. In 1901 Tasmania became a State of the Australian Commonwealth, q.v. The State executive authority is vested in a Governor (appointed by the Crown), aided by an Executive Council of responsible Ministers.

EDUCATION.

Primary education is compulsory, secular, and free, there being 490 State schools in 1900, with 38,300 children on the registers. Secondary education is also provided by the State (4 high schools with 1,060 scholars), and by private endowment. There is a University at Hobart, and technical schools at Hobart and Launceston.

Banking.—Dec. 31, 1900, the banks of issue had total deposits £6,954,726; the savings bank deposits were £3,783,052.

PRODUCTION AND INDUSTRY.

Agriculture and Live Stock.—Of the total area of 16,778,000 acres in 1900-01, there were 297,383 acres under crops. The live stock included 208,202 cattle, 1,570,132 sheep, 38,116 pigs, and 39,117 horses. The wool clip was estimated at 9,503,048 lb. The butter produced amounted to 4,014,402 lb.

Timber.—Timber cut is chiefly hardwood, from Eucalyptus, Blackwood (Acacia) and Myrtle (Beech). The native softwood pines are excellent in quality, but are being cut out and not replaced. Tasmanian timbers offer large possibilities, for the most part unexplored, for cabinet making, tool handles, and other special purposes. The amount of timber milled in 1900 was 65,000,000 super ft., valued at £527,000. This is exhaustive of the timber used for piles, poles, telegraph, and for practically all sleepers. Exports beyond the Commonwealth are chiefly for harbour works and sleepers.

Minerals.—The chief minerals produced are copper, tin, silver, lead, coal and gold, the value of all minerals produced in 1900 being £1,227,692.

Manufactures.—The chief factories for export are metallurgical, fruit preserving and woollen mills. Tasmanian blankets command very high prices on account of their excellent quality.

TOWNS.

CAPITAL, Hobart. Population (1901), 52,385. Other towns are Launceston (pop. 24,318), Devonport, Ulverstone, Burnie, and Queenstown. Transmission of mails, approximate, 31 days.

VI.—WESTERN AUSTRALIA.

Includes all that portion of the continent west of 120° E. long., the most westerly point being in 115° 52' E. long., and from 12° 30' to 35° 8' S. lat. Its extreme length is 1,300 miles, and 1,000 miles from east to west, and its total area 975,920 square miles.

Physical Features.—Large portions of the State, for some hundreds of miles inland, are hilly and even mountainous, although the altitude, so far as ascertained, rises nowhere above that of Mount Bruce (4,024 ft.) in the north-west division or the Stirling Range (3,640 ft.) in the south-west. The greater part of the far interior may be described as a great tableland, with an altitude of from 1,000 to 2,000 ft. above sea-level, the surface of which consists partly of large areas of sand-dunes, partly of wide stretches of clayey soils. Long, straggling rivers, broken during the summer into a series of pools, cross the country as far inland as the hills extend, widening in many cases nearer the coast into large sea-estuaries. Of the area of Western Australia, which is equal to more than half that of European Russia, probably about two-thirds is suitable for pastoral purposes, immense tracts having already been proved eminently so. Some 60,000 square miles at least are equally fitted for agricultural purposes, more especially for the production of wheat, wine, and fruit, and considerable areas are already under cultivation. Gold, coal, and other minerals in abundance are found in many parts, and wide stretches of land are covered with forests of great commercial value.

POPULATION.

1921 (Census)...	175,096	154,172	329,268

The apparent decrease in the male population after 1914 existed, of course, only in a technical sense, since it was mainly due to enlistment of volunteers for the war. The total number of men who enlisted in the State during the course of the war was 24,353, and of these 23,670 returned. The settlement of the soldiers in suitable occupations has been vigorously pushed on since the end of the war. The tide of immigration from the United Kingdom and elsewhere has again set in, and in view of the unlimited scope Western Australia offers for further settlement, the Government is doing its utmost to encourage it. It is confidently expected that a better knowledge of the great resources of this as yet very meagrely peopled part of the Empire will more and more attract large numbers of suitable settlers from Great Britain and other populous countries, particularly as the Western Australian Government is again offering every inducement to the bona fide immigrant.

Natural Increase of the People.

1919	6,037	3,590	2,194
1920	8,149	3,328	2,931

Religions.

There is no State aid to religions. At the Census of 1911 there were 109,435 persons belonging to the Church of England, 56,616 Roman Catholics, 34,348 Methodists, and 26,607 Presbyterians.

PHYSIOGRAPHY.

The coastal regions of the west and of the north are undulating, with an interior slope to the central desert of Australia. The Darling and Hamersley ranges of the west have a western slope to the Indian Ocean, into which flow many streams, notably the Swan, Murchison, Gascoyne, Ashburton, Fortescue, and De Grey. In the north the Fitzroy flows from the Leopold range into the Indian Ocean, and the Drysdale and Ord into the Timor Sea.

Climate.—The average temperature of Perth (lat. 32° S.) for the past 23 years was 65°, while the mean for the barometer for 36 years was 30.02 inches. There are wet and dry seasons, the former lasting from May to October. The total rainfall at Perth during 1920 was 37.02, during 1921 31.38, during 1922 27.85, during 1923 36.28, during 1924 20.21, during 1925 43.51, during 1926 35.16, during 1927 45.64, during 1928 39.58; during 1929 30.66, and during 1930 40.35; the average for the past 45 years being 33.75.

The climate is one of the most temperate in the world, especially in the south-western portion, where excessive cold is never and excessive heat very rarely known. The summer heat, which is mostly dry, with hardly any rainfall, is during the greater part of the hot season relieved by cool sea-breezes in the afternoon. The winters are rainy, but with occasional dry spells of perfect weather.

GOVERNMENT.

Western Australia was first settled by the British in 1829, and in 1870 it was granted a partially elective legislature. In 1890 responsible government was granted, and the Administration vested in a Governor, a Legislative Council, and a Legislative Assembly. The present constitution rests upon an Amending Act of 1899, further amended by the Constitution Acts Amendment Act, 1921; the Executive is vested in a Governor appointed by the Crown and aided by a Council of Ministers.

THE LEGISLATURE.

Parliament consists of a Legislative Council of 30 members elected for 6 years, and a Legislative Assembly of 30 members elected for 3 years by universal adult suffrage; the electorate of the Council is restricted by a property qualification, that of the Assembly being subject to residence and registration.

President of the Legislative Council, Hon.

W. Kingsmill, B.A. £700

Speaker of the Legislative Assembly, Hon.

George Taylor 700

THE JUDICATURE.

There are magistrates' courts and general and quarter sessions, and a Supreme Court with a Chief Justice and three Puisne Judges.

Chief Justice, Hon. Sir R. F. Macmillan £2,000

Puisne Judges, Hons. R. B. Burnside,

J. A. Northmore, and T. P. Draper each 1,700

EDUCATION.

Education.—Education is compulsory and free, and numerous elementary schools are under the control of the Minister of Education. There are a training college, technical schools, a school of mines and a Goldfields High School at Kalgoorlie, a modern school, and a University. The total amount expended on education during the year ended June 30, 1921, was £505,160 (including the University, £15,000).

It has been consistently the object of successive Governments to place within the reach of each child in the State every advantage of education, from the kindergarten to the university.

FINANCE.

The revenue and expenditure and debt of the State for the 5 years ended June 30, 1917-1921, are stated as under:—

Year.	Revenue.	Expenditure.	Debt.
1917	4,577,007	5,276,764	40,914,826
1918	4,662,536	5,328,279	42,304,001
1919	4,944,850	5,596,865	43,637,076
1920	5,863,501	6,531,725	46,822,003
1921	6,789,565	7,476,291	49,039,668

Banking.—There were, including the Commonwealth Bank of Australia, cheque-paying banks, formerly banks of issue, in the State on June 30, 1921, with total assets £26,952,224 and liabilities £12,823,922. The amount due to depositors in the State Savings Bank at June 30, 1921, was £5,845,227; in the School Savings Bank, £53,290; and in the Commonwealth Savings Bank the amount due to depositors in Western Australia on Dec. 31, 1920, was £1,776,604. The combined amounts due to State Savings Bank depositors and State School Savings Bank depositors, on June 30, 1921, averaged £17.72 per head of the population.

War Funds.—The public contributions in Western Australia to a variety of War Funds up to Dec. 31, 1920, totalled approximately £1,222,620, or between £2.22s. and £4 per head of the mean population during the war period.

PRODUCTION AND INDUSTRY.

Agriculture and Live Stock.—Of the total area (664,522,800 acres) 1,804,999 acres were under crops in 1900-01, wheat for grain accounting for 1,775,675 acres; large areas of good wheat-growing land exist in the southern districts. The live stock included 849,803 cattle, 6,532,965 sheep, 60,581 pigs, 31,097 goats, and 178,624 horses. There were about 3,000 acres of vineyards.

Land Settlement and Agriculture.—It is only a few years since the immense capabilities of the State as one of the world's potential great wheat-producers were more generally realised. In those few years the area under wheat for grain has increased annually by leaps and bounds, the acreage in 1908 being only 879,609, whilst in 1926 it was 1,734,117. From 1916, owing to the war, a temporary retrogression has set in, the acreage in 1921 being 1,775,675. Fruit-growing, prior to the war, was rapidly creating a considerable export trade to foreign markets. Large numbers of English and other immigrants were then annually settled on the still unoccupied agricultural areas of the State. It is anticipated that, with the energetic policy of development now once more initiated by the Government, land settlement will progress even more rapidly than in former years, and that Western Australia will then absorb a constantly increasing stream of immigrants. A very large portion of the south-western division of the State, containing many millions of acres, is especially suitable for wheat-growing, whilst the hills of the Darling Range and many other portions of the State produce grapes and other excellent fruit in the greatest variety.

Manufacturing Industries.—There were on December 31, 1929, a total of 902 industrial establishments in the State employing either machinery or at least four hands. The total number of persons employed by them was 16,358, as against 18,799 in 1924, the highest number previously reached. The combined output of these establishments was computed at £10,286,732.

Forestry.—The forests are among the most extensive within the Commonwealth, and contain some of the very finest hardwoods in the world. Two of these, jarrah (Eucalyptus marginata) and karri (Eucalyptus diversicolor), have been largely exported, and, just prior to the war, their annual export value was over one million pounds. These two timbers are eminently suitable for every kind of constructional purpose and for use in all kinds of railway rolling-stock. They are already employed in these respects in Great Britain, India, South Africa, Egypt, and elsewhere. Their hardness and durability is remarkable, and the great size of the trees permits of beams and pieces of unusually large dimensions being obtained. For furniture and decorative purposes they are also extensively employed, the beauty of the grain when polished being equal to that of the best Honduran mahogany. Besides these trees the forests contain a wealth of hardwoods, one or other of them suitable for every purpose to which wood can be applied. The beauty of grain and delicacy of marking in nearly all of them recommend them to the furniture manufacturer. Sandalwood (Santalum cymosum) is peculiar to the forests, and is exported very largely to the East, its essential oil being extracted locally. There are in the forests many barks containing tannin. Some of these are exported, the trade in mallet bark prior to the war having been extensive. The forests are rich in gums and resins. An Act for their protection and management was passed in 1918, and a scheme is now being completed for the regeneration on scientific lines of cut-over areas.

Minerals.—The groups of the Coolgardie gold-fields (covering a vast portion of the interior and extending to the 125th meridian), as well as other fields, are being constantly worked, the production of gold being 617,842 oz. in 1920, and 349,037 oz. in the first eight months of 1921. To the Coolgardie group belong the following gold-fields: North Coolgardie, Broad Arrow, North-East Coolgardie, East Coolgardie, and Coolgardie. The total amount produced in the State from 1896 to August 31, 1921, is 34,097,428 fine oz.; of this amount the greater portion was received at the Royal Mint, Perth.

Magnetic iron, lead, copper, and tin ores exist in large quantities, as also coal.

Total Production.—The total estimated value of Western Australian production during 1929 was £22,396,694, distributed as follows: Agricultural, £9,666,281; Pastoral, £4,614,546; Dairy, Poultry, and Bee-Farming, £243,719; Forestry and Fisheries, £1,363,972; Mining, £3,562,204; Manufacturing, £2,946,972 (value added to the raw material by the production of the industrial establishments).

Industrial Legislation.—Industrial legislation has for many years included industrial arbitration, with the result that wages are not subject to the frequent depreciation prevailing in the older countries.

Trade.—The principal ports are Fremantle, Albany, Bunbury, Geraldton, and Broome. The opening of the Trans-Australian Railway in Oct. 1927 has afforded another means of ingress and egress, both for travellers and merchandise. The imports chiefly consist of provisions, sugar, tea, tobacco, spirits, beer, soap, machinery, ironmongery, clothing of various kinds, &c. The principal exports are of wool, gold, jarrah timber, silver, tin, copper ore, sandalwood, barks for tanning, pearls and pearl-shells, hides and skins, wheat, flour, fruit, &c. The principal exports for the year ended June 30, 1921, were:—Wool, £2,388,119; timber, £1,137,223; sandalwood, pearl shell, pearls, hides and skins, wheat, £2,930,179; and flour, £1,075,037.

During 1920-21 the total imports into Western Australia were valued at £14,839,242, including £3,412,884 from the United Kingdom, and £7,619,703 from other States of Australia. The exports totalled £11,816,856, including £6,328,778 to the United Kingdom and £5,338,415 to other States of Australia.

TOWNS.

CAPITAL, Perth. Population (1921) of Metropolitan area, including Fremantle, 225,120.

Perth, the capital, stands on the right bank of the Swan River estuary, 12 miles from Fremantle. The King's Park (approximately 2000 acres), on a hill overlooking the city and the wide estuarine reaches of the river, possesses unique natural beauty. Other towns are Fremantle (including suburbs, 25,525), Albany (4,000), Kalgoorlie and Boulder (over 19,000), Bunbury (about 4,000), Claremont (6,000), Geraldton (2,800), Midland Junction (5,000), and Northam (3,300).

Transmission of mails, approximate, 22 days.

Territories.

NORTHERN TERRITORY.

The Northern Territory occupies the centre of the Australian continent between 129° — 136° East longitude as far as 25° South latitude, and its administration was taken over by the Commonwealth on Jan. 1, 1912.

The area is estimated at 527,600 sq. miles. The population on Dec. 31, 1912, was 4,762 (exclusive of aboriginals).

Part of the country is desert, but large portions of land are suitable for tropical and semi-tropical agriculture, and the Federal Government grants suitable areas rent free for the original settler's lifetime or for 22 years (which-ever shall be longer). The staple industry is pastoral, and pigs and sheep thrive, while cattle and horses do well south of the 15th parallel. The chief grasses are Mitchell and Bindera. Many grants have been taken up, and a considerable area has been settled and improved. Extensive meat freezing works have been erected near Darwin, which will greatly enhance the value of locally bred cattle, which hitherto have been driven to other States for disposal. For the months of April to September the climate is delightful. From October to December it is hot and humid; from January to March is the wet season, when travelling becomes extremely difficult. There are thousands of square miles of first-class pasturage which will one day carry millions of sheep. The chief rivers are Victoria, Adelaide, Daly, Roper, Liverpool, Goyder, McArthur, and the Robinson. The first five are navigable from 40 to 100 miles from their entrance for boats drawing 4 feet. Pearl fishing is carried on round the coast, the shell being of good quality. There are considerable mineral resources, gold, silver, lead and tin being indicated, and when communications are opened up, the industry will become important.

The only railway is from Darwin to Emungalan (200 miles). A further extension to the head of the Roper River (80 miles) will be proceeded with in the near future, the permanent survey having been completed. The policy of the present Government is to link up the Territory with the other States by means of a trans-continental railway.

Darwin, the seat of Government, occupies an elevated site 80 feet above high-water mark, overlooking Port Darwin, one of the finest harbours in Australia, and contains the offices of the Administrator and officials of the Territory. The cable owned by the Eastern Extension Company lands at Darwin from Singapore. The town is healthy and free from malaria. The Darwin Botanical Gardens are about $1\frac{1}{2}$ miles from the town.

Administrator of Northern Territory, Frederick Charles Urquhart.

Government Secretary, R. McGregor Christie.

Director of Mines, T. G. Oliver.

Director of Land, H. M. Trower.

Acting-Judge Supreme Court, His Honour Mr. Justice Herbert.

Special Magistrate, Major Gerald Hogan.

PAPUA.

(British New Guinea.)

The total area of the island of Papua is about 515,000 sq. miles, with an estimated native population of 2,000,000. Of the total area in 1924, the S.E. portion (90,000 square miles, pop. 200,000) was a territory of the Commonwealth, and the N.E. portion (90,000 sq. miles, pop. 120,000) was the German Colony of Kaiser Wilhelm's Land, while the W. portion (125,000 sq. miles, pop. 600,000) forms part of the Netherlands' E. Indies. An expedition of Imperial Australian troops took possession of the German territory (Kaiser Wilhelm's Land) in the north on September 24, 1914, and the former German possessions in Papua have been allocated to the Commonwealth. The area of the Commonwealth Territory of Papua is thus increased to about 160,000 sq. miles; estimated native population 320,000.

The island is the second largest in the world, and lies some 80 miles to the north of Queensland, between 0° $0'$ and 12° $0'$ S. lat. and between 130° $50'$ and 154° $30'$ E. long. Its greatest length is 1,450 miles, with a maximum breadth of 430 miles. The islands lying near Papua, some 200 in number, form part of the Territory.

The island of Papua was discovered in 1912, and was first claimed by the Dutch. The British portion was annexed by Queensland to the Empire in 1883, but it was not then ratified by the Imperial Government. A Protectorate was, however, proclaimed in 1884, on the guarantee of the Australasian Governments of £15,000 annually, to cover the cost of administration, and "British New Guinea" was annexed by the Crown in 1888.

The two largest rivers of the Territory are the Fly and the Purari. The land is mountainous generally, the highest point reaching 13,150 feet, and a large portion of the country consists of forest. The climate is favourable to the cultivation of all tropical products. The cultivated area is small. Tobacco is being cultivated and a factory is established at Moresby. Oil has been discovered, and the petroleum industry is likely to become important. The chief exports are copra, rubber, sisal hemp, gold and copper ore.

The ports of entry are PORT MORESBY, Samarai, Daru, and Bonagali.

There is an Executive Council of 6 members, who, with 3 non-official members, form also the Legislative Council.

NORFOLK ISLAND.

This island is about 90 miles from Sydney and 400 miles from New Zealand. It is about five miles in length, by three in breadth, and was discovered by Capt. Cook in 1774. Its area is 8,528 acres and circumference 20 miles. The climate is mild, with a mean temperature of 65° and an annual rainfall of 55 inches. The descendants of the mutineers of the Bounty were brought here from Pitcairn Island in 1866. The population in April, 1921, was 717.

PHYSIOGRAPHY.

The Dominion of New Zealand is distant about 1,200 miles south-east of the mainland of Australia, and consists of three main islands in the South Pacific Ocean, known as the North, South, and Stewart Islands, having a length of 1,100 miles, between 34° 22' and 47° 18' South latitude and 162° East longitude - 173° West longitude, with several groups of smaller islands lying at some distance from the principal group.

Geographical.—The two principal islands of New Zealand have a total length of 1,040 miles, the total coast-line reaching 4,330 miles. A large portion of the surface is mountainous in character. The principal range is that of the Southern Alps, having its culminating point in Mount Cook (12,349 ft.). The North Island mountains include several active and dormant volcanoes. Mt. Ruapehu (9,175 ft.) and Mt. Ngauruhoe (7,515 ft.) are the most important. Of the numerous glaciers, the Tasman (18 miles by 1½) is the largest. The North Island in particular is noted for its hot springs and geysers. For the most part the rivers are too short and rapid for considerable use in navigation. The more important include the Waikato (220 miles in length), Wanganui (140) and Clutha (210). Lakes (Taupo, 238 sq. miles in area; Wakatipu, 112; and Te Anau 132) are abundant; many of them of great beauty.

Meteorological.—Owing chiefly to its great length, New Zealand's climate varies very considerably in its different divisions. In general it is mild with an abundant rainfall. Snow is rarely seen except upon the higher levels. Annual averages:—North Island, mean temperature 56° F., rainfall 48 in. (days with rain 159); South Island, mean temperature 52° F., rainfall 43 in. (days with rain 150).

GOVERNMENT.

The west coast of the South Island of New Zealand was discovered by Abel Jansen Tasman, the navigator (voyaging under the direction of the Netherlands' East India Company), on December 13, 1642. The islands were visited in 1769 by Captain Cook, who returned to them in 1773, 1774, and 1777. In 1793 the Government of New South Wales despatched H.M.S. Daedalus to the islands on a diplomatic mission. The first settlement of Europeans was made in 1814, but no colonisation took place until 1825. In 1840 British sovereignty was proclaimed, and on May 3, 1841, New Zealand was, by letters patent, erected into a separate colony distinct from New South Wales. On Sept. 26, 1907, the designation was changed to The Dominion of New Zealand. The Constitution rests upon the Act of 1852, under which the executive authority is entrusted to a Governor (now Governor-General) appointed by the Crown and aided by a Council of Ministers, with a Legislature of two houses.

THE LEGISLATURE.

Parliament consists of a General Legislative Council appointed by the Governor (prior to 1891 the appointments were for life; since that date for 7 years only), at present consisting of 36 members; and a House of Representatives consisting of 80 members elected for 3 years. Four of the members are Maoris elected by the natives. Women are entitled to vote and to be elected Members of the House of Representatives (Women's Parliamentary Rights Act, 1919). Members of the Upper House receive £350 per annum and of the Lower House £500 per annum, in each case with travelling expenses and deductions for non-attendance.

Speaker of the Legislative Council, Hon. W. C. F. Carnaross..... £800
Speaker of the House of Representatives, Hon. Sir F. W. Lang..... 1,100

THE JUDICATURE.

The judicial system is similar to that of England, with magistrates' courts and quarter sessions, and a supreme court with a Chief Justice and 7 puisne judges.

Chief Justice, Rt. Hon. Sir Robert Stout, P.C., K.C.M.G., LL.D...... £2,250
Puisne Judges, Hon. W. A. Sim, T. W. Stringer, J. H. Hosking, A. L. Herdman, Sir J. W. Salmond, F. V. Frazer (President of Arbitration Court), J. R. Reed, C.B.E., K.C., A. R. Adams...each 2,000

In 1920, 28,999 civil cases were tried in Magistrates' Courts, while summary convictions in criminal cases were 35,517. In 1920 convictions (or sentences) in Supreme Courts were (Europeans) 328. Civil cases to number of 420 were tried, judgment being entered for a total amount of £96,027.

POLICE.

On March 31, 1920, the strength of the Police Force was 926 of all ranks, equivalent to 1 for every 1,325 of the population. Average cost of police protection per inhabitant was, in 1919-20, 4s. 11½d.

LOCAL GOVERNMENT.

For purposes of local government the Dominion is divided into counties and ridings, with incorporated boroughs, under elected county and municipal councils, town, road and harbour boards. Electors are adult ratepayers of both sexes.

Revenue of local bodies, 1919-20 £7,630,795
 Indebtedness, March 31, 1919-20 26,492,420

PASSPORTS.

With certain exceptions, no person over 15 years is permitted to land unless in possession of a passport issued by a competent British authority.

DEFENCE.

Army.

The New Zealand Defence Forces consist of the Permanent Force, the Territorial Force and the Senior Cadets.

Units of the N.Z. Permanent Force are the New Zealand Staff Corps, the Royal New Zealand Artillery, the New Zealand Permanent Staff, the New Zealand Army Ordnance Corps and the New Zealand Army Pay Corps. These are responsible for the training of all branches of the New Zealand Forces and for all administrative matters connected therewith. The Territorial Force consists of 9 regiments of Mounted Rifles; 2 batteries of Artillery; 2 Depôts of Engineers (Field); 2 Depôts of Engineers (Railway); 2 Depôts Corps of Signals; 2 Brigades of Infantry; 2 Depôts Army Service Corps; and 2 Depôts Medical Corps. The Dominion, for purposes of defence, is divided into 3 Commands, each of which produces one-third of the above Units. The Force is capable of producing, on mobilization, 1 Division and 3 Brigades of Mounted Rifles, and also produces the machinery for the duplication of this Force, and the provision of the necessary requirements to maintain it in the Field. The Senior Cadets are reorganised in Battalions and receive physical and elementary military training. There are a large number of Rifle Clubs in the Dominion established for the encouragement of rifle shooting. Military training is compulsory on all male citizens between the ages of 14 and 25; in the Senior Cadets from the age of 14 to 18, and in the Territorial Force from the age of 18 to 25, and in the Reserve from the age of 25 to 30.

During the South African War, New Zealand despatched 10 Contingents, totalling 6,500 men, to the assistance of the Imperial Forces in South Africa. On the outbreak of the Great War, the Dominion contributed a Force which captured and garrisoned German Samoa, and an Expeditionary Force for service in Europe. The latter force was engaged in Egypt and Gallipoli, and being subsequently expanded to a Division and a Brigade of Mounted Rifles, continued to operate on the Western Front and in Palestine until the termination of hostilities. During this period of service the Expeditionary Force absorbed 100,000 men, and 10,000 more were ready for embarkation or under training when the Armistice was signed. Seventeen thousand of the Dominion's soldiers lost their lives on service, and the cost of this Force to the Dominion has exceeded £79,000,000. The New Zealand Troops established a very high reputation for their gallantry and general behaviour under all circumstances. The tremendous amount of transport work involved in the conveyance of the Forces to Egypt, France, Britain, Gallipoli and Samoa was carried out with extraordinary success, not one New Zealand Transport having been lost while conveying troops.

Navy.

In 1909 New Zealand presented the battle-cruiser New Zealand to the Imperial Government.

The Naval Defence Act, 1913, provides for the establishment of a New Zealand Naval Force by voluntary enlistment for a prescribed period of not less than two years, members on discharge to be drafted into the New Zealand Royal Naval Reserve for such period as may be prescribed for service only in time of war: the ships and personnel forming the Force to pass under the control and to be at the disposition of the Imperial Government in time of war. A commencement was made with the formation of a New Zealand Division immediately prior to the war, when H.M.S. Philomel was commissioned with ranks and ratings lent from the Royal Navy to serve as a training ship for the formation of a small Naval Force. The Philomel was employed under the orders of the British Admiralty throughout the war and no opportunity was afforded for the commencement of a scheme of training. This vessel has now been placed in commission again. In 1919 Admiral of the Fleet Viscount Jellicoe of Scapa, G.C.B., O.M., G.C.V.O., visited New Zealand in H.M.S. New Zealand and presented his report, making recommendations and suggestions for the Naval Defence of the Dominion. In 1920 H.M.S. Chatham was presented to New Zealand by the Imperial Government and was commissioned on 1st October with officers and men of the Royal Navy. The Chatham flies the broad pennant of Commodore Alan G. Hotham, C.M.G., R.N., appointed in command of that ship, as Commodore Commanding the New Zealand station, and as Naval Adviser to the New Zealand Government. A commencement was made with the recruiting of New Zealand boys and youths for training as seamen and stokers in May, 1921, fifty-six of whom had been entered by the middle of July. A Naval Board was constituted by Order-in-Council of the 14th March, charged with the control of all matters relating to the Naval Forces, upon the policy directed by the Minister, and vested with the executive command of the Naval Forces: the Board to be composed of the Minister of Defence (President) and the following members: the Commodore Commanding New Zealand Station (1st Naval Member); the Chief Staff Officer to the Commodore (temporarily, as and Naval Member); the Secretary to the Commodore Commanding (Secretary to the Board). By Order-in-Council of the 20th June, 1921, it was provided that the ships and personnel comprising the New Zealand Naval Forces shall be described respectively as forming and belonging to "The New Zealand Division of the Royal Navy," which shall be the official designation of the Force. H.M.S. Veronica (Sloop) was commissioned on 23rd March, 1920, as an Imperial unit for service on the New Zealand station.

FINANCE.

Banking.—At the end of 1920 there were six banks of issue doing business, two of which were New Zealand banks. Total assets (average of four quarters of year), £61,361,627; liabilities, £57,828,459; value of notes in circulation, £7,828,459.

Post-office and private savings banks had, at the close of 1919, 729,985 depositors, having £41,924,660 to their credit.

EDUCATION.

The State system of education is free, secular, and compulsory. There were (December, 1919) 2,400 public primary schools, with 5,606 teachers and 196,099 scholars; there are also (Dec. 1919) 300 private schools, with 26,237 scholars, and, in addition, 134 schools for the Maoria. The higher education of boys and girls in the cities and large towns is carried on in 33 endowed colleges and grammar schools. The University of New Zealand (to which are affiliated Auckland University College, Victoria University College, Canterbury College, and the University of Otago, the four colleges having 2,961 students in 1919) has power to confer degrees.

PRODUCTION AND INDUSTRY.

Agriculture and Forestry.—The total area of the Dominion (excluding annexed and outlying islands) is 66,101,760 acres, and 43,473,079 acres of this were in occupation in 1919, this acreage representing 81,592 holdings. New Zealand is a pastoral rather than an agricultural country, but the quantity of wheat and oats grown is sufficient for the Dominion's requirements. The area under wheat in 1919-20 was 139,611 acres, giving a yield of 4,559,934 bushels. An area of 179,800 acres of oats was threshed, the yield totalling 6,667,866 bushels; while 328,174 acres were converted to chaff, hay, or ensilage. Other acreages were: barley, 22,907; rye-grass, 39,580; and potatoes, 24,933. An area of 545,310 acres was sown in turnips. Amongst the forest productions are the Kauri pine (found only at the northern extremity of the islands), much valued for shipbuilding and for its resin (Kauri gum). New Zealand flax is used for the manufacture of ropes and twine.

Live Stock.—The cattle in 1920 numbered 3,101,945; sheep, 23,919,970; pigs, 266,829; and horses, 346,407. The pastures of the South Island produce the celebrated sheep of the Canterbury Plain.

Minerals.—Coal-mining is one of the largest industries, the output in 1919 being 1,847,848 tons, the approximate total output to the end of 1919 being 50,040,688 tons. Gold-mining, both alluvial and quartz, is an important industry in many districts, and rich iron ore, in the form of iron sand, has been found in Taranaki, and in the form of brown hematite at Farapara, near Nelson.

EXTERNAL TRADE.

The total imports and exports of the Dominion are valued as follows, for the 5 years 1916-20:—

Year.	Imports.	Exports.	Total.
1916...	£26,330,283	£33,286,937	£59,616,220

COMMUNICATIONS.

Railways.—In March, 1921, there were 3,009 miles of Government railway lines in working order, and more under construction; and 137 miles of private lines, together with an excellent coaching system. The number of passengers carried in 1920-21 was 35,315,640 (exclusive of 464,691 season ticket holders), while goods carried amounted to 6,487,279 tons. Revenue and expenditure were £6,908,531 and £5,636,601 respectively.

Shipping.—During 1920 the vessels entered inwards numbered 744 (tonnage, 2,068,370), and those entered outwards 707 (tonnage, 1,976,255), exclusive of coasting vessels.

Posts and Telegraphs.—The annual postal circulation was (1919) 254,436,105 letters and post-cards, 35,498,263 newspapers, 44,320,385 books and packets, and 6,193,475 parcels, and the work is effected by 3,315 post-offices. There are 13,722 miles of telegraph line, with 51,027 miles of wire. The telephone service is highly efficient and universal in all centres. Telegrams transmitted during year, 14,957,615.

TOWNS.

CAPITAL, WELLINGTON, in the North Island.

The population of the chief cities and towns at the Census, 1921, was as follows:—Wellington,* 107,428; Auckland,* 127,720; Dunedin,* 73,437; Christchurch,* 104,272; Invercargill,† 19,028; Napier,† 16,922; Gisborne,† 14,477; Palmerston North,† 16,863; Nelson,† 20,622; Timaru,† 16,412; Wangarui,† 23,286; New Plymouth,† 12,423; Grey Valley Boroughs,† 8,349; Hamilton, 11,439; and Hastings, 9,262.

THE ISLANDS OF NEW ZEALAND.

NOTE.—The following islands form part of the Dominion proper:—North Island and adjacent islets; South Island and adjacent islets; Mercer Island and adjacent islets, and Chatham Islands, between 43° 30' S. lat. and 175° 40'–177° 15' W. long. Chatham Islands have a population of 209 Europeans and 245 Maoris and half-castes. They support large flocks of sheep and some cattle.

The following are included in the geographical boundaries of New Zealand as proclaimed in 1847:—The Three Kings (discovered by Tasman on the Feast of the Epiphany), in 34° 0' S. lat. and 174° 8' 8" E. long. (uninhabited). Auckland Islands, about 200 miles south of Bluff Harbour, in 50° 32' S. lat., and 166° 13' E. long. The islands contain several good harbours, but are uninhabited. Campbell Island (uninhabited). Antipodes Group (49° 41' 15" S. lat., and 176° 43' E. long.) uninhabited, and Bounty Islands (47° 43' S. lat., 179° 0' 30" E. long.) uninhabited.

The following islands have been annexed to New Zealand:—

The Kermadec Group, between 29° 10' to 31° 30' S. lat., and 177° 45' to 179° W. long., includes Sunday, Macaulay, Curtis Islands, and L'Esperance, and some islets. The group is uninhabited.

Cook Islands, included in the boundaries of New Zealand since June, 1901, consist of the islands of Rarotonga, Aitutaki, Mangaia, Atiu, Manake, Mitiaro, The Herveys (Manuae and Aoutu), and Takutea. The population at the Census of 1916 numbered 12,777, all except 265 being Natives. The chief products are bananas, oranges, and other tropical fruits, copra, coffee, pearl-shell, and hats (Niue). The trade is chiefly with New Zealand and the United States of America. The exports (1919) were valued at £163,706, and the imports at £164,708. Rarotonga is the chief island, with a native population of 2,253, and a European population of 211. The government is administered locally under the direction of New Zealand. The Federal Council of the Cook Islands is under the direction of the Resident Commissioner at Rarotonga. The six Arfiki of Rarotonga are of equal rank and are all members of the Federal Council. Rarotonga is a place of call for the mail steamers between Sydney, N.S.W., and Wellington, N.Z., and San Francisco, U.S.A.

Western Samoa, consisting of the islands of Savaii, Manono, Apolima, Upolu, Fanuatapu, Namua, Nuutele and Nuiula (the remaining islands of the Samoan group belonging to the U.S.), have a total area of 1,090 square miles and a population estimated at 29,500. The largest islands are Savaii (660 square miles) and Upolu (340 square miles). Upolu contains the harbours of Apia and Saluafata, of which the former is the capital. In 1899 a disastrous tidal wave wrecked three U.S.A. warships and the "Eber" and "Adler" of the German Navy, H.M.S. Calliope, of the British Navy, effecting its escape. The disaster is recorded in "A Footnote to History," by R. L. Stevenson, whose home was at Valima (near Apia), where also he is buried. The natives of the islands are Christians of different denominations, including a few adherents of the Latter Day Saints (Mormons). Coco-nuts (copra), coconuts and rubber are the chief products of the islands, and Nauru Island, just South of the Equator, was captured by an Australian Expedition in 1914, and is administered by the United Kingdom, the Commonwealth of Australia and the Dominion of New Zealand. The island has a population of about 1,000. There are valuable deposits of phosphates on the island.

THE UNION JACK CLUB, Waterloo Road, S.E. 1. Tel.: Hop. 2511.

Patron-in-Chief: His Majesty the King.

Patroness-in-Chief: Her Majesty the Queen.

Patrons:

H.R.H. The Prince of Wales, K.G., etc.;

H.R.H. The Duke of Connaught, K.G., etc.

President: Colonel Sir Edward W. D. Ward, Bt., G.B.E., K.C.B., K.C.V.O.

Vice-President: Colonel Sir Walter E. Lawrence, Bt., G.C.I.E., G.C.V.O., C.B.

Comptroller of Club: Brig-General E. F. O. Gascoigne, C.M.G., D.S.O.

This is one of our great National Institutions, where Sailors, Soldiers and Airmen can go when on leave or passing through London; a place where they may deposit their kit and valuables, where they may obtain at moderate charges good meals and comfortable bedrooms to themselves, and where they find the usual amenities of a club, including Library and Writing Room, Baths, Barber's Shop, and also a Club Shop in which articles of everyday use, from clothing to cigarettes, can be purchased, under their own roof and feel really at home.

The Union Jack Club was erected by public subscription as a National Memorial to those who had fallen in the South African War, and other campaigns, and was opened on July 2nd, 1907, by His late Majesty King Edward VII. Membership is limited to those serving on the Active List of the Regular Forces, below the rank of Officer, but during the War all mobilised men, including those from the Overseas Dominions and Allied Countries, were made Honorary Members. The Club is managed by a Council and General Committee, which includes representatives elected by the members. Already firmly established before 1914, the Union Jack Club was an inestimable boon to Service men in the Great War, during which period alone sleeping accommodation was provided for no fewer than 1,121,328 men and 3,054,809 meals were served, whilst many millions of whom no record was kept passed through its doors for rest and refreshment, many of them straight from the trenches in France. Open day and night, the capacity of the Club was taxed to the uttermost.

Work was commenced late in 1902 on a considerable extension of the Club with funds raised in all parts of the Empire to commemorate the services of our gallant fighting forces in the Great War of 1914–18 and to provide the increased accommodation which is so much needed. By permission of His Royal Highness, the new building will be known as "The Prince of Wales's Wing."

PHYSIOGRAPHY.

Boundaries.—The provinces of the Union extend from the southernmost point of the African Continent to the course of the Limpopo River, i.e., from 34° 50' – 22° South latitude, and include all the British territories within those limits, with the exception of Basutoland and the Swaziland and Bechuanaland Protectorates, while provision is made for the future inclusion within the Union of those territories and of the territories of the British South Africa Company.

Relief.—The southernmost province contains many parallel ranges, which rise in steps towards the interior. The south-western peninsula contains the famous Table Mountain (3,582 feet), while the Great Zwart Berg and Lange Berg run in parallel lines from west to east of the Cape province. Between these two ranges and the Roggeveld and Nieuweveld to the north is the Great Karoo Plateau, which is bounded on the east by the Sneeuberg, containing the highest summit in the province (Compassberg, 7,800 feet). In the east are ranges which join the Drakensberg (11,000 feet), between Natal and the Orange Free State.

The Orange Free State presents a succession of undulating grassy plains with good pasture-land, at a general elevation of some 3,800 feet, with occasional hills or kopjes. The Transvaal is also mainly an elevated plateau with parallel ridges in the Magalies and Waterberg ranges of no great height. The veld or plains of this northernmost province is divisible into the Hooë Veld of the south, the Banker Veld of the centre, and the Bush Veld of the north and east, the first and second forming the grazing and agricultural region of the Transvaal and the last a mimosa-covered waste. The eastern province of Natal has pastoral lowlands and rich agricultural land between the slopes of the Drakensberg and the coast, the interior rising in terraces as in the southern provinces.

Rivers.—The Orange, with its tributary the Vaal, is the principal river of the south, rising in the Drakensberg and flowing into the Atlantic between the Protectorate of South-West Africa and the Cape of Good Hope. The Limpopo, or Crocodile River, in the north, rises in the Transvaal and flows into the Indian Ocean through Portuguese East Africa. Most of the remaining rivers are furious torrents after rain, with partially dry beds at other seasons.

HISTORICAL SKETCH.

The Cape of Good Hope was discovered in 1486 by Bartholomew Diaz, the commander of one of the many expeditions sent out by successive Kings of Portugal to discover an ocean route to India. Diaz merely doubled the Cape and returned home. Eleven years later, in 1497, Vasco da Gama not only doubled the Cape and landed in what is now Natal, but successfully accomplished the voyage to India. The Portuguese, however, did not make any permanent settlement at the Cape, although it was used by their vessels, and subsequently also by those of England and Holland, as a place of call in going to and from the East Indies. In 1652 the Netherlands' East India Company took possession of the shores of Table Bay, established a fort, and occupied the adjacent lands, in order to be always ready with supplies for their passing ships. In 1814 the Cape was formally ceded to the British Crown.

Natal derives its name from the fact of its discovery on Christmas Day, 1497, by the celebrated Portuguese navigator, Vasco da Gama. The first European settlement was formed (1824) by a small party of Englishmen, who came by sea and established themselves on the coast where Durban now stands. Natal was then a part of the great Zulu kingdom under T'Chaka. Between 1835 and 1837 another settlement was formed by a large body of Dutch Boers, who came with their waggons overland from the Cape Colony and settled in the northern districts, where to this day the Boers preponderate. In the year 1843 Natal was proclaimed as British and annexed to the Cape Colony. In 1856 it was erected into a separate colony, with representative institutions, and in 1893 acquired responsible government.

The Transvaal was formed as the South African Republic by parties of Dutch Boers from the English colonies who "trekked" into the interior of the continent and wrested the land across the Vaal river from the native chiefs. The discovery of the goldfields within its borders led to the settlement of large numbers of foreigners, and eventually to hostilities with the British Government. A war of nearly three years' duration was fought with great tenacity, and its close was marked by the inclusion of the South African Republic within the British Empire, "responsible government" being granted almost immediately.

The Orange Free State was founded, in much the same way as the Transvaal, by Boer emigrants from Cape Colony, and its independence was granted in 1854. Its subsequent history is identical with that of the Transvaal.

Delville Wood.—The title deeds of Delville Wood, containing the graves of South African troops who fell there during the battles on the Western Front in France during the Great War, are held by the Government of the Union of South Africa, and Delville Wood is part of South Africa.

GOVERNMENT.

The Union of South Africa is constituted under the South Africa Act, 1909 (9 Edw. VII., cap. 9), passed by the Parliament of the United Kingdom on September 20, 1909. In terms of that Act the self-governing Colonies of the Cape of Good Hope, Natal, the Transvaal, and the Orange River Colony became united on May 31, 1910, in a legislative Union under one Government under the name of the Union of South Africa, those Colonies becoming original Provinces of the Union under the names of the Cape of Good Hope, Natal, the Transvaal, and the Orange Free State respectively.

The Union Government is seized of all State property, and the Railways, Ports, Harbours, and Customs are administered by Union Commissioners for the benefit of a Consolidated Revenue Fund. The former debts of the Provinces are administered by and form a first charge upon the funds of the Union. Provision is made in the Act of 1909 for the admission to the Union of Rhodesia, and for the transfer to the Union Government of the administration of protected and other native territories. The Union was inaugurated by H.R.H. the Duke of Connaught, K.G., in 1910.

The Government publishes annually an "Official Year Book of the Union of South Africa," giving full statistics and descriptive information on all matters of public concern.

The seat of the Government is Pretoria; the seat of the Legislature is Cape Town.

The Executive is vested in a Governor-General appointed by the Sovereign, and aided by an Executive Council, with a Legislature of two Houses.

THE LEGISLATURE.

The Senate consists of 40 members. For ten years after the establishment of Union eight are nominated by the Governor-General in Council and 32 are elected, eight for each Province. The first election was made prior to the establishment of the Union by the two Houses of each of the Colonial Legislatures sitting as one body, and a vacancy will be filled by the choice of the Provincial Council in respect of whose Province a vacancy occurs.

The House of Assembly consists of 134 elected members, 32 of whom represent the Cape of Good Hope, 27 Natal, 49 Transvaal, and 17 the Orange Free State. Members of both Houses must be British subjects of European descent.

President of the Senate, Hon. H. C. van Heerden	£1,200

LOCAL GOVERNMENT.

A Provincial Council in each Province has power to legislate by ordinance on certain subjects specified in the Act, and on such other subjects as may be delegated to it. All ordinances passed by a Provincial Council are subjected to the veto of the Governor-General in Council. Members of the Provincial Council are elected on the same system as Members of Parliament, but the restriction as to European descent does not apply. Provincial administration is in the case of each Province vested in an Administrator, with an Executive Committee of four members. The Provincial Council in each case consists of the same number of elected members as there are electoral divisions of such Province for the House of Assembly, unless that number is less than 25 (as in the cases of Natal and the Orange Free State), when the number is 25. Each Council exists for a period of three years. Direct taxation is permitted for Provincial purposes, and legislation is authorised on certain specified subjects.

DEFENCE.

The South Africa Defence Act, 1922, became law on June 24, 1922. This Act provides for the establishment of Defence Forces comprising (1) a Permanent Force; (2) a Coast Garrison Force; (3) a Citizen Force; (4) a Royal Naval Volunteer Reserve; and (5) Special Reserves.

Every citizen between the ages of 17 and 60 is liable to render personal service in time of war, and those between 21 and 25 are liable to undergo a prescribed peace training with the Active Citizen Force spread over a period of four consecutive years. The Act states, however, that only 50 per cent. of the total number liable to peace training shall actually undergo that training unless Parliament makes financial provision for the training of a greater number. Citizens between the ages of 21 and 25 who are not entered for peace training with the Active Citizen Force are to be compelled to undergo training during these four years in a rifle association. Provision is also made in the Act for the cadet training of boys between 13 and 17 in urban and other populous areas where facilities can conveniently be arranged.

The Permanent Force—South African Mounted Riflemen—was established on the 1st April, 1923.

The Union has been divided into 15 Military Districts. To each Military District has been allotted various Units of different Arms, to which the citizens entered for Peace Training in their 20th and 21st years are posted. The first Training Camps began in September, 1923.

A Cadet organization is also in existence, and Rifle Associations have been formed.

EDUCATION.

In the South Africa Act, Section 85 (iii.), it is provided that "Education, other than higher education, for a period of five years and thereafter, until Parliament otherwise provides, shall be and remain under the jurisdiction of the respective Provincial Councils." For practical purposes it has been provisionally determined that all post-matriculation instruction shall be deemed to constitute higher education. The Department of Education, under the Minister, is therefore concerned with:—

(1) The University of South Africa, established April, 1922, as successor to the University of the Cape of Good Hope, with the following constituent Colleges—(a) Rhodes University College, Grahamstown (1904). (b) Huguens College, Wellington (1907). (c) Grey University College, Bloemfontein (1920). (d) Transvaal University College, Pretoria (1920). (e) Natal University College, Pietermaritzburg (1909). (2) The University of Cape Town (1922—in succession to the South African College—1829). (3) The University of Stellenbosch (1922—in succession to the Victoria College). (4) The University of the Witwatersrand (1922—in succession to University College, Johannesburg—1920). The Department is further charged with the Teachers' First Class Certificate examinations.

The total number of students at these Colleges in 1920 was 2,947. The State expenditure on higher education in 1920 was £120,271.

Provision made on the Vote of the Department of a grant-in-aid to the Potchefstroom University College (37 matriculated students in 1921) and to the South African Native College at Alice, Cape Province, an institution for the higher education of natives, which was formally opened in February, 1924, and has present accommodation for 48 students.

Primary Education and Education other than Higher Education.—The central direction of public education (other than higher education) is exercised by the Provincial Education Department in each of the four Provinces of the Union. Each Department is controlled by a Director or Superintendent of Education. In the Cape Province practically all the schools are State-aided. In Natal they are partly State-schools, and partly State-aided. In the Transvaal and Orange Free State they are in the main State-schools. In all Provinces primary education is free.

Number of Schools in the Union in 1919.—For white scholars, 4,752; for coloured scholars, 3,046; total, 7,798.

Number of Scholars and Teachers in 1919.—White scholars, 292,682; coloured scholars, 221,783; total, 514,465. Teachers, 18,689.

Expenditure from State Funds in 1919.—Cape, £1,679,688; Natal, £520,084; Transvaal, £1,655,297; Orange Free State, £675,375; total, £4,530,634.

In all Provinces Normal Colleges and other institutions for the training of teachers are maintained by the Education Departments.

PROVINCIAL FINANCE.

Prior to the passing of the Provincial Relations Act the four Provincial Administrations (Cape of Good Hope, Natal, Transvaal, and Orange Free State) received no revenues beyond the amount voted by Parliament by way of subsidies for the performance of the services and duties assigned to them. On the passing of the Act (April 1, 1913) certain revenues were transferred and assigned to the various provinces, and, in addition, subsidies were voted by Parliament equal to half the normal or recurrent expenditure. The Cape Province receives an additional amount equal to one-half the expenditure by local bodies; Natal and Orange Free State Provinces receive additional grants of £100,000 each; and Natal receives a special grant in lieu of trading and liquor licences payable to local authorities.

The ordinary Revenue and Expenditure for the five years ended March 31, 1920, were as follows:—

Manufactures.—The development of local industries has been most marked during the last three years, the scarcity of overseas supplies, with the consequent increase in prices, having served as a very effective measure of protection, under which enterprise has flourished to a degree previously unknown. New industries have sprung up in the principal centres of trade, and existing industries have largely extended their operations. From the recently published returns of manufactures in the Union, the total output during the year 1917-18 was £60,806,910 sterling; 1918-19, £70,934,098; and 1919-20, £92,913,844. Amongst the new industries which have been established during the period of the war may be mentioned the following:—Wattle extract; industrial alcohol (motor fuel) from molasses; calcium carbide; sulphate of ammonia; bottle-making; starch from maize; iron smelting (still in the initial stage); arsenic production; detinning of scrap tin; copper manufacture, &c. As indicating the production during 1919-20 of certain specified industries, the following figures may be of interest:—

Mines and Minerals.—Gold mining still continues the chief source of the country's wealth.

At the outbreak of war the diamond mines closed down. The value of the mineral output of the Union in 1920 was:—

Gold	£ 34,654,922	Lime	£ 247,134
Diamonds ..	14,762,899	Silver	245,871
Coal	4,519,665	Salt	197,068
Copper	418,269	Asbestos	114,195
Tin	435,680	Soda	—

The mineral production for the Union of South Africa was as follows:—

Gold.

1918	8,418,379 fine oz.	£ 35,759,003
1919	8,331,651 „	35,390,609
1920	8,158,455 „	34,654,922

The labour employed in the gold industry in December, 1920, Transvaal, was 21,569 whites and 168,390 coloured. Of these, 23,168 whites and 163,124 coloured were working in the Transvaal in January, 1919.

The labour employed in coal mining in December, 1920 was: Natal, 734 whites, 13,854 coloured; Transvaal, 1,084 whites, 17,231 coloured; Cape, 8 whites, 99 coloured; O.F.S., 177 whites, 2,621 coloured; a total of 2,003 whites and 33,805 coloured.

Silver.

There are no silver mines in the Union. The output, valued at £ 245,871, represents silver contained in gold bullion and base metal ores.

Copper.

(Tons of 2,000 lb.)

2,288 tons of matte and concentrates, valued at £ 163,122, were shipped from the Transvaal, and 7,892 tons of matte and ore, valued at £ 255,757, from the Cape. The figures for 1919 are 4,620 tons (£ 286,726) and 276 tons (£ 17,628) respectively.

Tin.

(Tons of 2,000 lb.)

2,452 tons of tin concentrates, valued at £ 433,366, were shipped from the Transvaal, and 11 tons, valued at £ 2,324, from the Cape. The Union figures for 1920 are 2,463 tons, valued at £ 435,680.

Other Minerals.

The value of the Union's production for 1920 of other base minerals, such as asbestos, graphite, magnesite, lead, &c., was £ 153,177, and of miscellaneous products, such as bricks, cement, pottery, &c., £ 1,558,340, compared with £ 95,072 and £ 1,076,364 respectively for 1919.

EXTERNAL TRADE.

The total value of the Imports and Exports in the six years 1915-1920 (exclusive of specie) was as follows:—

COMMUNICATIONS.

Railways.—The first railway in South Africa was commenced in April, 1859, the first sod being turned by the then Governor of the Cape of Good Hope, Sir George Grey. This was very ably followed by Natal, who started the construction of a line running from Durban. Another two lines finally linked up at Heidelberg in 1895. The Cape line was opened for public traffic to Stellenbosch in 1862 and to Wellington in 1863, while a track to Wynberg was opened to traffic in 1864. Little progress was however made in succeeding years, and it became evident that the development of the country could not be left to private enterprise. The existing Cape lines were therefore purchased by the Government on the Jan. 2nd, 1893, and in 1896 Natal followed by acquiring the railways in that colony. Increased working at once took place, and the construction of four lines was pushed inland from Cape Town, Durban, Port Elizabeth, and East London. Bloemfontein was reached in 1890, and two years later a line to Germiston linked up with the system already established in the Transvaal.

The total open mileage of Government-owned lines at the end of March, 1920, was 9,542 miles (comprising Cape 4,254, Orange Free State 1,342, Transvaal 2,650, and Natal 1,302), of which 8,561 miles are 3 ft. 6 in. gauge and 981 miles 2 ft. gauge. The capital expenditure on Government railways up to March 31, 1920, amounted to £96,408,435. The gross earnings for the year ending March 31, 1920, were £19,169,786 and the net loss, after payment of interest, £559,941. Working expenditure (excluding renewals) amounted to £13,651,856, or 71·2 per cent. of the gross revenue, as compared with £10,239,275, or 67 per cent. of the gross revenue for the previous year.

Posts and Telegraphs.—On March 31, 1920, there were in the Union 2,684 post and telegraph offices open. 340,069,444 letters and cards, 157,761,292 newspapers, books, and circulars, 9,607,676 parcels, 6,049,992 registered articles, 29,016,780 official letters and other articles, and 7,624,423 telegrams were received and despatched during the year ended March 31, 1920. The number of money orders issued during the year ending March 31, 1920, was 444,060, while 425,881 were paid; 3,347,766 postal orders were issued, and 3,002,920 paid. The revenue of the post and telegraph department was £2,369,627, and the expenditure £2,367,362; the revenue of the telegraph and telephone service being £908,872, and the expenditure £978,820; 12,842 miles of telegraph line, carrying 43,932 miles of wire, were open, and 7,603 miles of telegraph-telephone wire. The number of depositors in the Government Savings Bank on March 31, 1920, was 307,486, the amount to their credit being £7,079,789.

Shipping.—In 1920, 3,732 vessels (9,782,955 net tons) entered and 3,665 vessels (9,778,493 net tons) cleared at the ports of the Union of South Africa.

RAILWAYS AND HARBOURS BOARD.

The railways, ports, and harbours of the Union are administered and worked under the control and authority of the Governor-General in Council, exercised through a Minister of State, who is advised by a Board consisting of three Commissioners.

The management and working of the railways and harbours are subject to the control of the Minister of Railways and Harbours, carried on by the General Manager, who is governed by such regulations as the Minister may from time to time frame, after consultation with the Board. The constitution of the Board at date is as follows:—

Chairman, Hon. J. W. Jagger, Minister of Railways and Harbours.

Members, Hon. T. Orr, C.M.G., The Hon. J. F. B. Risak, Sir A. Stockenstrom, Bart.

Secretary, G. W. Pilkington.

Chief Officers.

Gen. Manager, Johannesburg, Sir W. W. Hoy, C.B.
Acting Asst. do. and Chief Rly. Storekeeper, Johannesburg, R. B. Gettiffe.

Acting Asst. do., Johannesburg, R. R. Perrott, D.S.O.

Asst. do., Bloemfontein, J. W. Carr, D.S.O.

Asst. do., Cape Town, H. Salmon.

Asst. do., Durban, J. R. Moss, M.L.C.E.

Chief Civil Engineer, Johannesburg, R. C. Wallace, A.M.I.C.E.

Chief Mechanical Engineer, Pretoria, D. A. Hendrie.

Chief Accountant, Johannesburg, G. A. Reid.

Chief Railway Storekeeper, Johannesburg, R. B. Gettcliffe.

Catering Manager, Johannesburg, A. H. Simmons.

South-West Africa.

Administered under Mandate as an integral part of the Union of South Africa.

SOUTH-WEST AFRICA lies between S. lat. 17° 35' and the Orange River. There is in addition a narrow strip lying between 18°-18° 30' S. lat. extending from 21° to 25° E. long. This is known as the Caprivi Zipfel, and gives access to the Zambesi river. The estimated area of the country is 322,440 square miles, and the population of the civilised portions amounts to 102,823, of whom 19,147* are Europeans. In these figures no account is taken of the Ovambo natives on the Northern border, nor of the Bushmen and other tribes in the outlying portions of the country, such as the Kaokoveld, Sandveld, and Kalahari. Running more or less parallel to the coast, and roughly at a distance of 60 to 100 miles from it, is a broken range of mountains, from which there is a gradual slope to the sea. The country between these mountains and the coast is barren desert except towards the North, and is known as the Namib. Towards the East from these mountains the land slopes eastward and forms the western edge of the great Kalahari Plateau. The Northern and Southern boundaries are the Okavango and Cunene, and the Orange Rivers, all perennial streams of considerable volume, and on the Orange are the Great Falls, twice the height of Niagara. All the other rivers in the country are dry except occasionally in the rainy season, but in most of them water can always be obtained at suitable places by sinking a shallow well. Of these the most important are the Kuiseb, Swakop, Omaruru, Ugab, and Hoarusib in the West, Great and Little Fish Rivers in the South, the Elephant, Black and White Nosob in the South-East, and in the North are broad sandy beds named by the natives Omurambas. The townships are dependent almost entirely for their water on wells or springs. At such places as Windhoek and Grootfontein in the latter give a strong supply. Along the Auhob River, in the Gibeon District, artesian water has been discovered in such quantity as to have converted what was formerly a dry river bed into a stream running for 70 miles before it disappears into the sand. Sink-hole lakes occur in the "Kart" region extending from Grootfontein to Outjo. The Etoscha Pan, which lies across Lat. 19 and its intersection with Long. 28, and is about 70 by 40 miles in extent, is a geographical feature of great interest. In the summer during the rainy season it sometimes becomes filled with water partly from the Cunene River, 200 miles away, which then overflows its banks. In the winter it is dry and is frequented by game of all kinds in large numbers. Except by means of pumping, the waters of the Orange River are not available for agricultural purposes so far as South-West Africa is concerned, as the stream flows in a deep valley with precipitous sides and can only be crossed at one or two places. In 1919, Professor E. H. L. Schwartz, F.G.S. (Professor of Geology at Rhodes University College, Grahamstown), propounded a scheme for making permanent use of the waters of the Cunene by building across it a small dam which would ensure that the Etoscha Pan was continuously filled. His scheme also embraced the Okavango, most of the waters of which at present drain away into the Zambesi, but which in former times ran into Lake Ngami and the Makalakari Lake, both situate in the Bechuanaland Protectorate. He advanced the theory that if these waters are turned to their original purpose the whole of South Africa will benefit by increased rainfall. Among the mountain features of the country, which is geologically of great interest, are the Chaukaib (3,500 ft.) near Luderitz, the Khomas Highlands (6,000) near Windhoek, the Onyati (7,198), 40 miles N.E. of Windhoek, the Aua (6,500), just south of Windhoek, the highest peak of which is the Moltebliek (8,148 ft.), the Omatako in the North (8,790 ft.), the Gansberg (7,662) in Great Namaqualand, the Krongo, the Waterberg, the Brandberg and many others, including the large extinct volcano near Berseba named Gubib. The climate is dry. Rain falls only in the shape of thunderstorms and in the later summer months. The actual rainfall varies from nothing at the coast to 4 inches in the southern portion of the interior and so in the northern. Very little agriculture can be undertaken, and except at one or two places such as on the Auhob river and in the Grootfontein neighbourhood, few cereals are grown. Apart from mining the staple industry of the country is stock raising, and it is remarkably well suited for this; in the South for small stock and in the centre and North for cattle. Horse breeding is also undertaken successfully. Except in the desert the veld is for the most part of the thorn-bush type so prevalent in many parts of North, East and South Africa. After the annual rains grass of good food value grows plentifully, and when ripe retains its nutritive qualities as hay for some three years, even though remaining in the soil. In the far North palms and some useful trees are to be found. Though somewhat hot in summer, in winter the climate is magnificent. At Swakopmund, owing to the influence of the Benguela current, the temperature varies but little throughout the year, and this town compares not unfavourably with any other watering place in South Africa. The principal source of revenue lies in the diamond fields of Luderitz. The existence of diamonds in this area was discovered on April 12th, 1908, by a Cape coloured boy who had formerly worked in the Kimberley mines, and they are now worked in considerable quantities. In 1920 the output was 664,423 carats, valued roughly at two and a half millions. About half of this goes to the Administration as revenue. Recently all the important German companies were bought out by the Consolidated Diamond Mines, Limited, a company with its headquarters in Capetown, and in which various Johannesburg, British and American financiers are interested. The deposits lie on or near the surface, and working is easy, save for the absence of water and fuel. Electricity is furnished from a central station at Luderitz. An electric railway has been built to serve the fields and runs as far as Bogenfels, 70 miles to the South. Copper mining is also carried on to a considerable extent, the principal mine being at Tsumeb in the North, and producing about 5,000 long tons a month. Game abounds throughout the whole country. Guinea-fowl are to be found practically everywhere, and there are many other game birds, and every variety of small buck and also kudu and gemsbok exist throughout the land, while in certain places hartebeest, wildebeest and eland run in considerable numbers. The species of lesser bustard known as Ruppell's korhaan is believed only to be found in this territory. In the less frequented parts of the northern portion of the country elephant, rhinoceros and giraffes exist, and on the Cuene and Okavango many varieties of game are met with.

The native races are:—In the South, Hottentots. In the centre, Hereros and Bergdamaaras, with the exception of the Rehoboth district which is occupied by a mixed race known as the Bastards; and in the North, Ovambos. To the North and East there are many small bushmen tribes, some pure bushmen, but the remainder a mixture of aboriginal native tribes and bushmen. The Kaokoveld (the North-Western area) is very scantily inhabited by Hottentots and Ovayimbas, and contains no white inhabitants with the exception of a few trek Boers from the Boer Settlement in Angola. It is very mountainous, and in many places well supplied with water.

The Administration of the country is vested in the Government of the Union of South Africa by mandate, and is actually exercised by the Governor-General, who has, however, delegated most of his powers to an Administrator appointed by the Union Government. The seat of the Administration is Windhuk, which lies practically in the centre of the country and is 5,390 ft. above sea level. The Territory is divided into 17 Districts ruled over by Magistrates as the representatives of the Government. The Territory of Walvis Bay, which is actually part of the Cape Province of the Union, is administered so far as possible as a portion of South-West Africa, and its magnificent harbour will undoubtedly in the future prove of great benefit. The only other harbour which can be made use of is at Luderitz. A regular service of steamers from Capetown to these two ports has now been in existence for some time, as also a monthly service direct from Rotterdam of passenger and cargo boats. The system of administration is at present somewhat autocratic in form, though subject to control from the Union and indirectly by the Union Parliament. There is no Parliamentary representation in the country, but an Advisory Council has been appointed to assist the Administrator in his task of governing the country. It consists of six members, representatives of all classes and interests in the country, and one is specially appointed on behalf of the natives. Among other industries than those already referred to are the export of fish, seal-skins, guano, horns, hides, wool, ostrich feathers, marble, lead and other ores. A brisk trade with the Union has sprung up in slaughter cattle, and a scheme for the establishment of Cold Storage with a view to creating an export trade with Europe in meat is under consideration. The country is sparsely inhabited by Europeans, and large tracts of Crown land are available on easy terms for settlement by persons of moderate capital as farmers.

The railway system in South-West Africa, now controlled and worked by the South African Railways and Harbours Administration, and connected with Union Lines (De Aar to Nakop Protectorate border 344 miles), comprises:—

3 feet 6 inches Standard Gauge (668 miles).	Miles.
Main Line, Nakop (Union border) to Karibib	657
" Karibib to Swakopmund	114
Branch Line, Seeheim to Luderitzbucht	197
From Swakopmund the line extends to Walvis Bay (20 miles), a Union port now serving the Northern portion of the Protectorate.

2 feet Narrow Gauge (317 miles).	Miles.
Main Line, Karibib to Tsumeb	250
Branch Line, Otavi to Grootfontein	57
" Kranzburg to Onguat	10
The Rehoboth Line (Rehoboth Station to Rehoboth, 8 miles), is now being worked by horse-trolley; the Outjo Line (22 miles from Otjiwarongo (incomplete) and the Kalkfeld Iron Line are not in use.
The line Rossing to Karibib, via Jakalswater, has been uplifted.

Privately owned lines (99 miles).	Miles.
Kolmanaskop—Bogenfels	74
Arandis—Khan Mine	7
Karibib, Marble Co.	8
Otavi Mining Co.	10

The Capital of the Protectorate is Windhuk (white population, 1917, 2,050), other inland towns being Karibib, Otyimbingue, Tsumeb, Okahandja, Omaruru, Grootfontein, Usakos, Warmbad, Keetmanshoop (white population, 1917, 900), Gibeon and Bethany. The ports are Swakopmund (white population, 1917, 650), Luderitz Bay (white population, 1917, 750) and Sandwich Harbour.

Religion.—In 1911 there were 1,437,688 Christians—479,805 Dutch Churches, 282,619 Anglican Communion (including Church of England, Church of Province of South Africa, Church of Ireland, Episcopal Church of Scotland and Episcopalian), 74,005 Presbyterians, 127,278 Independents or Congregationalists, 285,283 Wesleyans, 19,161 other Methodists, 21,506 Lutherans, 21,167 Moravians, 22,953 Rhenish Mission, 12,224 other Lutherans, 13,704 Baptists, 25,934 Roman Catholics, 21,919 other Christians; Muhammadans 24,129, Jews 16,744; "of no religion" 1,077,998, of whom 1,047,233 were natives.

Education.—The Province is divided into 128 school districts, each under the control of a School Board, two-thirds of the members being locally elected, and one-third nominated partly by Government and partly by Municipal or Divisional Councils. Education is compulsory for children of European extraction. The necessary grants are provided from Provincial Council revenues, primary education being free.

Aided Schools, Dec. 31, 1920, 4,420; enrolment 282,483, attendance 222,372. There are 228,061 European pupils and 154,422 non-European pupils. There are 22,878 teachers. Government expenditure on education, exclusive of Higher Education (for which see Union of S.A.), for 1912-14, £253,448; 1914-15, £219,405; 1915-16, £217,856; 1916-17, £276,894; 1917-18, £1,106,039; 1918-19, £1,435,325; 1919-20, £1,676,208; 1920-21, 2,000,000.

Charitable Institutions, Hospitals, Pauperism.—In the hospitals 21,330 in-patients were treated during 1920, and there were 209,045 out-patient attendances at Government-Aided Hospitals. At Government Chronic Slock Hospitals, 1,136 persons received indoor relief during the year 1920.

Harbours and Works.—There are magnificent harbours at Table Bay (Cape Town), Port Elizabeth, East London, and Mossel Bay. There are electric tramways in Cape Town, Port Elizabeth, East London, and Kimberley.

Administration.—The Province is administered by an Administrator, appointed for five years by the Governor-General, aided by a Provincial Council of 51 members (elected for three years). There is an Executive Committee of four members in addition to the Administrator, who is Chairman of the Committee.

Local Government.—There are 129 municipalities, each governed by a Mayor or Chairman and Councillors, a certain number of whom are elected annually by the ratepayers. There are 71 Village Management Boards.

Census, 1918 (whites only) 121,931 (62,745 males, 59,186 females).

In 1920 the European births registered numbered 3,256, the deaths 1,446, and the marriages 1,354. The race question in Natal is complicated by the presence of large numbers of Indian subjects of the Crown, brought over during the latter half of the nineteenth century to supply the deficiency of local labour.

Education.—A University College has been founded at Pietermaritzburg, and there are 4 Government high schools, a preparatory school, 179 primary schools for white children, 1 art school, 1 agricultural and trades school. There are also 2 Technical Institutes, 49 Asiatic schools, 472 native schools, and 12 coloured schools, which receive Government aid, and a large number of private schools.

Administration.—The government is administered by an Administrator, aided by a Provincial Council of 25 members (elected for 3 years). There is an Executive Committee of 4 members.

Administrator, Hon. G. T. Plowman, C.M.G.

Executive Committee, F. C. Hollander, J. Dyson, J. McAuslin, J. P. Whyte.

Provincial Secretary, John M. Hershensohn.

PIETERMARITZBURG, the capital and seat of the Provincial Government, is situated about 54 miles inland from Port Natal. Total population (white and coloured), 35,077 in 1921.

In Durban (population, 1921, 140,324), or Port Natal, is the only harbour of any importance on the south-east coast. The entrance is now safe and navigable for any vessel at any time; the average low-water depth at the entrance, the bar being no longer existent, for 1908 being 33 ft. 7 in.

Natal, 6,800 miles; transit, 20 days.

ZULULAND.

Zululand, annexed in 1897, comprises about two-thirds of the country formerly under Zulu kings, and is bounded on the south and south-west by the Tugela River; on the south-east by the Indian Ocean; on the north by the Portuguese possessions; and on the west by the new territory (formerly Utrecht and Vrijheid districts of the Transvaal) and Swaziland. The Amantutaland Protectorate, created by proclamation of Nov. 22, 1897, was annexed to Zululand on Dec. 27, 1897, and now forms part of the Province. The Northern Districts territory (consisting of the Magisterial Divisions of Vrijheid, Utrecht, Paulpietersburg, and Babanango) was annexed to Natal on January 27, 1903.

THE TRANSVAAL.

The Province of the Transvaal has a total area of 120,426 square miles, about 20,000 square miles lying within the tropics. The Census of 1921 showed a population of 2,085,837, of whom 1,158,366 were males and 927,531 females; the population comprised 544,486 Europeans or whites, 1,495,689 natives, and 44,666 other coloured races. In 1920 there were 21,143 births (16,768 European), 16,043 deaths (6,040 European), and 8,396 marriages (5,432 European).

Religion.—The religious statistics for 1921 are:—

Churches.	Whites.	Others.
Dutch Churches	204,058	24,634
Anglican	89,805	51,385
Presbyterian	24,739	6,670
Methodists	27,938	28,969
Roman Catholics	22,312	6,439

Other Christians	13,801	24,253
Jews	25,822	...
Hindus, &c.	89	13,672
No Religion	2,460	943,616

Education.—There were 1,029 schools for white children in 1919, with a total enrolment of 200,734 and an average attendance of 90,121, and 3 normal colleges. There were also 389 native schools, 2 Asiatic school, and 22 coloured schools, with 39,583 pupils.

Administration.—The government is administered by an Administrator, aided by a Provincial Council of 36 members (elected for 3 years). There is an Executive Committee of 4 members.

Administrator, Hon. A. G. Robertson.

Executive Committee, B. D. G. Plenaar, G. H. Kretzschmar, Dr. H. Reitz, T. C. Stoffberg.

Provincial Secretary, D. E. van Velden.

The Capital is PRETORIA, pop. 1921, 73,770 (white 45,163, coloured 28,607). Pretoria, which is also the seat of the Union Government, is pleasantly situated on the River Apies, and has wide, shady streets and magnificent buildings. The principal town is JOHANNESBURG, 5,500 feet above sea level, about 35 miles S.W. of the capital. Johannesburg is the centre of the Witwatersrand goldfields, and possesses magnificent buildings. Among its other industries are printing, brickmaking, brewing, tobacco manufactures and iron foundries. The population in 1921 was 224,191 (white 149,678, coloured 134,513).

Pretoria is distant from London 7,200 miles; transit, via Capetown, 19 days.

ORANGE FREE STATE.

The Province of the Orange Free State has a total area of 50,389 square miles, and is divided into 24 districts. The population at the last five censuses was:—

Year	White.	Coloured.	Total.
1890	77,716	129,787	207,503
1904	142,679	244,636	387,315
1911	175,189	352,982	528,174
1918	181,678
1921	189,142	439,218	628,360

In 1921, of the whites, 94,488 were males and 80,701 females; and of the coloured races, 183,030 were males and 169,955 females.

Religion.—In 1921 the adherents of the Dutch Reformed Church numbered 175,321; Wesleyans, 88,257; Anglicans, 42,401; Presbyterians, 7,549; Congregationalists, 8,368; Lutherans, 8,727; Roman Catholics, 5,696; Jews, 2,808; and "No Religion," 173,336 (173,192 natives).

Education.—Higher education is under the control of the Union Ministry. In 1920 there were 863 public and aided private schools, with an enrolment of 42,879 pupils, and, except when the parents object, both official languages are taught.

Administration.—The government is administered by an Administrator, aided by a Provincial Council of 25 members (elected for 3 years). There is an Executive Committee of 4 members.

Administrator, Hon. Sir Cornelis Hermanus Weasels.

Executive Committee, D. J. de Villiers, E. A. V. de Walt, F. D. du Toit, D. J. Malan.

Provincial Secretary, A. M. N. de Villiers.

BLOEMFONTEIN, the Capital and seat of the Provincial Government, had a population of 36,337 (17,663 whites, 18,674 coloured) in 1921. A new sewerage system and an additional water supply are in successful operation. Six new bridges of masonry, 85 ft. span, have been built over the Bloem Spruit, which has been straightened to avoid a repetition of the serious flood of Jan., 1904.

Bloemfontein is distant from London 6,720 miles; transit, via Capetown, 19 days.

The number of births registered in 1920 were 4,995, deaths 2,796, marriages 1,222 (white persons). The registration laws affecting births and deaths apply to white persons only.

Races and Religions.

Native Population.—There are three distinct elements in the native population of Egypt. The largest, or "Egyptian" element, is a Hamito-Semite race, known in the rural districts as Fellâhîn (fellâh = ploughman, or tiller of the soil). The fellâhîn have been mainly Muhammadans since the conquest of the country in the 7th century, but 834,474 Coptic Christians are enumerated in the towns and villages. These Egyptian townsmen and peasantry numbered 12,404,897 in the total of the Census of 1917. A second element is the Bedouin, or nomadic Arabs of the Libyan and Arabian deserts (32,663 Bedouins and 107,360 Sudanese and Bertarin), of whom about one-seventh are real nomads, and the remainder semi-sedentary tent-dwellers on the outskirts of the cultivated land of the Nile Valley and the Fayûm. The third element is the Nubian of the Nile Valley, between Aswân and Wadi Halfa, of mixed Arab and negro blood. The Bedouins and Nubians are Muhammadans.

Foreign Population.—At the Census of 1917 the foreign residents were 205,998, of whom 30,796 were Turks, 56,735 Greeks, 40,198 Italians, 24,356 British, 21,270 French and Tunisians, 2,789 Austro-Hungarians, 4,225 Russians, 157 Germans, 23,976 other Europeans, and 1,496 Persians.

Religions.—At the Census of 1917 there were 11,623,743 Muhammadans, 1,026,115 Christians, 59,581 Jews and 2,814 other religions.

PHYSIOGRAPHY.

Boundaries.—Egypt occupies the north-eastern corner of the African continent, between 22° and 32° N. lat. and 24° – 37° E. long. The northern boundary is the Mediterranean, and in the south Egypt is continuous with the Anglo-Egyptian Sudan. The western boundary runs from a point on the coast, N. of Sollüm (long. 25° E.), inland in a south-westerly direction for some distance and then turns S. along a meridian line approximately in long. 24° E. until it meets the parallel of 22° N. lat., which forms the N. boundary of the Anglo-Egyptian Sudan. The E. boundary follows a line drawn from Rafa on the Mediterranean ($34^{\circ} 15'$ E. long.) to the head of the Gulf of Aquaba, from which point the remainder of the E. boundary is washed by the waters of the Gulf of Aquaba and the Red Sea.

Coast.—The Mediterranean coast of Egypt is flat and sandy, except to the westward of A'lexandria, where low rocky cliffs in places approach the sea. Along the Red Sea coast a sloping sandy and gravelly plain mostly intervenes between the mountains and the sea, but the mountains rise generally to great heights at only a short distance inland, while in certain places, notably in the Gulfs of Suez and Aquaba, they approach so closely to the sea that their feet are washed by its waters. Coral reefs are conspicuous almost everywhere along the Red Sea coast, and there are numerous outlying shoals. Apart from the three great seaports of Alexandria, Port Said, and Suez, Egypt has but few harbours and anchorages adapted for large craft; the principal are those of Sollum and Matruh on the Mediterranean, Tor, Abu Zenima, Zeitia, Jemsa and Hurghada in the Gulf of Suez, and Safage, Qosseir and Halaib on the Red Sea.

The Nile Valley.—The principal feature of Egypt is the Nile Valley, where the river runs through cliffs, and which, with the exception of a stretch of granite in the neighbourhood of Aswan, are chiefly of sandstone from Wadi Halfa to near Esna, while further north from Luxor to Cairo limestone predominates. The valley varies in width from less than half a mile in the southern granitic region to over 10 miles in the northern limestone region, and the cliffs in some places rise to heights of over a thousand feet above the river. The fertile lands, on which the prosperity of the country depends, occupy the floor of the valley between the river and the bounding cliffs, while to the north of Cairo they spread out into the irregular fan-shaped formation of the Delta which comprises the six provinces of Lower Egypt, with the richest soil in the country. The Nile has a total length of 3,470 miles from the Victoria Nyanza to its mouths. In the 960 miles of its course through Egypt it receives not a single tributary stream. The river has a regular yearly rise and fall, attaining its maximum level about the middle of September and its minimum about the end of May. At Cairo the average rise and fall is about 13 feet. The water of the Nile is carried in artificial canals for the purpose of irrigation, only the surplus being allowed to flow into the sea. The great dam at Aswan serves to impound some of the waters of the river in the early and more rapid part of its falling stage, so that they may be released during the summer to mitigate the deficiency which would otherwise occur at the lowest stages. Smaller barrages have been built at Esna, Assiut, Zifta, and at the head of Delta to control the supply of water into the great canals. West of the river, about 60 miles south of Cairo, is the fertile province of Fayum, with an area of about 500 square miles. This province, which is separated from the river by a narrow strip of desert, is watered by a great canal over 100 miles long called the Bahr Yusef, which takes its water from the river at Deirut.

The Libyan Desert.—Westward from the Nile Valley into Tripoli stretches the vast limestone plateau of the Libyan Desert. Though as a whole it constitutes one of the most arid and inhospitable regions of the world, the Libyan Desert contains a number of depressions wherein wells and springs furnish water in sufficient quantity to irrigate small areas and to support populations of several thousands. These depressions are the Oases, of which the principal from S.E. to N.W. are known as Kharga, Dakhla, Farafra, Baharia, and Siwa. On the eastern edge of the Libyan Desert, a few miles south-west of Cairo, stand the Pyramids of Giza, of which the highest, the Great Pyramid, is 451 feet high. Close to the pyramids is the Great Sphinx, 189 feet long.

The Eastern Desert of Egypt.—The country between the Nile and the Red Sea, known as the Eastern or Arabian Desert of Egypt, though likewise on the whole a very waterless region, presents a marked contrast to the Libyan Desert. Instead of being a vast monotonous plateau like the country on the other side of the river, the Eastern Desert presents a great diversity of physiographical features, the most marked one being the great back-bone of high and rugged mountains, mostly of igneous and metamorphic rocks, which extends north-westward from Abyssinia to near Suez, and reappears as a detached mass in the Peninsula of Sinai. The principal peaks of the Egyptian portion of this mountain chain are (from N. to S.) Gebels (Mounts) Gharib 5,760 feet, Abu Dokhan 5,450 feet, Sheyib 7,150 feet, Hamata 6,490 feet, Faraid 4,480 feet, Gerf 4,650 feet, Shendib 6,271 feet, and Elba 4,680 feet. Flanking the mountain chain on the west, between the axis of the range and the Nile are plateaux of sandstones and limestones, dissected by wadis (dry water-courses), often of great length and depth, with some wild vegetation and occasional wells and springs. The mountain-axis being much nearer to the Red Sea than to the Nile, the slopes of the eastern side are as a rule much steeper than those facing westwards, and the sedimentary flanking-plateaux are absent for long distances along the Red Sea coast. Wells and springs are more frequent in the south parts of the Eastern Desert than in the north, owing to the southern tracts approaching more closely to the tropical rain-zone. The roads through the Eastern Desert follow as a rule the course of the main wadis from well to well, and here and there are to be found small encampments of the wandering Arabs who form the scanty population of the region. The breeding of fast-trotting camels is carried on chiefly by the Bisharin tribes who inherit the south parts of the Eastern Desert, especially in the neighbourhood of Gebels, Gerf and Elba. The Eastern Desert is the source of most of the limited mineral wealth of Egypt; petroleum is worked at Jemsa and Hurgada, on the coast of the Gulf of Suez, and phosphates are mined on a considerable scale in the neighbourhood of Safaga and Qosseir, while at a few spots gold and emeralds have been extracted, though as a rule with very little commercial success. Peridot is mined at St. John's or Zeberged Island (in the Red Sea, lat. 23° 36' N.).

The Sinai Peninsula.—The north (Mediterranean) coast of Sinai is flat and sandy like that of Egypt. Inland, the ground gradually rises into a highly dissected limestone plateau, which extends southward for about 150 miles and terminates in the great scarp of El Tih; in some parts this scarp rises to over 5,000 feet above the sea-level. South of El Tih the character of the country abruptly changes, the southern third of the peninsula being formed of rugged granitic mountains, intersected by deep ravines. The highest peaks of these mountains, such as Gebels (Mounts) Katherina, 8,680 feet, Um Shomer, 8,530 feet, Eth Thebt, 8,030 feet, are higher than any of those in Egypt proper. Springs and wells occur in fair abundance, mostly in the wadis, and running water (mostly brackish) is found at a few points. The mineral wealth of Sinai is not great, but manganese-ore is mined on a considerable scale in the mountains east of Abu Zenima, and oil has been struck in borings on the Sinai side of the Gulf of Suez, though not as yet in payable quantities.

GOVERNMENT.

From B.C. 30 to A.D. 639 Egypt was a province of the Roman Empire, but in A.D. 640 the Christian inhabitants were subjugated by Moslem invaders, and Egypt became a province of the Eastern Caliphate. In 1517 the country was incorporated in the Ottoman Empire, and was governed by pashas sent from Constantinople until the beginning of the eighteenth century, when for about 100 years the ruler was chosen from among the Mamelukes, or bodyguard. From 1802-1804 French troops occupied the country, with the ostensible object of suppressing the Mamelukes and restoring the authority of the Sultan, and after their evacuation of the country, Mohammed Ali, who was appointed governor in 1805, exterminated the Mamelukes in 1811, and was eventually made hereditary governor of Egypt and the Sudan by a firman from the Sultan of Feb. 13, 1841. Mohammed Ali was succeeded before his death by his son Ibrahim (1848), whose nephew Abbás I. ruled from 1848-1854. During the reign of Said (1854-1863), a son of Mohammed Ali, the concession for the Suez Canal was obtained, and his successor Ismail (1863-1879), a son of Ibrahim, was granted (by firman of May 14, 1867) the title of KHEDIVE, the previous rulers having held the title of Vali, or Governor. In the early years of Ismail's reign the Egyptian dominions were very largely extended, until in 1875 its territories comprised an area of nearly 1,500,000 sq. miles, with a population of about 16,000,000. The wild extravagance of Ismail drove him to raise enormous loans in Europe, which plunged the country into such financial embarrassment that the Governments of France and Great Britain intervened and forced Ismail to abdicate, appointing his son Tewfik (1879-1892) to succeed him.

Dual Control.—By a Khedivial decree of November 10, 1879, two Comptrollers-General were appointed for the reorganisation of the administration and re-establishment of financial equilibrium, Major Evelyn Baring being the British and M. de Blignières the French representatives. The Dual Control governed Egypt for two years, and a series of reforms was initiated, but further progress was interrupted by a military revolt, headed by an officer of the Egyptian Army (Ahmed Arâbi Pasha). The revolt assumed alarming proportions, but the French Government declined to intervene, and a British expedition was despatched to re-establish the authority of the Khedive.

British Occupation.—The Dual Control was abolished by a decree of the Khedive (January 18, 1883), and a British financial adviser was appointed in place of the Comptroller-General. In January, 1884, Sir Evelyn Baring (who had previously served as Comptroller-General) was appointed Consul-General for the United Kingdom, and the British expeditionary force, sent to quell the rebellion of 1882, remained in the country as an army of occupation. Meanwhile a revolt had broken out in the southern provinces, headed by Sheikh Mohammed Ahmed, of Dongola, who proclaimed himself a Mahdi of Islam. This revolt led to the temporary abandonment of the territory now known as the Anglo-Egyptian Sudan. In 1892 Tewfik was succeeded by his elder son Abbās II., who was deposed in 1914. Sir Evelyn Baring (created Earl of Cromer) resigned the post of British Agent and Consul-General in 1907, and was succeeded by Sir Eldon Gorst, upon whose death (1911) the post was filled by the appointment of Viscount Kitchener.

British Protectorate.—In 1914 Egypt was a semi-independent tributary State of the Ottoman Empire, occupied by British troops. At the outbreak of the Great War the Khedive, Abbās II., who was absent from the country, declared himself an adherent of the Central Powers and was deposed, Hussein Kamil Pasha being appointed in his stead. On November 18, 1914, a British Protectorate was declared over Egypt, which was therefore taken from the suzerainty of the Sultan of Turkey, and the Khedive assumed the title of Sultan. Sultan Hussein Kamil died October 9, 1917, and was succeeded by his brother, the present Sultan. In December, 1919, a Commission (under the Presidency of Lord Milner) conducted an investigation into the affairs of Egypt, with a view to reporting on the introduction of fuller measures of self-government and of reforms in the judicial system. The recommendations of this Commission were the subject of negotiations in London during the summer and autumn of 1921, but the result of the negotiations had not been published at the date of going to press (Nov. 1921).

THE LEGISLATURE.

By the Organic Law of 1883 were created (1) a Legislative Council of 30 members, and (2) a General Assembly consisting of the Legislative Council, the Ministers of State, and 45 members elected by the people. These bodies were mainly consultative (except in respect of the imposition of new direct, personal, or land, taxes, on which questions the General Assembly's vote was decisive), the legislative power resting with the Khedive and his Ministers. By a Law of July, 1899, these two bodies were merged into one called the Legislative Assembly, consisting of (a) the Ministers as ex-officio members, (b) 66 elected members, and (c) 17 members nominated by the Government, 15 of these to represent certain minorities. The elected members are chosen in each district by the electors-delegate, each of whom represents 50 electors on the principle of mandate and recall. Their term of office is for 6 years, but a third of both nominated and elected members retire biennially. The Assembly can initiate legislation and must be consulted on laws initiated by the Government, as also on public loans and important modifications of the railway and irrigation systems. The Government is not bound by the resolutions of the Assembly, although the legislative procedure laid down ensures that the Government shall act in full knowledge of the views of the Assembly. The Assembly has a right of veto only on questions of new direct, personal or land taxation.

THE JUDICATURE.

Justice is administered under four distinct systems, all except the Consular Courts being supervised by the Ministry of Justice, to which a British judicial adviser is attached. The systems are (1) Mekkamas, or Courts of the Qaddis, who are chosen from the students of Azhar University and administer Muhammadan Law following the Hanafite Rite. (2) Native Tribunals, containing Egyptian and foreign judges, and dealing with criminal charges against natives, and with civil cases in which both plaintiff and defendant are local subjects. (3) Mixed Tribunals, founded in 1876 to deal principally with civil actions between foreigners of different nationality and between foreigners and natives. (4) Consular Courts (of the 15 powers possessing rights to them by treaty) with criminal jurisdiction over foreigners, and judging civil cases between foreigners of the same nationality.

LOCAL GOVERNMENT.

The chief towns constitute governorships (muhafzas), and the remainder of the occupied country is divided into provinces (mudirias), which are subdivided into districts (markaz), each under a mamur, who controls the head man (omda) of each village in his district. By the law of 1883 provincial councils were instituted, consisting of two representatives from each markaz, under the presidency of the mudr (or governor) of the province. These councils were reorganized in 1910 and were made the elementary education authority for the province, with certain restricted powers of local government.

DEFENCE.

The British Forces in Egypt and Palestine since the outbreak of the Great War have undergone many changes, and until the situation in the East has been cleared up its ultimate strength cannot be determined. The Commander-in-Chief in Egypt is Field-Marshal Viscount Allenby, G.C.B., G.C.M.G. (the High Commissioner); the G.O.C., Egyptian Exp. Force, is Lieut.-Gen. Sir W. N. Congreve, V.C., K.C.B., M.V.O.

Service in the Egyptian Army is nominally compulsory on all Egyptian subjects between the ages of 19 and 27, the recruits required each year being chosen by ballot; but certain classes (professors, students, Government employees, &c.) are exempt, and exemption may also be purchased for £250, if paid before the ballot. Natives of the Sudan are enlisted voluntarily for service in the Egyptian Army. The Sirdar is appointed by the Sultan with the consent of the British Government.

Sirdar of the Egyptian Army, Major-Gen. Sir L. O. F. Stack, K.B.E., C.M.G.
Chief Staff Officer and Adjutant-General, Col. L. K. Smith, D.S.O.

There is no Navy in the proper sense of the term; there are 3 small cruisers belonging to the Coast Guard and Fisheries service, and 4 vessels under the Ministry of Communications, while the different Government Departments possess steamers on the Nile for inspection purposes.

The Egyptian Police (under the Ministry of the Interior) consists of City and Provincial Police, the former comprising 262 officers, 396 constables, and 5,103 men (443 Europeans), the latter 322 officers and 5,261 men. There are also 34,422 ghafirs, or native night-watchmen.

EDUCATION.

Education on native lines has long been given in elementary vernacular schools; some of these are under native management, and the rest are partly under the direct control of the Ministry of Education and partly under its inspection for grants-in-aid. The native system of education is completed by the more promising pupils at the Ashar University in Cairo, the principal University of the Moslem world. In 1920 there were 134 Elementary Schools (Maktabe) under Government supervision, with about 18,300 pupils, and about 3,290 Maktabe under inspection for grants-in-aid with 222,386 pupils; there were also 42,864 pupils in other elementary schools. The government primary schools give a 4-years' course and prepare for admission to secondary, agricultural and other special schools. There were also 7 government Secondary Schools with 2,505 pupils and 34 Secondary Schools under inspection for grants-in-aid with 4,528 pupils; other Secondary Schools (about 30) had 1,645 pupils in 1920. There are Colleges of Medicine, Law, Education, Engineering, Commerce, Veterinary Science and Agriculture at Cairo. Much assistance is given to education by private enterprise and benevolence and foreign schools abound. A National University, under entirely Egyptian management, was founded in 1908 at Cairo. Proposals are under consideration for the establishment of a State University and for the generalising of education among the masses of the people.

THE EGYPTIAN DEBT.

The reckless financial administration under Isma'il, 1863-1879, led to the bankruptcy of the country in 1876 and to a Franco-British investigation and settlement of the national finances. For the protection of the bondholders there was instituted a Caisse de la Dette, a body representing the creditors of the Egyptian Treasury with considerable powers and special privileges. The Caisse, appointed during an era of bankruptcy, succeeded in protecting the interests of the bondholders, but as Egypt became solvent and prosperous, its stringent regulations prevented the development of the country out of surplus revenue, a large part of which was held in suspense as contingent security for the service of the debt. By an agreement of April 8, 1904, between Great Britain and France, subsequently ratified by all the Powers, the restrictions which hampered the liberty of the Egyptian Government in financial matters were abolished. Though the Caisse de la Dette still exists, its duties are now limited to receiving the revenues necessary for the interest and for the payment of the coupons as they become due, while it also holds a considerable reserve fund, the interest on which reduces the amount of the Treasury contribution. The Egyptian debt was stated as follows (in £ sterling) on April 1, 1919 and 1920:—

Debt	1919.	1920.
Guaranteed Debt, 3 per cent.	£ 6,288,900	£ 6,098,400
Privileged Debt, 3½ per cent.	31,127,780	31,127,780
Unfunded Debt, 4 per cent.	55,971,960	55,971,960
Total	93,388,640	93,198,140

PRODUCTION AND INDUSTRY.

Irrigation.—The total area of Egypt is estimated at approximately 222,100,000 English acres, of which about 8,450,000 acres are formed of the alluvium brought down by the Nile from the Abyssinian hills, the remainder being chiefly limestone desert. Only the former are cultivable, and only that portion of them which can be irrigated from the waters of the Nile—this portion amounts at present to 5,400,000 acres (1919), and is capable of extension (to 7,600,000 acres) by the improvement of water storage facilities and means of distribution. King Mena (B.C. 4000, approximately) is said to have been the founder of the first scientific system of using the Nile water for irrigation purposes; he employed what is known as the basta system, which is still used for the irrigation of all the land lying to the south of Deirüt in Upper Egypt. By this system the land is divided into rectangular areas varying in size from 5,000 to 50,000 acres and surrounded by banks; water is admitted to these basins during the flood season (August) to an average depth of 3 feet, and is left on the land for about 40 days; it is then run off and the seed is sown broadcast on the uncovered land. Since the British occupation the basin systems have been improved and provided with numbers of important masonry works; they have also been insured against an insufficient flood by the construction of barrages at Eena and Assiût, of which the former was built during 1908-09, and the latter in 1908-1909; they are situated in lat. 25° 28' N. and 27° 22' N. respectively.

About 1880 Mohammed 'Alî Paasha introduced the system of perennial irrigation by digging deep canals in which the water could flow all the year round, by which means it was possible to grow two (or more) crops in one year, and to introduce the cultivation of cotton on a large scale. During his reign the barrages across the Delta were begun, under the direction of Mougel Bey, in 1843 and 1847 respectively, but by 1863 they were found to be unworkable. Since the British occupation they have been restored and greatly improved (1886-91), and a vast storage dam has been constructed at Aswân (lat. 24° 2' N.) at a cost of £Ea. 740,000, which was opened on December 10, 1902; its height has since been raised so as to increase the capacity of the reservoir thus formed to a total of 85,460,000,000 cubic feet. A barrage has also been built at Zifta in Lower Egypt.

By these works, and by the construction of a vast network of canals with controlling masonry works, a small part of the excess waters of the river have been stored and distributed at all seasons of the year, and perennial irrigation has been extended throughout Middle and Lower Egypt. The increase in the value of the land has been enormous, and some 2 million acres have been added to the cultivable land of Egypt.

Agriculture and Live Stock.—Although nearly the whole population is directly or indirectly connected with agriculture, the total given in the census return of 1917, under the headings of proprietors, tenants and labourers, &c., amounts to 4,012,000 persons employed, representing only 30·5 per cent. of the population. The land is held as to 4,773,050 faddans by 1,666,803 native owners, and as to 5,486,155 faddans by 8,242 Europeans. Of the native landholders 1,044,371 owned up to 1 faddan, 476,920 up to 5 faddans, and 141,538 from 5 to 50 faddans (1 faddan = 1·038 acres).

The agricultural land is of two kinds. The first is that which is under the basin irrigation system, by which the land receives one watering only. This watering consists of a flooding at high Nile: as the flood decreases, the seeds of the various crops are sown, and the basin fields are left without further watering. Harvests of wheat, barley, beans, clover, vetches and lentils are gathered in due course. The second kind of land is that which is perennially irrigated by means of canals, and receives waterings according to rotations laid down by the Irrigation Department. In these lands, which are for the most part in Lower Egypt, cotton, maize, wheat, rice, beans, barley, sugar cane, clover, vegetables and fruit are the chief crops.

Cotton Prices.—The abnormal nature of the rise and fall of cotton prices that occurred between the beginning of the 1919-20 season and the end of 1920 is clearly shown by the resulting ruinous margin of difference between futures and the spot prices which eventually prevailed during the months corresponding thereto. Thus spot prices for Fully Good Fair Sakellarides opened on September 3, 1919, at $57.50, and rose by leaps varying from $6 to $38 at a time, to $127 on February 14, 1920. By March 5 it had dropped to $137, and although it rose again a week later to $165, the downward tendency had set in for good, and it fell by August 27 to $124. At this figure it also stood on September 3, i.e., at the beginning of the 1920-21 season, but it had dropped to $31 by December 31. As regards futures and spot prices, the highest quotation for November delivery, 1920, was $145.50 made in the preceding April, while the spot price in November dropped from $72 to $38. In August, 1920, quotations for delivery of the current crop in January, 1921, reached $118.50, whereas spot prices in the latter month varied between $30.60 and $35.85.

Minerals.—The riparian districts of the lower Valley of the Nile are ill-provided with workable mineral deposits, with the exception of abundant building materials. The mineral resources of Egypt, therefore, are situated in its otherwise barren deserts. Known deposits are chiefly situated at great distances from one another and from the Nile. This fact has retarded exploration and development, but of late years considerable progress has been made. Owing to lack of knowledge of mining, consequent upon their pursuit being entirely agricultural, the local industrial classes have had very little hand in the existing enterprises, whose capital and organisation is chiefly foreign. In 1919 the value of the principal minerals produced was phosphates, £196,730; salt, £266,023; metallic ores, £276,023; gold ingots, £230,023; and kerosine, £217,921.

The following minerals, metals, and precious stones are at present being exploited or developed on a commercial scale:—building stones, clays, gypsum, gold, manganese ores, natron, petroleum, phosphate of lime, peridots, salt, alum, magnesia and ochres. Besides those mentioned above, there are known to exist, in quantities more or less important, copper ores, emeralds, granite, iron ores, nickel ores, ornamental stones and sulphur. Enquiries respecting the geology of Egypt should be addressed to the Geological Museum. Applications concerning mining and quarrying and the issue of licences and leases should be made to the Department of Mines, Dawarain Post Office, Egypt.

Oil.—The production of crude oil from the Egyptian Oil Fields was 281,885 metric tons in 1918 and 224,300 metric tons in 1919.

Manufactures and Industries.—The principal articles of Egyptian manufactures are cotton and woollen fabrics, silks, embroideries, brass, silver and copper ware, leather goods, rugs, pottery, alcoholic beverages, sugar, perfumery, and cigarettes. These and other articles of Egyptian manufacture are on view at the permanent Exhibition of Egyptian Arts and Crafts attached to the Bureau of Commerce and Industry in Cairo, from which all information can be obtained. The principal Egyptian Industries are dyeing and tanning.

EXTERNAL TRADE.

The imports and exports of merchandise (the produce or manufacture of Egypt) for the 6 years, 1915-1920, are stated as follows:—

Year.	Imports.	Exports.	Total.
	£E	£E	£E
1915	29,328,993	27,046,872	46,375,865

1920	101,880,963	85,467,061	187,348,024

There is a general import duty of 8 per cent. ad valorem on all articles except fuel, timber, cattle and meat, which pay 4 per cent. ad valorem; and an export duty of about 1 per cent. all round. The principal articles imported and exported in 1920 were:—

COMMUNICATIONS.

Railways.—There is a network of railways in the Delta, the principal lines radiating from Cairo to Alexandria (and on to Rosetta), Damietta, and Ismailia (continuing northwards to Port Said and southward to Suez). From Cairo the line runs southwards for a distance of 554 miles to Shellal, the First Cataract. At this point a steamer connexion runs to Wadi Halfa, connecting the Egyptian State system with the Sudan Government Railways. Westwards from Alexandria (and close to the coast) runs a line, which it is hoped to extend eventually to the frontier at Sollum, thus joining Tripoli to Egypt. The total length of the Egyptian State Railways (excluding the Auxiliary Railways of Upper Egypt and the Western Oases Railway) on March 31, 1920, was 1,990 miles. 26,212,688 passengers and 4,820,702 tons of merchandise were carried during 1917-8, the net receipts being £2,920,874. The gauge is standard (4 ft. 8½ in.), with the exception of 138 miles between Luxor and Shellal, which are 3 ft. 6 in. gauge. There are two other State-owned lines in Egypt, namely, the Auxiliary Railways of Upper Egypt, consisting of 288 miles of standard gauge, and the Western Oases Railways, a length of 141 miles (75 centimetre gauge) connecting the oases of Kharga with the Nile Valley. In addition to the Government lines, there are 818 miles of light railways exploited by public companies. By the completion of a swing bridge over the Suez Canal at Kantara (March, 1918) direct railway communication from Cairo to Palestine was established; the swing bridge was removed in 1921 and is to be replaced by a tunnel under the Canal.

Caravan Routes.—The principal caravan routes lead to the Oases of the Libyan Desert (though Kharga can now be reached by train), whence there is a route, known as the Darb el 'Arabain, leading to Dar Fûr and the south of the Sudan. There are many well-known routes across the Arabian Desert to the Red Sea, that from Qena to Qoseir being probably the most frequently used.

Shipping.—The Khedivial Mail Steamship Line (which is under British management) has its headquarters at Alexandria and a depot at Suez; the majority of the Egyptian pilgrims to Mecca now travel by it. The principal port is Alexandria, where 326 vessels (1,330,721 tons) entered and 735 vessels (1,324,431 tons) cleared in 1920.

The traffic through Port Said amounted in 1920 to 326 vessels entered and 326 cleared, the remainder being dealt with at Suez.

Posts and Telegraphs.—There were in 1920 2,301 post offices and stations, dealing with a total inland correspondence of 60,936,000 (including letters, post-cards, newspapers, &c.), and a total foreign correspondence of 30,177,000. There were on December 31, 1918, 4,612 miles of telegraphs, with 18,930 miles of wire, over which 2,155,443 messages were transmitted during 1918. A system of rural savings banks has been introduced, under the control of the Post Office, the actual deposits being collected in each district by the sarraf (village tax-collector).

THE SUEZ CANAL.

The Suez Canal.—The Compagnie Universelle du Canal Maritime de Suez is an Egyptian company, authorised in 1856, and confirmed in 1866, with a capital of 200,000,000 francs in 400,000 shares of 500 francs each. The British Government acquired from the Khedive in 1875 a total of 176,604 shares (cost £4,000,000, value March 31, 1920, £23,192,000).

The Suez Canal was opened in 1869. The total length of the canal is 101 miles, with a width of 45 metres (147 ft. 8 in.), having cost 761,522,220 francs to construct and enlarge; the maximum draught of water allowed for vessels using the canal is 9.14 metres (30 feet). The average time for the transit through the canal is 16 hours 28 minutes. By a convention, signed on Oct. 29, 1888, the canal was exempted from blockade, and vessels of all nations, whether armed or not, are to be allowed to pass through it in peace or war. The management of the canal is entrusted to a council of 32 administrators, of whom 20 are British (three representing H.M. Government and seven the shipowning interest).

British Directors. Sir Thomas Sutherland, G.C.M.G. (Vice-President of the Company); Sir Fredk. Green, K.B.E.; T. Harrison Hughes; Lord Inchcape, G.C.M.G., K.C.S.I., K.C.I.E.; Oswald Sanderson; Sir E. Wyldbore-Smith; Sir Owen E. Phillips, G.C.M.G.

Representing H.B.M. Govt., H. T. Anstruther, Sir Ian Malcolm, K.C.M.G. (and one vacancy).

The transit receipts in 1870 were 5,718,756 fr., and in 1920, 151,927,267 fr.

The rate of transit dues as from Oct. 1, 1921, is 8 fr. per ton, and 5 fr. 50 c. for vessels in ballast.

The net dividends for the year 1921 amounted to 120 fr. on the ordinary 500 fr. shares, and 97.915 fr. on the Actions de Jouissance. In 1920, the dividends were 243.851 fr. and 218.091 fr., respectively.

The following table shows the number and tonnage of vessels which have passed through the Suez Canal since 1914, with the percentage of British vessels :—

TOWNS.

CAIRO, the capital, stands on the E. bank of the Nile, about 24 miles from the head of the Delta. Its oldest part is the fortress of Babylon in old Cairo, with its Roman bastions and Coptic churches. The earliest Arab building is the Mosque of 'Amr, dating from A.D. 643, and the most conspicuous is the Citadel, built by Saladin towards the end of the 12th century. The bazaars are always interesting, especially the Khân-el-Khalili, the Hamzawi, and the Brass Bazaar, though the Muski, which leads to them, is fast losing its oriental character.

ALEXANDRIA, founded B.C. 332 by Alexander the Great, was for over 1,000 years the capital of Egypt. Its great Pharos, or lighthouse, was one of the "Seven Wonders of the World." It now contains two palaces of the Sultan's, Ras-el-Tin and Montaza, while almost the entire cotton trade of the country is here controlled by the big dealers and brokers. The principal towns (with their population in 1917) are as follows:—

WEIGHTS, MEASURES, AND CURRENCY.

Weights and Measures.

The Metric System of Weights and Measures and the foot and pound and their multiples, are legal in Egypt. The foot and pound are rarely used and the Metric System is little known except in the large towns.

The Weights and Measures in common use, with their English equivalents, are given on pp. 464-5.

Currency.

The Egyptian monetary system prescribed by the Law of October, 1926, is on a gold mono-metallic basis, the unit being the Egyptian pound of 100 piastres, or 1,000 millimes, weighing 8·5000 grams, 0·875 fine, or 7·4375 grams of fine gold.

The Legal tender qualities of the coins are: Gold—the Egyptian pound and 50 piastre pieces full legal tender. Silver—pieces of 20, 10, 5 and 2 piastres up to a sum of 100 piastres. Nickel—pieces of 10, 5, 2 and 1 millimes up to a sum of 10 piastres. Bronze—pieces of ½ millieme up to 10 piastres.

The respective values of the new Egyptian coins are designated thereon in both Arabic and English characters.

The pound sterling is also legal tender in Egypt at the fixed rate of 97½ piastres. The 20-franc piece and equivalent coins of the Latin Union circulate at the fixed rate of 77½ piastres. The gold circulation consists almost entirely of British sovereigns, the Egyptian pound and the other legal tender gold coins being comparatively rare; the British sovereign is, therefore, the real basis of the monetary system, and the foreign exchanges, expressed in piastres, are based, not on the Egyptian pound of 100 piastres, but on the British sovereign of 97½ piastres. The rate of exchange at certain dates in 1922 will be found on p. 467.

The National Bank of Egypt issues notes for (£E.) 200, 50, 10, 5 and 1, and (piastres) 50 and 25; and the Government Currency Notes for (piastres) 20 and 5.

CAIRO is 2,520 miles from London; transit via Marseilles or Trieste, 6 days.

Remains of the Seven Wonders of the World.—The Pyramids (see p. 694) may be visited from Cairo. The "Nephesas" room at the British Museum, Bloomsbury, contains the remains of the Temple of Artemis (Diana) at Ephesus (the Temple of "Diana of the Ephesians" of Acts xix, 35); the "Mausoleum" Room at the British Museum contains the remains of the tomb built at Halicarnassus for Mausolus, in the 4th century B.C.

The inhabitants of the Anglo-Egyptian Sudan are partly Arabs, partly Negroes, and partly Nubian of mixed Arab-Negro blood, with a small foreign element, including some 3,000 Europeans. The Arabs and Nubians are all Muhammadans, as are some of the Negroes, but the latter are generally pagans. Before 1884 the population was believed to be between 8,000,000 and 10,000,000, but by 1898 they had been reduced to about 1,500,000 by war, repression, and disease.

PHYSIOGRAPHY.

Boundaries.—The Sudan extends from the southern boundary of Egypt, 22° N. lat., to the northern shore of the Albert Nyanza, 2° 19' N. lat., and reaches from the French Sahara about 18° 15' E. (to 22° N.) to the north-west boundary of Eritrea (Italian) in 38° 30' E. (at 18° N.). The greatest length from north to south is approximately 1,400 miles, and from east to west 1,200 miles. The northern boundary is the 22nd parallel of North latitude; on the east lie the Red Sea, Eritrea and Abyssinia; on the south lie the British Protectorate of Uganda and the Belgian Congo; and on the west the French Congo.

Northern Region.—The greater portion of the region between 16° N. and 22° N. consists of the Nubian Desert on the east and the Libyan Desert on the west, divided by the fertile valley of the Nile, which is nowhere of great width. The Nubian Desert is bounded on the south by the rivers Atbara and Gash, the latter of which loses its annual flood in a fertile delta north of the town of Kassala. It is traversed from south to north by the continuation of the Abyssinian highlands, which constitutes the Nile-Red Sea water parting, and forms a series of parallel rocky ranges rising to a height of 5,000 feet, the lower slopes and valleys of which are clothed in vegetation and comparatively well watered. The maritime plain lying between these mountains and the Red Sea is covered with low bush, and at Tobar the Baraka (a mountain torrent) waters sufficient of it to produce excellent cotton.

The Central Region, between 16° N. and 10° N., contains on the east the co-called "Island of Meröë," the ancient seat of civilization in the Sudan, situated between the Atbara and the Blue Nile rivers. It is now almost uninhabited save for the natives who visit it with their herds, and to raise a precarious crop after the annual rains. The districts bordering on the upper reaches of the Blue Nile are covered with forests of large trees.

Southern Region.—From 16° N. to the southern boundaries are extensive tracts of cultivable lands enclosed by a semi-circle of forests and swamps, through which a multitude of streams flow into the main river.

Darfur is mainly an elevated plateau about 3,000 feet above sea level, with occasional summits in the Jebel Marra and Jebel Medob of 6,000 feet, one peak (Jebel Marra) rising to a height of approximately 10,000 feet, with summer torrents in the khors, which flood much of the southern districts and vanish in the winter. The Lado enclave, which had been leased to Leopold II., King of the Belgians, reverted at his death to the Anglo-Egyptian administration, and now forms part of Mongalla. The total area of the enclave is estimated at 15,000 sq. miles, with a Negro population of about 250,000. The Gambela enclave (within the boundaries of Abyssinia) is leased from the Abyssinian Government as a trading post.

Hydrography.—The Nile basin covers a total area of nearly 1,100,000 sq. miles, and while part of the basin lies in Abyssinia and Eritrea, its course from the Central African Lakes to the Mediterranean is within the British Protectorates of Uganda and Central Africa, and the Egyptian and Sudanese dominions. The main stream issues from the Victoria Nyanza at the Ripon Falls and flows through Lake Choga, whence it diverges to the Albert Nyanza and enters the plains of Lado, in the Mongalla Province of the Sudan, as the Bahr el Jebel. At Lake No the stream effects a confluence with the Bahr el Ghazal, from the south-west, and further east with the Sobat, from the south-western highlands of Abyssinia. From the junction with the Bahr el Ghazal the stream is known as the Bahr el Abiad, or White Nile. At Khartoum, 535 miles above the Sobat confluence, the river is reinforced by the Bahr el Azrak, or Blue Nile, from the south-east, and near El Damer, 200 miles further north, by a confluence with the Athara, from Abyssinia. Thence the river flows north-west to Abu Hamed, and makes a great south-westerly bend, across the Nubian Desert, before resuming its northward course through the Dongolas to the northern frontier at Wadi Halfa. From the Athara confluence to the Mediterranean the Nile has a course of close on 1,600 miles, and from its sources to the confluence its length may be reckoned at 2,400 miles, giving a total waterway of 4,000 miles. From the Ripon Falls (on the northern shore of Victoria Nyanza) to Rosetta (on the Mediterranean) the length of the waterway is stated to be 3,475 miles. Between Khartoum and Wadi Halfa occur five of the six cataracts, the remaining (first) cataract being in Egypt at Assuan. The sixth occurs at the Shabluka Gorge, below Khartoum; the fifth below Berber, at El Solimanieh; the fourth in the Nubian bend, between Monastir and Merowé; the third between New Dongola and the 20° N. lat.; the second ends just above Wadi Halfa; the first (in Upper Egypt) has been greatly diminished in vehemence by the construction of the dam and locks at Assuan.

GOVERNMENT.

The Sudan is administered by a Governor-General, aided, since 1910, by a Council nominated from amongst the Officials of the Government. All Ordinances and Laws are made by the Governor-General in Council. The Civil and Criminal Codes are based on those of India and Egypt. The boundaries correspond in general with the territory obtained by conquest from the indigenous tribes by the armies of Mohammed Ali, the first Khedive of Egypt, and of his successors up to Ismail Pasha, between 1820 and 1875. At one time the authority of the Khedive extended along the western shore of the Red Sea as far as the Somali coast, but these outlying portions were gradually given up, and in 1884 the Mahdist rebellion, culminating in the fall of Khartoum and the death of General Gordon on Jan. 26, 1885, compelled the Egyptian Government to withdraw from the whole of the Sudan, with the exception of Wadi Halfa on the Nile and Suakin on the Red Sea, which were held as frontier posts. An invasion of Egypt by the Mahdist hordes under Wad El Nejumi was defeated at the battle of Toski on Aug. 3, 1889, but from 1885, until the final overthrow of Mahdism in the campaign of 1896-98, the country was entirely under the oppressive rule of the Dervishes, and suffered a set-back from which it will take many years to recover, the population decreasing from about 9,000,000 to less than 2,000,000 through famine and the spread of disease due to misgovernment. Mohammed Ahmed, the original Mahdi, died a natural death on June 22, 1885, but was succeeded by the Khalifa Abdullahi, who ruled until his final overthrow by the Anglo-Egyptian army at the battle of Omdurman on Sept. 2, 1898. He escaped from the battle and remained at large until he, and most of his remaining Emirs, were killed at the battle of Gedid on Nov. 24, 1898. After the reconquest of the Sudan an agreement, signed on Jan. 19, 1899, between Egypt and Great Britain, defined the boundary between Egypt and the Sudan, and provided for its administration. The British and Egyptian flags fly together and the territory is administered by a Governor-General appointed by Egypt with the consent of the British Government. No duties may be levied on imports from Egypt and duties on imports via the Red Sea ports may not exceed those levied in Egypt. The import and export of slaves is prohibited.

LOCAL GOVERNMENT.

The Sudan is divided into 15 provinces (mudiriya) under governors (mudirs), subdivided into mamurias, or districts. The governors (see p. 699) are all British. In some provinces there are High Courts or Provincial Judges; in others the Governor acts as Provincial Judge. District Judges have been appointed in many instances, and where no appointments have been made the Provincial Inspectors and District Officers act in their stead.

DEFENCE.

Several regiments of the Egyptian Army (see Egypt) are stationed in the Sudan, which forms an excellent recruiting ground, and the Sirdar (Commander-in-Chief) is Governor-General of the Sudan. A detached body of the British army of occupation in Egypt is quartered at Khartoum, under the command of the Sirdar. The police and the locally recruited irregulars (jehadia) are under provincial administration.

EDUCATION.

In addition to kuttabs (vernacular schools) there are 6 primary schools at Khartoum, Omdurman, Wad Medani, El Obedi, Soukin and Atbara, where instruction is given in English as well as Arabic, attended by about 1,300 pupils; a secondary school at Khartoum (Gordon College), and a training college (also at Gordon College); and technical or trade schools at Khartoum and Omdurman. The central authority is the Education Department.

FINANCE.

The revenue and expenditure of the Sudan for the seven years 1914-1920 are stated as follows:—

Year.	Revenue.	Expenditure.
1914	£E1,543,550	£E1,531,350
1915	1,495,530	1,463,940
1916	1,857,860	1,745,530
1917	2,195,360	1,901,940
1918	2,774,690	2,336,315
1919	2,992,793	2,790,513
1920	4,426,340	3,564,848

The revenue is derived mainly from land tax, animal tax, royalties on gum and ivory, customs and railways, posts, telegraphs and steam-boat services. The deficits of the early years were met by a contribution from the Egyptian exchequer, the total sum so paid by Egypt from 1901-1911 amounting to £3,435,000. In addition, nearly £5,000,000 has been advanced by Egypt for public works in the Sudan.

PRODUCTION AND INDUSTRY.

The Sudan is the chief source of the world's supply of gum arabic and ivory, the exports of gum arabic being 12,109 tons (£E566,225) and of ivory 45 tons (£E76,819) in 1920. Egyptian and improved American cotton are grown, the cultivation of the former having been successfully established in the Gezira, lying between the Blue and White Niles, adjoining the main Nile in Khartoum Province, at Kassala and at Tokar in the Red Sea Province. Long staple American cotton is grown commercially in Berber and Dongola Provinces.

The Gezira Irrigation Project (by means of a dam on the Blue Nile at Makwar, about 120 miles south of Khartoum) will enable 100,000 acres to be put under cotton in a few years' time with unlimited scope for extension. Cotton area 1920, 56,006 Feddans; Crop 1920-1921 estimated at 93,000 Kantars. Other products include sesame, sesna leaves and pods, ground-nuts, dates, hides and skins and gold. The principal grain crops are dura, a kind of millet used for making bread, and dukhn. Estimated yield of dura 1920, 472,000 tons. The Cattle Trade in the Sudan shows remarkable growth in recent years and the number exported is increasing yearly, the reason being that while it is easy for the native to raise cattle, the Government on their part, through an efficient and well-organised Veterinary Department, is endeavouring to foster the trade, to eliminate cattle disease, and to improve the quality of live stock. For some years Egypt has depended almost entirely on the Sudan for its meat supply, but recently (1920) since the collapse of the cotton market and the scarcity of money, the Egyptian Fellah has been selling his own stock for slaughter purposes at very cheap prices, and, in consequence, the export of animals from the Sudan to Egypt has come to a stop. The stoppage is only a temporary one, however, as the slaughter of animals in Egypt cannot continue indefinitely.

The forests which line the river bank, rich in fibre and tanning material, extend to the frontiers of Abyssinia. On the White Nile the forests contain valuable trees—the ebony tree, the gum acacia, the bamboo, and the rubber creeper. The finest gum forests are in Kordofan, and the best rubber in the Bahr el Ghazal.

Gold is the only mineral at present being successfully exploited in the Sudan, a mine being worked at Gabait.

EXTERNAL TRADE.

The principal exports are gum, ivory obtained by elephant hunters, cattle, sheep, sesame, dums, dates, cotton and cotton seed, hides and skins. The principal imports are cotton goods, sugar, machinery and metals, coal, food-stuffs, tobacco and spirits. The total trade for the eight years 1913-1920 is stated as follows:—

Year.	Imports.	Exports.	Total.
1913	£E8,109,476	£E1,185,186	£E9,294,662
1914	1,891,494	1,020,860	2,912,354
1915	1,704,250	1,577,991	3,282,241
1916	2,661,468	2,288,403	4,949,871
1917	2,102,117	2,490,565	4,592,682
1918	4,084,582	3,923,771	7,998,353
1919	4,803,745	2,740,759	7,544,504
1920	7,006,865	4,712,652	11,719,517

The import figures include Government stores; the export figures exclude re-exports, specie and merchandise in transit. The re-exports in 1920 were valued at £E33,319; the imports of specie in 1920 were valued at £E99,661, and the re-exports at £E12,224. The transit trade in 1920 was valued at £E26,207. In 1920 57 per cent. of the import and 53 per cent. of the export trade was via Port Sudan.

COMMUNICATIONS.

Railways, &c.—In 1915 about 1,500 miles of railways were open for traffic. The Sudan Railway reached Khartoum in 1899; a line from Athara to the Red Sea at Port Sudan and Suakin, and a branch to the Halfa-Khartoum line from Abu Hamed to Kareima to tap the Dongola Province, were opened in 1906. A bridge has been constructed over the Blue Nile at Khartoum, and the railway now runs to El Obeld, the chief town of Kordofan Province, crossing the White Nile by another bridge near Hillet Abbas. Since the opening of the eastern railway the Red Sea ports of Port Sudan and Suakin receive much of the trade which formerly passed northwards. South of Khartoum communication is established by steamers and boats on the Blue and White Niles, Sobat and Bahr-el-Ghazal, and inland chiefly by camels and donkeys.

Telegraphs.—All the principal towns are in direct telegraphic communication with Khartoum, the total mileage of telegraph lines being 4,353 miles in 1920. There are 65 stationary and 11 travelling Post and Telegraph offices, and 11 wireless telegraphy offices.

TOWNS.

CAPITAL, KHARTOUM, at the junction of the White and Blue Niles. The town has been rebuilt and now contains a large mosque for Muhammadana, a cathedral, and the Gordon College, with extensive government buildings. Population about 23,000. Opposite Khartoum, on the Blue Nile is Khartoum North (16,000), and on the White Nile is Omdurman (60,000), the former Mahdist capital. Other towns are Berber, El Damer, Athara, Abu Hamed, Merowé, Dongola, Wadi Halfa, Port Sudan, Suakin, Sinkat, Kassala, Kamilin, Sennar, Singa, Makwar, Wad Medani, Roseires, Gallabat, Gedaref, El Obeld, El Dueim, El Fasher (Darfur), Kodok, Mongalla, Kosti and Rejaf.

The League of the Empire (FOUNDED 1901).

THE League is entirely non-political and non-sectarian. Its practical work has been to promote co-operation between the different Countries and Colonies of the Empire, mainly in affairs connected with education, and to afford full and correct information regarding them, so that the duties of citizenship may be better understood and appreciated, and personal and active interest inspired in the great problems connected with our Empire's conditions and progress. The relation of the League to the Education Departments and Government throughout the Empire has been regularised (a) through the recommendation of its work to the Governments concerned by the Colonial Office of the Imperial Government and by the Agents-General in 1902-3; (b) by the active and widespread acceptance of its schemes by the different Educational Authorities and Governments. In 1907 the League carried through the first Conference between the Education Departments of the Home and Colonial Governments. One of the effects of this Conference was that the Imperial Government undertook to call the Imperial Conference on Education in 1911. In 1912 the first Imperial Conference of Teachers' Associations was held by the League, and in 1913 was inaugurated the Imperial Union of Teachers. In 1914 the second Imperial Conference of Teachers' Associations was held in Toronto, by invitation of the Government of Ontario. An annual meeting of the Imperial Union of Teachers takes place each July. The League, through the liberality of the late Mr. Louis Spitzel, has published a series of text-books on the Empire, under the editorship of Professor A. F. Pollard: (1) "The British Empire—Its Past, Its Present, and Its Future" (a book of reference); (2) "The British Empire and Its History" (for Secondary Schools); (3) "The Story of the British Empire." In 1907 the League helped to establish a lace industry in St. Helena. With the co-operation of the Overseas and Home Education Authorities a Scheme for the interchange of Teachers throughout the Empire is now in active operation, over 150 interchange appointments were arranged last year. The School Affiliation and Comrades' Correspondence Sections were established in 1901-2. Other work undertaken are the giving of lectures, the establishment of a bureau of information, essay competitions, exhibitions, and the furthering of the keeping of Empire Day.

During the War the League distributed from its depot over a million articles to the hospitals and troops, besides helping prisoners and others in distress. The League has also given colours and shields to all the overseas contingents who fought for the Empire.

The League also held a Conference of 300 Overseas Soldier-Teachers in 1919.

ASCENSION.

an isolated Island in the North Atlantic (3,477 miles from Plymouth, 760 from St. Helena, and 900 from Cape Palmas on the African Coast), is of volcanic origin, the peak rising to the height of 2,800 feet, situated $7^{\circ} 55' 55''$ S lat., and $14^{\circ} 25' 5''$ W. long. It is said to have been discovered by a Portuguese named João de Nova Gallego, on Ascension Day, 1501, and two years later was visited by Alphonse d'Albuquerque, who gave the island its present name. Its extreme length is $7\frac{1}{2}$ miles, and extreme breadth 6 miles, with an area of about 38 square miles, and being situated in the heart of the E.E. trade winds, its climate is dry and salubrious up to 1,800 feet, but above that height to its limit it is damp and foggy. It remained uninhabited till 1825, when the English took possession of it. The island is under the Board of Admiralty, by whom an officer is appointed as commandant. The inhabitants consist of officers and their families, seamen, marines, and Kroomen; a limited number of men also have their families with them, the full complement of the island being about 250 (exclusive of 40 members and servants of the Eastern Telegraph Co.), with about 35 women and children. Georgetown, the garrison settlement, is situated in a small bay on the N.W. coast. Ascension is visited by the sea-turtle from January to May, which lay their eggs in the sand, 58 being "turned" during 1900, their weight being from 300 to 800 lb. The sooty tern, or "wide-awake," use the island as a nesting-place about every eighth month, their eggs being much appreciated by the inhabitants.

BAHAMAS.

The Bahamas (or Lucayas) are an archipelago of the British West Indies, lying between $21^{\circ} 45'$ — $27^{\circ} 34'$ N. lat. and $70^{\circ} 40'$ — $79^{\circ} 5'$ W. long., and extending from the coast of Florida on the north-west to Haiti on the south-east. The group consists of about twenty inhabited islands, and an immense number of islets and rocks, comprising an area of about 4,404 square miles, and a population in 1917 of 59,928, the most part being descendants of liberated Africans. The principal islands are: New Providence (containing the capital, Nassau), San Salvador, Abaco, Grand Bahama, Long Island, Eleuthera, Exuma, Harbour Island, Inagua, Andros Islands, Watlings Island, Rum Cay, Long Cay, Ragged Island, and Bimini. Originally settled by Englishmen, the Bahamas were, in 1782, surprised by the Spanish, but at the peace of Versailles were restored to the English. The climate is salubrious, and in the winter Nassau, which is outside the tropics, is frequented by many Americans. The chief industry is sponge-gathering; the exports of sponge in 1928 being valued at £107,688. The fruit trade is principally with the United States, bananas, coco-nuts, fruit and vegetables being exported. Tomatoes are being cultivated in large quantities for shipment to the United States. Mahogany, ligum-vitæ, mastic, ironwood, ebony, logwood, and satinwood are found throughout the islands. A fibre industry is largely established, the land under the fibre plant being about 20,000 acres, and the value of Bahamas hemp fibre exported in 1900, £148,488. The imports are chiefly food-stuffs, wines, spirits, cotton, silk and worsted fabrics, and hardware.

The Government is vested in a Governor, aided by an Executive Council of 9 members, a nominated Legislative Council of 9 members, and an elective Representative Assembly of 29 members.

the most windward of the West India Islands, is situated in $13^{\circ} 4' N.$, and longitude $59^{\circ} 37' W.$ It is nearly 21 English miles long by 14 broad at the widest part, and comprises an area of 166,470 acres (about 166 square miles), about 100,000 acres being cultivated. The estimated population, Jan. 1, 1921, was 298,563. The principal exports are sugar, molasses, rum, and cotton, and the imports rice, salted meat, corn, salted fish, butter, flour, and Indian corn meal. Liberal provision is made for elementary education, and Harrison's College provides for higher education. Unlike most of the neighbouring islands, Barbados has always remained in the possession of Great Britain, by which it was settled in 1626. In 1885 it was constituted a distinct government, with a Governor, aided by an Executive Council and an Executive Committee, a Legislative Council of 9 members appointed by the Sovereign, and a House of Assembly of 24 members elected yearly on the basis of a moderate franchise.

The CAPITAL and port is Bridgetown (pop. 12,225, 18,648), on the shores of an open roadstead (Carlisle Bay).

BERMUDA.

The Bermudas, or Somers Islands, are a cluster of about 100 small islands (13 or 16 only of which are inhabited, the rest being mere rocks) situated in the west of the Atlantic Ocean, in 30° 15' N. lat. and 64° 51' W. long, comprising an area of about 29 square miles, and containing a population (1921) of 21,087 (7,507 white, and 14,478 coloured). These islands derive their name from Bermuda, a Spaniard, who sighted them in 1507; but they were first colonised by Admiral Sir George Somers, who was shipwrecked here in 1609, on his way to Virginia. The nearest point of the mainland is Cape Hatteras, in North Carolina, 580 miles distant.

The Government is administered by a Governor, who is also commander-in-chief of the military forces. He is advised by an Executive Council of 6 members, appointed by the Crown. There is also a Legislative Council, composed of 9 members appointed by the Crown; and a representative House of Assembly consisting of 36 members.

The climate is mild and healthy. There are no streams or wells, and the inhabitants are dependent on the rainfall stored and preserved in tanks. Vegetation is prolific, the principal trees being the Bermuda cedar (juniper), formerly of great importance for shipbuilding. The islands produce large quantities of onions, potatoes, and green vegetables, which are largely exported, together with cut flowers and lily bulbs, to New York. Arrowroot and bananas are also grown, but meat, flour and other articles of consumption are imported from the U.S. and Canada. Fish are plentiful round the coasts. The islands are much frequented as a health resort by Americans and Canadians.

BORNEO.

Borneo is a large island in the Eastern Archipelago, extending from lat. 7° 4' N. to 4° 10' S., and from long. 108° 50' to 119° 30' E. It is about 850 miles in length and 600 in breadth, and contains an area of 284,000 square miles, divided by the equatorial line into two nearly equal portions. The population is probably about 1,846,000, consisting chiefly of Dyaks, Malays, Kyans, Papus or Negritos, Chinese, Bajaus, Dusuns, Muruts and Bugis (the aboriginal Celébes). The island was discovered by the Portuguese in 1521, and at the present time rather more than two-thirds of the island is included within "Netherlands India." The remainder of the island is under British protection.

BRITISH NORTH BORNEO.

The territory of British North Borneo occupies the northern part of the island, with a total area of about 31,000 square miles, and a coast-line of about 600 miles. The population is 227,000, consisting mainly of Muhammadan settlers on the coast, aboriginal tribes inland, and a large number of Chinese traders, artisans, and agricultural labourers. The interior is mountainous (Mount Kinabalu, 13,455 feet) and is densely timbered. The two chief towns are Sandakan, on the north-east coast, and Jesselton, on the west coast. The population is passed by the Legislative Council, which consists of 7 official and 5 unofficial members, who have the local title of Honourable. The appointment of the Governor is subject to the approval of the Secretary of State. For administrative purposes the whole State is divided into 5 Residencies. The laws are based on the Indian codes of criminal and civil procedure, amended and adapted by local ordinances. There is an Imam's Court for Muhammadan law.

The chief products are timber, tobacco, rubber, sago, rice, gums, gutta-percha, coco-nuts, rattans, and all varieties of jungle produce. The country is suitable for the cultivation of sugar, tapioca, rubber, pepper, and gambier on a large scale. Gold has been found. Coal of good quality is now being produced at the rate of 7,000 tons per month at Sebattik, in the south-eastern corner of the territory.

A railway runs from Jesselton, the chief port on the west coast, to Melalap in the interior, a distance of about 100 miles, and down the coast to Beaufort, the centre of the rubber industry, where it turns inland; there is a branch from Beaufort to Weston on the coast (20 miles). There are wireless stations at Sandakan, Jesselton, Kudat, and Tawau. There is a State bank at Sandakan with a branch at Jesselton.

There is a native military force of 800 men under European officers, with one machine and four mountain guns. There is a Church of England and a Roman Catholic mission, and churches at Sandakan, Kudat, and Jesselton.

BRUNEL

Sultan, H. H. Mohamed Jemal-ul-Islam, K.C.M.G., suc. May 11, 1906.

A native State on the north-west coast of the island of Borneo. The total area is about 4,000 square miles, the estimated population being 30,000 (1911). The territory was placed under British protection in 1886, and on Jan. 1, 1906, the Sultan accepted by treaty a British Resident to assist and advise him in the administration. The chief town, Brunel, has a population of nearly 10,000, and is built entirely on the water, except the Chinese quarter which is on land, communication being possible only by boat.

High Commissioner, The Governor of the Straits Settlements.

British Resident, Brunel, G. E. Cator.
Executive Engineer, P. W. D., Edmund Roberts
(who also acts as Officer-in-Charge).
Treasurer & Supt. Customs (vacant).

Brunel is 3 hours by steamer from Labuan, and communication is now regularly maintained.

BRITISH GUIANA.

which includes the Counties of Demerara, Essequibo, and Berbice, is situated on the north-east coast of South America and has a total area of 89,420 square miles, with a seaboard of more than 300 miles. The population, Dec. 31, 1920, was estimated at 307,290, of whom 120,331 were East Indian immigrants. The colony is bounded on the south by Brazil, on the east by Dutch Guiana, on the west by Venezuela, and on the north and N.E. by the Atlantic Ocean. The climate is hot, but not unhealthy. The cultivated portion of the country, amounting to about 176,000 acres (of which 69,500 acres are in sugar-cane and 54,400 in rice), is confined to the sea-coast and to a short distance from the rivers. The coastland is very like the Netherlands, being below the level of the sea, and intersected with canals constructed by its former Dutch owners. At the junction of the boundaries of British Guiana and Venezuela is Mt. Roraima, a flat-topped mountain 8,740 feet above sea level, and on the Potaro River are the Kaieteur Falls, with a clear drop of 741 feet and a total fall of 822 feet. The seasons are divided into dry and wet, the two dry seasons lasting from the middle of February to the end of April, and from the middle of August to the end of November. The meteorological records taken on the coast-lands during a period of 74 years show, as regards temperature, that the climate is a very equable one. The mean temperature is 80° 3', its recorded extremes during this long period ranging between 66° and 92°, but these extreme temperatures are very rarely recorded, the usual extremes during a year being 75° and 84°. In the interior the mean temperature is higher—82° 8', its extremes ranging from 66° to 103°. The yearly rainfall is, on the contrary, subject to marked variation, its mean on the coast lands being 94·4 inches distributed over 105 days of the year, and its range from 44·9 to 132·2 inches per year. In the interior the average recorded rainfall is 50·8 inches per year ranging from 45·3 to 57·9 inches per year. The birth-rate in 1900 was 31·9, and the death-rate 25·6 per 1,000. The chief product is sugar, which forms 76 per cent. of the export trade. The leading exports are sugar (£4,292,683 in 1900), rum, diamonds, timber, balata, and rice. There are about 13,000 aboriginal Indians; they are occupied largely in fishing, hunting, and raising crops of cassava.

The Government consists of a Governor and a Court of Policy of 15 other members, 7 official and 8 elected, and a Combined Court including the members of the Court of Policy together with six elected Financial Representatives; with an Executive Council, consisting of the Governor, 5 official and 3 unofficial members nominated by the Crown. There are 1,864 miles of post-office telephone wire and 556 of telegraph lines, with 74 post-offices. There are 95 miles of railway.

BRITISH HONDURAS.

British Honduras, in Central America, lies within 28° 29' 5" to 15° 53' 55" N. latitude and 89° 9' 20" to 88° 20' W. longitude. Its extreme length and breadth are 174 m. and 68 m. respectively; it is bounded on the north by Yucatan (Mexico), on the west and south by Guatemala, and on the east by the Caribbean Sea. The total area is about 8,598 sq. miles, with a population (Census 1901) of 45,317—22,563 males and 22,754 females. The climate generally is damp and hot, but not unhealthy. The temperature ranges from 50° to 95°. The average lies between 75° and 80°, but this is considerably tempered by the prevailing sea-breezes. The country consists chiefly of primeval forest, with savannahs and so-called "pine-ridges," which are open sandy plains covered with a wiry grass and dotted with pine-trees, affording fair runs for cattle. The ground is level and swampy along the coast-line, and generally flat for about ten or twenty miles inland; after which hills from 500 ft. to 4,000 ft. high succeed each other to the western boundary.

The staple products are the natural woods of the colony, principally mahogany and logwood. Sugar, rubber and cacao grow readily. Fruit, including bananas, plantains, coco-nuts, pineapples, oranges, and mangoes also grow well, while inland there are extensive regions of good pasture. About 60,000 acres are under cultivation. The best description of cacao trees grow wild in the bush. There are 95 primary schools in the colony, and 4 schools with secondary departments in Belize. The shipping entered and cleared at the port of Belize in 1900 was 532,000 tons. There is a radio-telegraph station at Belize.

British Honduras is governed as a Crown colony. There is an Executive Council of 3 official and 3 appointed members and a Legislative Council of 5 official and 7 appointed members. The Governor is President of both Councils.

CAMEROON.

(Joint Franco-British Administration.)

The German Protectorate of Kamerun on the west coast of Africa between (British) Nigeria and French Congo (the Spanish Muni River Settlements occupying a small intervening area), was obtained by conquest by Franco-British forces during the War of 1914-18, and at the conclusion of Peace its administration was confided by the Supreme Council of the Allied Powers to Great Britain and France jointly.

The approximate geographical limits are between 2°-12° N. lat. and 8° 45'-19° E. long., and the area is about 295,000 square miles, containing a population estimated at 3,500,000. The coast line extends from the Rio del Rey to the Muni River. The south-eastern boundary (as re-arranged in 1911) is the confluence of the Sangha with the Congo River; the extreme northern limit is the southern shore of Lake Chad, and the extreme eastern limit (1911) is the Ubangi River. The territory occupies the north-west corner of the Central African Plateau, with Cameroon Peak (12,370 feet) near the capital, on the coast, and the Chebchi and Mandara Mountains on the north-west frontier. Access was obtained to the Congo and Ubangi Rivers by the Agadir compensation treaty with France (1911), under which the area of the colony was increased by 100,000 square miles. The Sangha is a considerable river flowing into the Atlantic opposite Fernando Po; the Sangha and Dacha (or Ngoko) are tributaries of the Congo, and the Logone-Shari flows into Lake Chad. The inhabitants are Bantus and Sudanese, with some Hausas and Fula tribes, of whom the latter are Muhammadans and the remainder pagans. Cocoa cultivation is a highly successful industry of recent origin, and the Protectorate is rich in forest produce. The exports (valued at £3,135,000 marks in 1912) are rubber, palm oil, palm kernels, cocoa and ivory; the imports (£4,242,000 marks in 1912) are chiefly clothing and textile goods, meat, fish and provisions. There were 270 miles of railway open in 1912.

In 1900 the whole area was divided into a British Sphere and a French Sphere.

The British Sphere is a wedge-shaped strip, running with the Nigerian border, and containing an area of about 25,000 sq. miles. It is administered by the Nigerian Government, the capital being BUKA, on the slopes of the Cameroon Mountain. The principal port is Victoria (in Amba Bay), which is connected by railway with the capital.

CAYMAN ISLANDS.

The Cayman Islands, forming a dependency of Jamaica, are situated between the meridians 79° 44' and 81° 26' W., parallels of 16° 15' and 19° 46' N., and consist of three islands, Grand Cayman, Cayman Brac, and Little Cayman, with a total area of 200 square miles. They are said to have been discovered by Christopher Columbus on his return voyage from Porto Bello to Haiti, and called "Las Tortugas." Population (1901) 5,253.

The principal town is Georgetown, in Grand Cayman, population (1901) 1,070.

Commissioner & Judge of the Grand Court, an island in the Indian Ocean, to the south-east of the peninsula of Hindustan, is situated between 5° 55'-9° 50½' N. lat. and 79° 42'-81° 35' E. long. Its area is (with outlying islands) 25,425 square miles, or more than three-fourths of that of Ireland. Its greatest length is from north to south, 270 miles; and its greatest width 120 miles.

Ceylon.

The climate varies with the altitude of the district; but on the whole, though tropical, it is healthy, except in the low-lying jungle. The coolest months are December and January; the hottest are April and May.

The population (Census of 1901) was 4,200,669, the most important element being the Sinhalese, descendants of colonists from the valley of the Ganges, who first settled in the island about B.C. 543. In 1597 the Portuguese landed in Ceylon and formed settlements along the coast; but about 150 years later they were dispossessed by the Dutch. In 1796 the British took possession of the Dutch settlements on the island, and annexed them to the Presidency of Madras; but five years after, in 1802, Ceylon was erected into a separate Crown colony. In 1815 the King of Kandy was deposed and banished; and his dominions, which had up to that time maintained their independence of European rule, were annexed to the British Crown.

The staple products of the islands are agricultural. The most important for home consumption is rice in its two forms of paddy and dry grain. The principal exports are tea, products of the coco-nut palm, rubber, plumbago, cocones, cinnamon, cardamoms, ebony, and a little vanilla.

About one-fourth of the island is under cultivation, and the leading areas in 1900, in acres, were:—Rice, 757,043; other grain, 154,000; tea, 508,645; coffee, 938; coco-nuts, 245,057; rubber, 412,000; cinnamon, 34,668; cocoa, 35,750; and tobacco, 19,720. The live stock in 1900 included 1,508,833 horned cattle, 57,497 sheep, 155,570 goats, 59,070 pigs, and 3,210 horses. Among the more important native industries are gold, silver, brass, ivory and tortoise-shell work, pottery, mats, fans, and wood-carving. Ceylon is famous for precious stones, especially catseyes, rubies, &c.; and for the pearl fishery in the Gulf of Mannar, off the N.W. of the island. The manufacture of salt is a Government monopoly.

There are 728 miles of railway open, 611 being 5 ft. 6 in. gauge and 117 miles a ft. 6 in.; and the post and telegraph offices numbered 727, there being 7,858 miles of telegraph wire.

The government of Ceylon is administered by a Governor, aided by an Executive Council of 6 members, and a Legislative Council of 37 members. The Legislative Council contains representatives of the various territorial divisions of the island, and special safeguards provide for the representation of minorities and unrepresented interests. Of the 33 unofficial members 16 are elected and 7 nominated by the Governor.

For administrative purposes the island is divided into 9 provinces, at the head of each of which is a Government agent. The larger towns have municipalities or local boards; and in the country districts the natives retain their village councils and tribunals for matters of minor importance.

The MALDIVIVE ARCHIPELAGO lies to the S.W. of Ceylon, a few degrees north of the equator. Male, the seat of government, is about 400 miles distant from Ceylon, to which the islands have always been nominally tributary. The Sultan acknowledges his allegiance by sending an annual embassy to Colombo. The natives are Muhammadans. The islands are unhealthy, and the main exports are dried fish, cowrie shells, coconut oil, and tortoiseshell.

CYPRUS

is an island in the Mediterranean Sea, between N. lat. 34° 33' and 35° 41', and E. long. 32° 17' and 34° 35'. It is about 40 miles distant from the nearest point of Asia Minor; and 60 miles from Latakia, on the Syrian coast. The distance to Port Said, at the entrance of the Suez Canal, is 298 miles. The larger part of the island is an irregular parallelogram, 200 miles long and 60 to 30 broad; from which a narrow peninsula, 5 or 6 miles wide, runs out for 40 miles towards the north-east. The area is 3,584 square miles. The population at the census of 1921 was 330,709, of whom about 80 per cent. were Muhammadans, and the remainder mostly members of the autocephalous Church of Cyprus, which is a branch of the Orthodox Eastern Church. The principal productions are grain of various kinds, sesame, flaxseed, wine and spirits, silk, olives, locust-beans (carobs), cotton, wool, hides, grapes, oranges, pomegranates, asbestos, aniseed, sponges, sumac leaves, terra umbra, gypsum, and salt. The fertility of the soil has for centuries been proverbial. In 1920 the wine export was 1,253,128 gals., and that of spirits 28,210 gals., the bulk of the wine and spirits going to Egypt. The climate varies in different localities. In the plains the summer heat is very great, and the British troops suffered when first stationed in the island. Excellent summer quarters were, however, found in the hills; and, owing to the enforcement of various sanitary measures, the death-rate of the whole island is nearly as low as that of any European country.

Cyprus was formally annexed to the British Empire in 1924. The inhabitants have been granted a political franchise, every man paying direct taxes having a vote. The government is administered, under the Colonial Office, by a High Commissioner, assisted by a Legislative Council composed of 18 members, 6 being official and 12 elected. The island is divided into three electoral districts, each returning one Muhammadan and three Christian members.

For administrative and legal purposes it is divided into six districts. In each district the executive government is represented by a commissioner; and each has a Court of Law presided over by an English judge, who is assisted by two native judges, one being a Christian and the other a Muhammadan. There is also a Supreme Court for the whole island, consisting of two English judges.

The capital is Nicosia (Lefkosia), near the centre of the island, with a population of 121,98 in 1921; the other principal towns are Larnaca (population 9,768), Limassol (13,291), Famagusta (7,276), Kyrenia (1,923), Paphos (4,119), and Morphou (3,500).

Important works at Famagusta have rendered the inner harbour accessible to steamers, and a narrow-gauge railway connecting the harbour with the capital (36 miles) was opened in 1905, and was extended to Morphou, 25 miles, in 1907, and to Erykhou, 15 miles, in 1915. There is a regular service of steamers from Egypt.

FALKLAND ISLANDS.

These, the only considerable cluster in the South Atlantic, lie about 300 miles east of the Straits of Magellan, between 51° 15'—53° S. lat. and 57° 40'—62° W. long. They consist of East Falkland (area 3,000 sq. miles), West Falkland (2,300 sq. miles), and upwards of 200 small islands (islets, rocks, and sandbanks), comprising in the aggregate 6,400 sq. miles, and a population in 1929 of 2,250. Mount Adam, the loftiest peak in the colony, rises 2,315 feet above the level of the sea. The Falklands were discovered by Davis in 1592, and visited by Hawkins in 1594. After having successively belonged to France and Spain, they were given up to Great Britain about 1771, but not actually occupied. In 1820 the Argentine Republic established a settlement in these islands, which was destroyed by the Americans in 1831. In 1833 they were again taken possession of by the English for the protection of the whale-fishery, and colonised, being the most southerly organised colony of the British Empire. On Dec. 8, 1914, a British squadron under Adm. Sir Doveton Sturdee defeated a German squadron (von Spee) off the Falkland Islands. The climate, though somewhat bleak, is usually considered healthy, and the temperature is on the whole equable, the thermometer ranging in winter from 20° to 50°, and in summer from 40° to 65°. The islands are chiefly bog-land, and have proved suitable for sheep ; kitchen-gardens occupy the only cultivated part, with the exception of one station situated in a sheltered position on the West Falkland, where a considerable crop of hay is grown. The population is mainly British, and is principally engaged in sheep-farming and sea-faring industries. The chief exports are whale-oil and guano, wool, tallow, hides and sheepskins. The only important settlement is Port Stanley, at the head of Port William, on the coast of East Falkland.

SOUTH GEORGIA, an island 800 miles east-south-east of the Falkland Group, with an area of 1,000 square miles, is a dependency of the Falkland Islands. Among other dependencies are the South Shetlands ; the South Orkneys (on which the Argentine Government have, with the permission of H.M. Government, established a meteorological station, in connexion with a discovery that a cold winter in the Weddell Sea is a precursor of drought in the maize and cereal area of Argentina 3½ years later) ; the Sandwich Group ; and a part of the mainland of the Antarctic, known as Graham's Land.

Fiji.

This is a group of 200 to 250 islands (of which some are, however, mere uninhabited islets and rocks) in the South Pacific Ocean, about 1,100 miles north of New Zealand, which extend 300 miles from east to west, and 300 north to south, between 15° 45'—21° 10' S. lat. and 176° E.—178° W. long. The gross area of the group is about 7,083 square miles. The islands are of volcanic origin, with lofty mountains, and well wooded. The principal are Viti Levu (Great Fiji) and Vanua Levu (Great Land). The climate is equable and remarkably healthy for Europeans ; the average temperature in the shade in the cool season is 72°, rising to 86° in the hot season, extremes lying between 60° and 94°. Vegetation is remarkably luxuriant, the chief productions being the bread-fruit tree, banana, plantain, pea-nuts, yams, and dalo (taro), coco-nut, sugar-cane, rice, maize, and cotton. The principal exports are sugar, copra, bananas, trocas shell, molasses, rubber, maize, hides and pelts, and bêche-de-mer. The Governor is appointed by the Crown, and is assisted by an Executive Council consisting of 6 members. Laws are passed by a Legislative Council (of which the Governor is president) containing 12 nominated members (one specially representing Indian interests), 7 elected members, and a native members, appointed by the Governor. Native administration is carried on through the chiefs under the Governor's supervision. The population (Dec. 31, 1927) was estimated at 165,992.

(91,013 native Fijians, 61,253 East Indian immigrants, 4,824 Europeans, and some Polynesians and others).

GAMBIA.

The West African river Gambia, which is navigable for some 300 miles from its mouth, was discovered by the Portuguese in 1447; and in 1588, the year of the Spanish Armada, Queen Elizabeth, being then at war with Spain and Portugal, gave a charter to a British Company to trade with the Gambia, and as early as 1628 an effort to do so was made, but it was not successful. In 1661 a fort was built upon a rocky island, and in honour of the new King, was named Fort James; but the English merchants had formidable rivals in the Portuguese and French, and it was not until 1783 that the river was recognised, by the Treaty of Versailles, as British. The Colony had no regular political institutions until 1807, when it was put under the Government of Sierra Leone. The Colony of the Gambia was created in 1843, and was constituted a separate government in 1888. It now consists of the Island of St. Mary, British Kombo, Albreda, the Ceded Mile, MacCarthy Island, and various other islands and territories on the banks of the river. The total area is estimated at 4,132 sq. miles. The population of the Island of St. Mary, at the Census of April 2, 1912, was 7,700, and that of the Protectorate 138,402. The climate is unhealthy during the rainy season, viz. from June to October; but during the rest of the year it is less unhealthy. The chief export is ground nuts, which form seventy per cent. of the total exports. They were sent chiefly to Marseilles, where the oil is extracted and used for the same purpose as olive oil, but, since the outbreak of war, the export trade has been mainly with the U.K. Beeswax, palm kernels, hides, and calabashes are also exported; and rice, cotton, maize, and a kind of millet called kous are produced in the countries bordering the Gambia, but not in sufficient quantities to meet local requirements. The chief imports are cotton goods, kola nuts, rice, soap, spirits, hardware, sugar, wine, and tobacco. A Company of the W.A.F.F. (4 officers and 220 non-commissioned officers and men) is stationed in the Colony, and there is an armed police force in the settlement (numbering 92 men), which performs both civil and military duties. The government, which is that of a Crown Colony, is vested in a Governor, assisted by an Executive Council consisting of 3 official members (besides the Governor), and by a Legislative Council of 5 official members and 3 unofficial members, nominated by the Crown.

GIBRALTAR.

a rocky promontory, 2½ miles in length and ¼ of a mile in breadth, and 1,366 feet high at its greatest elevation, near the southern extremity of Spain, with which it is connected by a low isthmus. It is about 14 miles distant from the opposite coast of Africa. Gibraltar was captured in 1704, during the war of the Spanish Succession, by a combined Dutch and English force, under Sir George Rooke, and ceded by the Treaty of Utrecht, 1713. Since that time it has remained continuously in possession of the British. Of the many attempts to retake it, the most celebrated was the great siege in 1797-83, when General Elliott, afterwards Lord Heathfield, held it for 3 years and 7 months against a combined French and Spanish force. The town stands at the foot of the promontory on the N.W. side. Gibraltar is a free port, and enjoys the advantages of an extensive shipping-trade. During the year 1920 6,496 vessels entered, with a total tonnage of 11,614,287. The chief sources of revenue are the port dues, the rent of the Crown estate in the town, and duties on wine, spirits, tobacco, and beer. There is an enclosed harbour with an area of about 400 acres, three graving docks, and docking accommodation for the largest battleships in the British Navy. The civilian population (Census of April, 1921) was 29,120.

The Governor is in command of the garrison, and exercises all the functions both of government and legislation, there being no executive or legislative council.

GOLD COAST.

The Gold Coast Colony comprises a portion of the coast of the Gulf of Guinea from about 3° 7' W. to 1° 14' E. of Greenwich, with a protectorate extending inland to an average distance of 440 miles, or to the 11° of N. latitude, bounded on the west and north by the French colonies of the Ivory Coast and French Soudan, and on the east by Togoland. The total area is estimated at 80,225 sq. miles. The population (Census of April 2, 1921) was: Gold Coast Colony, 657,526;

Ashanti, 287,812; Northern Territories, 357,519; total, 1,303,355, of whom about 1,000 are Europeans. The natives are almost all Pagans, but the number of Muhammadans and Christians is steadily increasing.

The trade is principally with the United Kingdom. Gold is found in considerable quantities, and diamonds were discovered in 1919; there are also large deposits of high-grade manganese. The principal product is cocoa, more than half the world's supply being produced in the Colony; rice plantations have been started and steps have been taken to improve the coco-nut industry, and to develop the kola and sisal hemp plantations. The principal exports in 1920 were: cocoa, £10,056,298; gold and gold dust, £889,248; palm kernels, £222,468; and kola nuts, £452,245. The chief imports are textiles, building materials, provisions, kerosine, and hardware. The climate, generally, is hot and moist, but is becoming annually less unhealthy by the aid of medical science and sanitation. The Government assists the missionaries in educational matters, and has established schools of its own. Great efforts are being made to improve the sanitary condition of the coast towns. The principal towns are lighted and policed. The total tonnage of shipping entered and cleared in 1920 was 2,328,254 (British 1,767,492). 2,600 miles of telegraphs have been established in the colony, of which 250 miles are in Ashanti and 203 miles in the Northern Territories. There is a wireless telegraph station at Accra. A Government railway runs from Sekondi through Tarquah, the centre of the gold-mining industry, to Kumasi (168 miles). Another line runs from Accra to Anyinam (65 miles), and construction from Anyinam to Coomassie is proceeding rapidly from both ends.

The seat of government is Accra (population 19,588). The other principal towns are: Cape Coast (11,269), Addah (1,572), Elmina (5,079), Secondee (9,122), Tarkuquah (2,426), Quittah (3,630), Axim (3,285), Coomassie (18,853), Saltpond (3,540), and Winnebah (5,840). The government of the Colony is administered by a Governor, aided by a nominated Executive Council. There is a Legislative Council of 12 official and 9 unofficial members, for the Colony, excluding Ashanti and the Northern Territories.

ASHANTI.

Ashanti was placed under British protection on Aug. 7, 1896, and a English Resident was appointed to Coomassie. Under Orders in Council of Sept. 26, 1902, the country was definitely annexed by Great Britain, the Governor of the Gold Coast being appointed Governor of Ashanti, though the laws and Ordinances of the Gold Coast do not apply to the annexed territory. It is divided into two provinces under Commissioners. The Eastern Province, with headquarters at Coomassie, and the Western Province, with headquarters at Sunyani. The population (census 1921) was 287,874. Coomassie, the chief town, has about 20,000 inhabitants. There are Government schools at Coomassie, Sunyani and Juaso, and a number of mission schools. Agriculture is extending, cocoa and rubber plantations are being formed. Gold output (1928) £422,732. In the Western parts of the Gold Coast Colony and especially of Ashanti are rich forests with excellent timber trees (mahogany, cedar, &c.), trees yielding fruits, rich in oil, rubber-bearing plants, and species yielding gum copal. The country is well watered, and with proper restraints on wasteful native farming and on over-exploitation, would contain inexhaustible supplies of valuable forest products. On the Eastern side the forests are sparser, though timber and oil trees are common and game plentiful; the products there are chiefly maize, kokoyams, bananas, ground-nuts, and cocoa, the plantations of which are rapidly extending.

NORTHERN TERRITORIES.

■ In 1902 the Northern Territories lying to the north of the parallel of 8° N lat., bounded on the west and north by the French possessions and on the east by Togoland, were placed under British protection. They are administered, under the Governor, by a Chief Commissioner with his headquarters at Tamale. The country is divided into two provinces under Commissioners; the Southern Province, with headquarters at Tamale, and the Northern Province, with headquarters at Navarro. By the census taken in 1911 the population was about 360,000. The Mohammedans have substantial mosques; there are Roman Catholic and other missions. Government schools have been established at Tamale, Gambaga, Lornu, and Wa. Good permanent roads are being made. The Northern Territories are capable of producing various agricultural crops (cereals, shea-butter, ground-nuts, indigo, tobacco), and are said to contain wide auriferous areas.

HONG KONG.

The Crown Colony of Hong Kong consists of a number of islands situated off the south-eastern coast of China, at the mouth of the Canton River, in 22° 10'–22° 34' N. lat. and 113° 54'–114° 30' E. long., and of a portion of the mainland.

Hong Kong is an island about 10 miles long and from 2 to 6½ miles broad, with a total area of 32 square miles; it lies close to the mainland, being separated at one point by a narrow strait (Lycemoon) not more than a quarter-mile wide, and was first occupied by Great Britain in January, 1841, and was formally ceded by the Treaty of Nankin in 1842; British Kowloon was subsequently acquired by the Peking Convention of 1860; and the New Territories, being a peninsula in the southern part of the Kwangtung province, by a lease signed June 9, 1898. The whole colony comprises an area of about 391 square miles, with a population (1921) of 622,000. The non-Chinese residents, excluding naval and military, numbered about 22,500.

The capital of the colony is Victoria, which lies along the northern shore of the island, facing the mainland; and between the mainland and the city is the harbour, which is one of the finest in the world, with a water area of some 10 square miles. With the exception of liquor and tobacco the port is free, and is fortified. It possesses excellent docks, capable of holding the largest vessels for the purposes of repair. There is a considerable ship repairing and construction industry. Shipping entered, (1929) 17,807,585 tons; (1930) 20,061,264 tons. A railway, of which 13 miles belong to the Government, runs from Kowloon to Canton; the length north of the Sham Chun River (which is the boundary of the British territory) is controlled by the Chinese Government. A light railway runs through the fertile valleys of the north-east portion of the New Territories from Fanling to Sha-Tau-kok, a distance of 7 miles. Good roads connect the principal districts with the railway.

The island is broken in shape and mountainous, the highest point being Victoria Peak, which is about 1,800 feet high. The Peak District is a favourite place of residence, and is reserved for Europeans. The hot season lasts from May to October. During the winter months, from November to March, the climate is cooler, drier, and more invigorating. The average daily maximum temperature ranges from 87° in July to 63° in February, and the average daily minimum temperature from 76° in July to 55° in February. The average annual rainfall is 84 in., of which no less than 75 per cent. falls between May and September, when the S.W. monsoon prevails.

Hong Kong is the centre of a vast trade in many kinds of produce, chiefly camphor, coal, cottons, flour, gunnies, hides, iron and steel goods, leather, matches, oil, rice, silks, sugar, tea and tin.

Much encouragement is given by the Government to education in the colony. In 1900 there were 693 schools subject to Government supervision, attended by 28,707 pupils. The University (opened in 1912) includes faculties of medicine, engineering, and arts.

Hong Kong is a Crown colony, and its government is administered by a Governor, aided by an Executive Council of 9 members, together with a Legislative Council of 14 members, including himself, a representative from the Chamber of Commerce, and a representative of the Justices of the Peace. There is also a Sanitary Board, partly elected, which controls all sanitary measures.

JAMAICA.*

aboriginally Xaymaca, or Land of Wood and Water—an island situate in the Caribbean Sea, about 90 miles to the south of Cuba, within 17° 43'—18° 32' North lat. and 76° 11'—78° 21' W. long. It is the largest and most valuable of the British West Indian Islands, being 144 miles in length and 49 in extreme breadth, containing an area of 4,430 square miles, and a population, in April, 1901, of 857,921 (males, 401,923; females, 455,998). In 1911 the whites numbered 15,605; coloured, 163,201; blacks, 630,181; East Indians, 17,380; Chinese, 2,111; not specified, 2,905.

Jamaica was discovered on May 3, 1494, by Columbus, who called it St. Jago. It was taken possession of by the Spaniards in 1509; but in 1655 a British expedition, sent out by Oliver Cromwell, under Penn and Venables, attacked the island, which capitulated after a trifling resistance. In 1670 it was formally ceded to England by the Treaty of Madrid.

From the sea-level on all sides of Jamaica a series of ridges gradually ascend towards the central ranges, dividing the large rivers, and attaining, in the culminating Peak of the Blue Mountains, in the eastern part of the island, an elevation of 7,388 feet. From these mountains at least 70 streams descend to the north and south shores, but none are navigable except the Black River, and that only for small craft. There are several excellent harbours, and the island is intersected by good roads. There are 200 miles of railway open. Telegraph stations and post offices are established in every town and in very many villages; the number of accounts open in the savings banks was 40,303 (1918). Most of the staple products of tropical climates are raised. Sugar and rum are manufactured and exported; the latter is still counted the best in the world; and the coffee raised in certain districts of the Blue Mountains fetches the highest price that is given in the London market. There is an extensive trade in fruits, chiefly bananas and oranges, with the U.S.A. and U.K. Maize and Indian corn grow luxuriantly. The Guinea grass, from four to six feet in height, grows wild, and is superior to any other for pasturage, while the woods furnish an abundance of rich dye-stuffs, drugs, and spices, and the forests abound in the rarest of cabinet woods. The Governor is assisted by a Privy Council not to exceed 8 members; the Legislative Council consists of the Governor, the Senior Military Officer, the Colonial Secretary, the Attorney-General, the Director of Public Works, and the Collector-General (all ex officio), and of such other persons, not exceeding 10, as the King or the Governor may appoint, called Nominated Members, and 14 elected by the people, being one for each parish of the island. The island is divided into three counties, Surrey in the east, Middlesex in the centre, and Cornwall in the west. The principal city is Kingston, the seat of government and the largest port and town, pop. (Census, 1901) 62,952; the next in importance are Spanish Town, pop. 8,694; Montego Bay, 6,580; and Port Antonio, 6,272. Chief exports (1918): sugar, £613,522; fruit, £325,077; coffee, £217,156; cocoa, £154,191. 1918-19. 1917-18.

KENYA.

Kenya Colony and the East Africa Protectorate include the whole of the coast from the Umba to the Juba River, as also the vast territories in the interior bounded in part by international conventional lines. The eastern boundary was defined along the Juba and north-east by an agreement with Italy (1891), and on the north by an agreement with Abyssinia in 1902. On the west the Colony adjoins Uganda, and on the south the mandated Tanganyika Territory.

A great portion of this vast region consists of pasture lands or barren wastes, but there are not lacking extensive districts of great natural fertility on the coast, as well as in the interior. The Colony is divided for administrative purposes into eight provinces, which are subdivided into districts and sub-districts: (1) Seyidie, (2) Ukamba, (3) Tanaland, (4) Juha-land, (5) Kenya, (6) Naivasha, (7) Nyanza, and (8) Northern Frontier District, of which the centres of administration are respectively Mombasa, Nairobi, Lamu, Kisumu, Nyeri, Naivasha, Kisumu, and Moyale. Of the provinces Ukamba and Naivasha are best suited to colonisation by Europeans. There is also a considerable region still undeveloped, and not yet included in any administrative district. The population of the Colony has been estimated lately at 4,000,000, but no accurate census has ever been taken. Its area is approximately 200,000 square miles.

Kenya also includes the Witu Protectorate, a small tract of country at the mouth of the river Tana. Witu is regarded for administrative purposes as part of Tanaland.

Mombasa, which is connected with Europe by telegraph, possesses perhaps the finest harbour on the east coast of Africa (population, about 30,000, of whom 300 are Europeans). There is also telegraphic communication along the coast between Mombasa and Lamu, and between Mombasa and Entebbe, the capital of the Uganda Protectorate. There are also extensive radiating from the main Uganda Railway telegraph system to Taveta, Port Hall, West Kenia, Archers Post, Southern Masai Reserve, Eldama Ravine, Kericho, Uasin Gishu, Machakos, Kisili and Mumias; also telegraph connexion between Mombasa and Tanga. Radio-telegraph stations exist at Mombasa and Kisumu. The Uganda Railway has its terminus at Mombasa, which is connected with the mainland by a railway bridge 1,732 feet in length. There are also about 40 miles (under Uganda Railway management) from Nairobi to the Fort Hall District, and about 90 miles from the main line at Uganda junction to the Magada Soda Lake. Nairobi, the capital of the Colony, and central station of the Uganda Railway, has a population of about 25,000, of whom 1,200 are Europeans. There are also some 400 European farmers in the immediate neighbourhood of Nairobi.

The principal exports are hides and skins, grain, rubber, fibre, and copra; the principal imports are piece-goods, rice, grain and flour, building materials, European provisions, &c.

The importation of arms and ammunition is prohibited, except under the most stringent regulations, and the introduction and local manufacture of spirits is also heavily checked.

LEEWARD ISLANDS.

The Leeward Islands of the West Indies under British authority consist of the 5 presidencies of (1) Antigua, with Barbuda and Redonda; (2) St. Christopher and Nevis, with Anguilla; (3) Dominica; (4) Montserrat; and (5) the Virgin Islands, with Sombbrero, under Commissioners, all, except the latter, having their own local Legislature. These 5 presidencies are administered by a Governor, to whom the Administrators and Commissioners are subordinate, and there is also a General Legislative Council, possessing concurrent legislative powers with the local Legislatures on certain subjects. The population of the federal colony at the Census of 1921 was 127,189. The General Legislative Council consists of 8 ex-officio and 8 elective members, with the Governor as President. (2) ANTIGUA (AND BARBUDA).

Antigua is the seat of government and residence of the Governor-in-Chief. It lies in 17° 4' N. lat. and 61° 45' W. long., and is about 70 miles in circumference. Its area is nearly 108 square miles, equal to 68,980 acres, of which nearly 17,000 are under cultivation. The population (with Barbuda) in 1921 was 32,265, including 13,989 males and 18,276 females. Settled by the English in 1632, and granted to Lord Willoughby by Charles II., the island has always been more distinctively English. It is much less hilly and wooded than the other Leeward Islands, and is largely given up to the cultivation of sugar, for which two central sugar factories have been erected. Cotton is being planted, and the island also exports molasses, tamarinds, and arrowroot. In March, 1898, the Crown Colony system of government was instituted.

Barbuda is situated 30 miles N. of Antigua, of which it is a dependency, in lat. 17° 35' N., long. 61° 45' W. Area, 60 square miles. Population, 1,000. The island is flat and fertile in parts, producing cotton, corn, pepper, tobacco, and vegetables, and was formerly a possession of the Codrington family. Wild deer are plentiful and afford excellent sport, and there is good tarpon and other fishing.

Magistrate, Capt. G. Downing.
Redonda, a small island with a phosphate industry, has a population of about 20.

(3) ST. KITTS-NEVIS

(WITH ANGUILLA).

The islands of St. Kitts, Nevis, and Anguilla were united in 1882 to form one Presidency, and taken together they had a population at the Census of 1921 of 36,212 and a total area of about 150 square miles. The climate is decidedly healthy for the tropics, the temperature being from 75° to 85°. St. Kitts, the principal island of the Presidency, and the oldest colony in the West Indies, is situated in lat. 17° 12' N. and long. 62° 48' W., and comprises an area of 68 square miles, its greatest length being 26 miles, and greatest breadth about 5 miles. It is one of the most effectively cultivated sugar islands in the West Indies, a continuous line of green estates sweeping up all round the coast from the sea towards the central cone, which rises to a height of 3,711 feet (Mount Misery). The capital, Basseterre, pop. (1921) 7,725, is a port of registry, and had 75 vessels of 1,435 tons in 1920.

Nevis (separated from St. Kitts by a strait some 3 miles wide) has an area of 50 square miles, with a population in 1921 of 11,569. Sugar-cane and cotton are grown. Its greatest elevation is 3,595 feet. Chief town, Charlestown. Pop. (1921), 2,158.

Anguilla is about 60 miles N.W. of St. Kitts, 16 miles in length, and varies in breadth from 2 to 3 miles, containing an area of 35 square miles. Population (1921), 4,230. Cotton is the principal product, and small stock are raised.

(3) DOMINICA,

the largest island of the colony, and the loftiest of the Lesser Antilles, is situate between 15° 20'—15° 45' N. lat. and 61° 13'—61° 30' W. long., 95 miles S. of Antigua, and is about 29 miles long and 15 broad, comprising an area of 291 sq. miles, or 286,240 acres, of which about 70,000 acres are under cultivation. The island is of volcanic origin and very mountainous and picturesque, abounding in streams fairly well stocked with fish, and the soil is very fertile. The temperature varies, according to the altitude, from 55° to 85°. The cultivation of sugar has been practically replaced by cocoa, limes, coco-nuts, and fruit. The population was estimated at 37,000 on April 24, 1921; included in this total are 400 Caribs, of whom 100 are of pure blood. The climate is healthy, and during the winter months very pleasant. Yellow fever is unknown, and from November to June the island is suitable as a health resort for pulmonary and rheumatic invalids. There is an Executive Council composed of official and unofficial members, and a Legislative Council consisting of the Administrator, who sits as President, and 6 official and 6 non-official members nominated by the Governor. The principal towns are Roseau, on the south-west coast, population about 7,000, and Portsmouth, population about 1,000.

(4) MONTserrat is situated in 16° 41' N. lat. and 06° W. long., 26 miles S.W. of Antigua. It is about 11 miles in length and 7 in breadth, comprising an area of 2½ square miles, with a population (Census 1921) of 12,120. Discovered by Columbus in 1493, it was settled by Englishmen, conquered and held by the French for some time, and finally assigned to Great Britain in 1764. It is justly considered one of the most healthy and beautiful of the Antilles; it contains three active soufrières and several hot springs, while the scenery is charmingly diversified. About two-thirds of the island are mountainous, the rest well cultivated. The chief exports during the year 1920 were cotton, cotton seed, limes and its products, sugar, papaine and animals of all kinds. The chief town is Plymouth, with a population (1921) of 1,709.

(5) THE VIRGIN ISLANDS,

a group of islands belonging chiefly to Great Britain and the U.S.A., form a connecting link between the Greater and Lesser Antilles. Such of the islands as are British became so in 1666; the principal are—Tortola (the largest), situate in 18° 27' N. lat. and 64° 40' W. long., Virgin Gorda, and Anegada. The area of the British possessions is 58 square miles, and the population in 1921 was 5,022. There is good pasture for cows, sheep, and goats. Sugar, cotton and coconuts are grown in increasing quantity; fishing and poultry-rearing are also carried on. A valuable mine of copper has been worked at Virgin Gorda. The capital of the group is Road Town, on the south-east of Tortola; population (1921), 463.

MALAYA.

(1) THE FEDERATED MALAY STATES

These States are situated on the mainland of the Malay Peninsula, and are closely connected with the Straits Settlements; they consist of the States of Perak, Selangor, Negri Sembilan, and Pahang, which have by treaty (1895) renewed their engagements with the British Government, and are administered under the advice of a Chief Secretary to Government, with Residents in each State, subject to the instructions of the High Commissioner, who is also Governor of the Straits Settlements. The total area of the Federation is 27,648 square miles, with a population in 1921 of 1,324,890. The principal towns are Kuala Lumpur (Sel.), pop. 80,424; Ipoh (Pk.), 38,860; Taiping (Pk.), 21,111; Kampar (Pk.), 12,325; Seremban (N.S.), 17,272; Klang (Sel.), 11,625; and Teluk Anson (Pk.), 10,859.

The first three States are on the west coast, and extend from the border of Province Wellesley to that of the independent State of Johore. Pahang is on the east coast. All are governed by their native rulers under the above-mentioned control.

There are 1,014 miles of railway, all constructed from revenue, including the Johore State Railway (120½ miles), which is leased from the Johore Government. There is through communication between Penang and Singapore. The West Coast Railway, through Kedah and Perlis, connects with the Southern Siamese Railways and affords direct communication with Bangkok. Eventually, the journey between Bangkok and Penang will take 36 hours by rail instead of 6 days by sea. The East Coast Railway (now under construction), through Pahang and Kelantan, will also connect the Federated Malay States and Siamese railway systems. There are 2,456 miles of road, and 1,695 miles of bridle-paths, while the principal rivers are navigable for small boats.

One of the regions contributing largely to the raw products of the British Empire is the Malay Peninsula, and the most productive portion of the peninsula is that embraced by the four Federated Malay States. The territory is greatly endowed by having tin and plantation rubber as its two richest products, but the figures given below show that it has other exports of great value.

With the growth of the rubber industry, there has been a tendency to neglect some of the older products of the country, such as indigo, coffee, sugar, and pepper; gold has always been found in small quantities, chiefly in Pahang, and the export in 1920 amounted to 11,485 oz.

The following table shows the relative importance of the exports from the Federated Malay States over a period of three years:—

	1918. tons	1919. tons	1920. tons
Rubber	78,389	106,453	101,330
Tin and tin ore	50,983	49,364	47,087
Copra	25,489	26,650	24,999
Rice and padi	10,541	12,503	12,068
Tapioca	1,380	1,140	429
Areca nuts	794	1,168	640
Gambier	385	446	343
Wolfram and scheelite	355	585	288

The climate is very uniform, and may be described as hot and moist. There is no well-marked dry season, and the rainfall in the low country is about 95 inches. The average maximum shade temperature is 90°, and the minimum 70°.

The States are policed by a mixed force of Indians and Malays, officered by Europeans.

(a) THE MALAY STATES NOT INCLUDED IN THE FEDERATION.

The Malay States not included in the Federation consist of Johore, Kedah, Perlis, Kelantan, and Trengganu. The relations of Johore with Great Britain are defined in the Treaty of Dec. 11, 1825, as amended by an agreement dated May 12, 1914, whereby the Sultan accepts, and acts upon, the advice of a British officer called the General Adviser. In respect of the other four States, the rights of Suzerainty, protection, administration and control were transferred by Siam to Great Britain by the Anglo-Siamese Treaty of March 10, 1909.

In all these States the trade is almost entirely carried on with the Straits Settlements. Currency, weights and measures are the same. The religion is Muhammadism.

JOHORE, with an area of 9,000 square miles and a population (Census, 1921) of 282,244, occupies the southern extremity of the Malay Peninsula. Capital: Johore Bahru, population, 15,322. The rubber estates and tin mines are important.

KEDAH, between $5^{\circ} 5' - 6^{\circ} 35' N.$, lies on the west coast of the peninsula, and includes the Langkawi group of islands. The population in 1921 was 338,000, and the approximate area 3,800 sq. miles. Rice is the principal crop in North Kedah, while coco- and betel-nut and rubber are cultivated in South Kedah. The capital is Alor Star, 8 miles inland on the Kedah River, with a population of about 12,000. The powers of the Sultan have, owing to illness, been vested in a Regent, who is assisted by a Council. There are 46 British officials, employed in the Public Works, Survey, Police, and Medical departments.

KELANTAN lies between $4^{\circ} 38' - 6^{\circ} 15' N.$ and $102^{\circ} 26' - 102^{\circ} 45' E.$ on the east coast of the peninsula, with a total length of about 120 miles and a breadth of 50 miles. The northern portion is flat and fertile, producing rice, coco-nut and betel-nut and affording pasturage for large quantities of live stock. Agriculture, fishing, and the production and weaving of silk are the principal industries. The southern and larger portion is mountainous and barren. The capital, Kota Bharu, 8 miles from the mouth of the Kelantan River, has a population of 12,833.

MALTA,

an island in the Mediterranean Sea, 58 miles from Sicily and about 180 from the African coast, about 17 miles in length and 9 in breadth, and having an area of $91\frac{1}{2}$ square miles. The colony includes also the adjoining island of GOZO, with an area of $24\frac{1}{2}$ square miles; COMINO—the site of the Sultan's disaster in 1889 and now a sanitary station—and several islets. The estimated civil population of the whole group, on April 1, 1920, was 224,859. In religion the Maltese are Roman Catholics. The lower orders are mainly Punic in race. The Maltese dialect, which is generally spoken, is of Semitic origin, and is held by some to be derived from the Carthaginian and Arabic tongues. The upper classes are mostly descendants of those who sought the protection of the Order of St. John during the Middle Ages, from all parts of Southern Europe. They speak English and Italian. There is a Maltese order of nobility consisting of 29 families.

The climate, although not tropical, is very hot in summer. The mean temperature for the summer months in 1919 (June, July, August and September) was $75^{\circ} 7^{\circ}$. In winter the range is from $50^{\circ} 6' - 58^{\circ} 8'$. In 1919 the highest temperature in the shade was 95° , and the lowest 40° .

The islands are highly cultivated. The chief products are corn, oranges, melons, grapes, forage, cummin seed, onions, and potatoes; figs and honey are plentiful. The principal occupation of the people is in connexion with shipping, about 8,000 females being occupied in making lace.

The principal harbour is one of the finest in the world; it is very deep, and large vessels can anchor alongside the shore. It is an important port of call for vessels passing to and from the East and the Suez Canal, being about half-way between Gibraltar and Port Said. There is an extensive arsenal and important dockyard, Malta being the headquarters of the Mediterranean Fleet.

Citta Vecchia, the former capital of the island contains the ancient palace of the courts of justice, the Cathedral, and the Seminary; its population has now dwindled to about 425, but its suburb, Rabato, had about 9,474 inhabitants in 1921. Citta Vecchia has been entirely eclipsed in importance by the modern capital of Valletta, which was founded in 1566.

Malta possesses a University and Lyceum; 120 elementary and infant schools, a secondary schools, and 39 night schools, maintained at a total cost to the Government of £44,885 in 1919-20; in addition there are garrison schools, a Dockyard school, and 59 private schools which receive no grants-in-aid from the Government.

The island of Malta is said to have been converted to Christianity on the occasion of the shipwreck of St. Paul in 58 A.D. In the Dark Ages it was taken by the Moors, its commerce was destroyed, and it was used mainly as a base for piratical expeditions. In 1090 it was again brought under Christian rule, being conquered by the Norman Count Roger of Sicily. For 440 years it followed the fortunes of that kingdom, but was in 1530 handed over to the Knights of St. John, who made of it a stronghold of Christianity. In 1565 it sustained the famous siege, when the last great effort of the Turks was successfully withstood by Grand Master La Vallette. The Knights expended large sums in fortifying the island and carrying out many magnificent works, until they were expelled by Napoleon in 1798. The Maltese rose against the French garrison soon afterwards, and with the assistance of some British and Neapolitan troops, compelled the French to capitulate in 1800. The islands were then ceded to Great Britain, the cession being confirmed by the Treaty of Paris of 1814.

The government is administered, as regards Imperial affairs, by a Governor, who is usually a distinguished General, assisted by an Executive Council. Under the Constitution of 1920 there is an elected Legislative Assembly for purely local affairs, which are controlled by a Ministry responsible to the Legislature.

In 1919-20 the Port of Valletta was entered by 1,519 vessels (tonnage, 1,893,850).

MAURITIUS.

Mauritius is an island lying in the Indian Ocean, 550 miles east of Madagascar, between 57° 27' 57" 46' E. long. and S. lat. 19° 58' 23", and comprising an area of 780 square miles. The permanent population at the Census of 1911 was 270,393, of whom 227,887 were Indians, the majority born in the Colony, and the remainder mainly of French or mixed descent.

Mauritius was discovered between the years 1507 and 1528 by the Portuguese, but they never formed any settlement on it. The Dutch visited it in 1598, and named it Mauritius, in honour of the Stadtholder, Prince Maurice of Nassau. In 1644 they established a small colony on the shore, but in 1710 they abandoned the island, and in 1715 the French took possession of it and changed the name to Ile de France. Under the French it became a great centre of trade, but in 1789 the seat of French Government in the East was removed to it from Pondicherry, and it was taken by a British force in 1810. The French language and French law have been preserved under British rule when the ancient name, Mauritius, was restored.

Of the total cultivated area of 208,870 arpents, 179,240 are under sugar, 20,000 under fibre, and 9,630 under other crops; the necessities of life have all to be imported from abroad. Rice and grain are obtained from India, flour and frozen meat from Australia, oxen from Madagascar, and minor imports from South Africa and elsewhere. The chief trade of the island is with India. Being just within the tropics it has a hot climate; but, except in Port Louis and some of the low-lying districts, it is not unhealthy. The island is subject to cyclonic disturbances, and a hurricane in 1892 was particularly severe.

There is an excellent harbour on the N.W. coast, on which the capital, Port Louis, stands, and the annual trade of the island passes almost entirely through Port Louis. The shipping entered and cleared, in 1920, amounted to 716,488 tons, of which 74.03 per cent. was British. In 1920 there were 143½ miles of railway (129½ of 4 ft. 8½ in. gauge and 24 of 2 ft. 6 in.), 60 post-offices, 57 telegraph and 42 Government telephone offices in the island, with 665 miles of telegraph, including block telegraph for the railway, and 124 miles telephone wires (Government).

The Government is administered by a Governor, aided by an Executive Council of four official members, and of such other persons in the service of the Government as the Governor, through instructions of the Secretary of State, may from time to time appoint, and a Legislative Council of 27 members, eight being ex-officio, nine nominated by the Governor, and 10 elected by a moderate franchise. Port Louis has two members, and each of the country districts one.

The inhabitants of European descent are mostly Roman Catholic. Education has two branches:—(1) Superior or Secondary Instruction, to which is attached the Government Royal College and the Associated Schools; (2) Primary Instruction, consisting of the Government schools and the grant-in-aid schools. The total expenditure on education in 1929-30 amounted to Rs. 975,596. Of the pupils in the Government and aided schools, 59 per cent. are Roman Catholics, 2 per cent. Church of England, 1 per cent. other Christian denominations, 11 per cent. Muhammadans, and 27 per cent. Hindus and others.

DEPENDENCIES OF MAURITIUS.

(1) RODRIGUES, 330 miles almost due east of Mauritius. Population (Census 1921), 4,829. Area, 40 square miles. Cattle, beans, salt fish, and goats are the principal exports. The island is under the administration of a magistrate from Mauritius, who takes his orders from the Governor of Mauritius.

Magistrate, E. Duvivier.....Ra. 8,000 to 9,000

(2) OTHER DEPENDENCIES. Most of the scattered groups of coral islands belonging to Great Britain in the Indian Ocean are administered by the Mauritius Government, being visited periodically by two magistrates, whose duty it is to inquire into the condition of the labourers, and settle any disputes which may be referred to them. The chief product is coco-nut oil. The most important is Diego Garcia (pop. 1921, 517), one of the Chagos Archipelago, which lies on the direct route from the Red Sea to Australia, and, as it possesses a good harbour, has been much used of late years as a coaling station. The total population of the "Other Dependencies" (1921) is 1,344.

Transit from London to Mauritius, 28 to 30 days.

MESOPOTAMIA (IRAQ).

King of Iraq, Feisal, elected King of Iraq, Aug. 10, 1921, acceded Aug. 23, 1921.

Iraq, or Mesopotamia, "the land between the rivers" (Euphrates and Tigris), extends from Kurdistan* on N. and N.E. to the Persian Gulf on the S. and S.E., and from Persia on E. to Syria and the Arabian Desert on W. the approximate position being between 37° 1/2° to 48° 1/2° E. long., and from 37° 1/2° to 30° N. lat. The territory was freed from Turkish rule during the War of 1914-18 by Anglo-Indian and British Dominion troops under Generals Nixon, Maude, and Marshall (Gen. Maude succumbing to cholera after the capture of Baghdad). Under the Treaty of Peace with the Allies (1920) Turkey renounced the sovereignty over Mesopotamia and its future administration has been entrusted to Great Britain by the Supreme Council of the Allies. A provisional Arab Government was set-up by the High Commissioner in Nov., 1920, and in Aug., 1921, the Emir Feisal (son of the King of the Hedjaz) was elected King of Iraq, to be enthroned on Aug. 23, 1921.

The total area of the districts comprised within the British Mandatory Sphere is about 150,000 sq. miles, the distance from Basra in the south to Mosul in the north being approximately 500 miles. The sphere comprises the former Turkish vilayets of Mosul, Baghdad and Basra. At the Census of 1920 the population was ascertained to be 3,849,282, as under:—

Baghdad vilayet	1,360,304
Basra vilayet	705,600
Mosul vilayet	783,378

Total

The Baghdad vilayet include the Baghdad, Samarra, Diyala, Kut, Diwanliyah, Shamliyah, Hillah and Dulaim Divisions; Basra vilayet include Basra, Amara and Muntafik; and Mosul include Mosul, Arbil, Kirkuk and Suleimani. (Mosul covers a great part of the ancient kingdom of Assyria, the ruins of the Assyrian capital being visible on the banks of the Tigris, opposite Mosul.)

Of the total population there were in 1920 1,125,683 Sunni Muhammadans, 1,494,213 Shiite Muhammadans, 87,428 Jews, 78,729 Christians, and 43,202 other religions.

Mesopotamia is capable of supporting a population many times in excess of its present inhabitants if irrigation is developed and extended. In 1920 certain works were undertaken, following on the report of Sir W. Willcocks, and since the British occupation notable improvements have been effected; the Irrigation Department is at present confining itself to small and immediately remunerative schemes. The wealth of the country depends entirely upon agricultural development, and two harvests can be gathered in the year, the chief crops being wheat, barley and beans, and rice, peas and

* Kurdistan.—The mountainous tract inhabited by Kurdish tribes is to be formed into a separate autonomous province.

Indian corn; wheat averages 45lb. per acre, barley 52lb., and rice over 1,000lb. In 1928-29 there were 1,547,000 acres (deriving their water from the Tigris and Euphrates) under general cultivation, an increase of 64 per cent. on the previous year. Cotton growing is a developing industry and it is estimated that Mesopotamia could yield 300,000 bales annually if sufficient labour is forthcoming. The country is being opened up and existing communications improved and secured. Schools, hospitals and dispensaries have been established under British auspices. Basra was equipped with wharves, railway sidings, &c., for military purposes, and is thus suited for commerce. The chief imports are textiles, sugar, and tea, and the chief exports are dates and piece goods.

The Euphrates (which has a total length of 1,800 miles from its source to its outflow in the Persian Gulf) is formed by two arms, of which the Murad, 80 (425 miles) rises in the slopes of the Ala Dagh, a mountain of Eastern Erzerum, and flows westwards to a junction with the Kara Su, or Frat Su (275 miles), the latter rising in the north-west of Erzerum in the Dumlup Dag. The Tigris has a total length of 1,250 miles from its source to its junction with the Euphrates at Garmat Ali, 70 miles from the Persian Gulf, and rises in two arms south of the Taurus mountains, in Kurdistan, uniting at Til, where the boundaries of the vilayets of Diarbekir, Van and Bitlis conjoin.

The Baghdad Railway.—In 1899 the Anatolian Railway Company obtained a concession from the Sultan of Turkey for the construction of a railway from Konieh (the eastern terminus of the Anatolian Railway), to the Persian Gulf at Koweit, via Baghdad, a total length of 1,250 miles, with a single track of 4 ft. 8½ in. gauge. Its projected course was from Konieh to Adana, thence S.E. to Aleppo, Jerablus (where it would cross the Euphrates and enter Mesopotamia), and Mosul, and thence S. down the right bank of the Tigris to Baghdad and the Persian Gulf. As this scheme was under German control the British Government (on account of the paramount interests in the Persian Gulf of British India) declined to be a party to it, and a new financial scheme was substituted in which 40 per cent. of the capital was to be German and 60 per cent. French, while the Basra section of the line was to be under British control. The first section, Konieh-Eregli-Bulgurlu (124 miles), was opened in Oct. 1904, and at the outbreak of the War of 1914-18 about 1,200 miles (out of the total of 1,250 miles) were in operation, with gaps in important sections (notably in the hills N.W. of Aleppo, and in the Mesopotamian desert W. & S. of Mosul). The line crosses the Euphrates on a wooden bridge at Jerablus. At Aleppo there is a connexion with the Pilgrims' line from Medina (through Damascus and Homs to Aleppo) and, if it is completed, the railway will be served by the port of Alexandria (Iskanderun) in Cilicia. The first through train from Basra to Baghdad left Basra on Jan. 13, 1900. The total length of line open at that date was 945 miles compared with 1,112 miles during the War, some unimportant lines having been disused since the cessation of hostilities with Turkey.

The chief city is Baghdad, the former capital of the Abbaside dynasty, one of the Caliphs of that dynasty being Haroun al Rashid of "the Arabian Nights." Baghdad has an estimated population of 170,000, other towns being Basra, 85,000, and Mosul (opposite the site of Nineveh), 90,000.

Baghdad is 840 miles by air from Cairo, Egypt. Official Mails between London and Baghdad are sent by fortnightly Air Mail Service via Cairo—Heliopolis—Ramleh—Amman—Kasr Akrak—Ramadla, with a saving of about 24 days in transit over the normal service.

NIGERIA.

The Colony and Protectorate of Nigeria includes the territories situated on the right of Benin, between Dahomey on the west and the Kameruns on the east. The Protectorate is in two main divisions, the Northern Provinces and the Southern Provinces, of which the northern group coincides with the former Protectorate of Northern Nigeria, and the southern group with the former Protectorate of Southern Nigeria. The headquarters of Government is at Lagos. The area of the whole territory is 336,000 sq. miles, and the population roughly 16,500,000.

The chief industry is agriculture, and crops consist of cotton, cocoa, ground-nuts, maize, guinea-corn, millet, rice, coffee, yams, cassava, and tobacco. The natural products exported are palm oil and kernels, gum copal, rubber, mahogany, shea-nuts, hides and skins, and the export of ground-nuts is steadily increasing. A considerable industry has arisen in connexion with tin-mining in the Northern Provinces. The Udi coalfields are of great extent and the coal is of excellent quality. A railway is in operation between Lagos and Kano, a distance of 705 miles. Branch lines run from Minna to Bano (on the Niger), and from Zaria to Bukuru. Another railway line runs from Port Harcourt, at the head of the Bonny estuary, to the coal fields at Udi (250 miles) and further railway extensions are in progress. Centres of trade are Lagos, Abeokuta, Ibadan, Oshogbo, Ilorin, Zaria, Kano, Onitsha, Lokoja, Warri, Bonny, Bapele, Calabar, Opobo, Forcados, and Port Harcourt.

The principal imports are cotton goods, provisions, spirits, hardware, cutlery, cycles, kerosene, tobacco, building material, soap, and haberdashery.

NYASALAND PROTECTORATE.

This country was proclaimed a British Protectorate on May 14, 1891. The Protectorate comprises the western shore of Lake Nyasa and the country southwards nearly to the Zambesi.

The population of the Protectorate is 1,202,519, including 1,427 Europeans and 561 Asiatics, and it has a total area of 39,956 square miles.

The principal exports are cotton, tobacco, chillies, coffee, ground-nuts, fibre, and tea.
The cultivation and export of cotton and tobacco are considerable. Ivory and rubber are also exported in small quantities. The principal imports are soft goods, provisions, and hardware. On Lake Nyasa there are seven steamers.
There are also twenty-three steamers on the Zambesi and Shire rivers plying between Chinde and the railway terminus at Chindio. At Chinde, situated in Portuguese territory at the mouth of the Zambesi, is a piece of land leased from the Portuguese Government (known as the "British Concession") where goods intended for the Protectorate may be transhipped free of duty.

Chief towns:—Blantyre (population about 300 Europeans and 7,000 natives) and Zomba, the headquarters of the Government. A railway from Port Herald (the "inland port" of the Protectorate) to Blantyre (123 miles) is open for traffic. An extension from Port Herald to Chindio on the Zambesi (62 miles) was opened to traffic in 1895, and an extension to Beira is to be completed early in 1902. A further extension to Fort Johnston, on Lake Nyasa, is projected.
Main roads and "carrier" roads are open all over the Protectorate, the total mileage being 3,300.

Mails to and from England are despatched every week via Cape Town and Beira. Between Chinde and Europe the means of communication are the Union-Castle Mail S.S. Co., Messrs.
Rennie's Line via Natal, and the British India Steam Navigation Co. The Protectorate is connected by telegraph overland with the Cape via Salisbury, and, with the Portuguese empire, to Chinde and Quillmané. The African Trans-Continental Telegraph Company's line has now been extended northwards as far as Ujiji on Lake Tanganyika.

(i) The British Solomon Islands, protected since 1893, and consisting of Guadalcanar, Malaita,
San Cristoval, New Georgia, and other islands situated east of New Guinea, with a total area of about 21,000 square miles, and a population, 1919, of 675 Europeans, 75 Asiatics, and about 150,000 natives. The Santa Cruz Group and several other islands were incorporated in the Protectorate in 1895 and 1899; and in 1900
Choleau and Yasabel, with the islands in Bougainville Straits and Lord Howe's group, were transferred by treaty from Germany. The revenue in 1918-19 was £29,476, and the expenditure
£30,205; exports, 1918-19, £170,225; imports,
£188,408. The seat of government is Tulagi.

Resident Commissioner, (and £50 allowance) £800 to 1,000

(e) The Gilbert and Ellice Islands, formerly a Protectorate, were formally annexed to the Empire in November, 1906. The Gilbert Group, situated between 4° N. and 3° S. latitude and 175° and 177° W. longitude, consists of 26 islands, with several small islands or islets depending upon them; and the Ellice Group, between 5° S. and 10½° S. latitude and 176° E. and 179° 35' W. longitude, consists of nine islands. Ocean Island (or Paanapa), in lat. 0° 55' S. and long. 169° 35' E., which is the seat of government, was proclaimed British in 1900. Total area, 280 square miles; population (1929), 300 Europeans, 300 Asiatics, and 33,500 natives. Revenue (1928-29), £24,430; expenditure, £30,734; imports (1925-26), £102,783; exports (1925-26), £183,248. The Union or Tokelan Group, Fakaafo, Nukunono and Atafu, were included in the Protectorate in 1909, and annexed to H.M. Dominions in Feb. 1926 as part of the Gilbert and Ellice Islands colony.

Fanning Island, in lat. 3° 30' N., long. 159° 13' W., and Washington Island, 66 miles N.W. by W. of Fanning Island. Pop., 21 Europeans in connexion with Pacific cable station, and about 400 Gilbert Islanders in copra industry. The islands were included in the Gilbert and Ellice Colony by an Order in Council of Jan. 27, 1926.

Resident Commissioner, E. C. Elliot... £700 to 800 (and £50 allowance).

(3) The Tonga or Friendly Islands.—A protectorate over the Tonga Islands was proclaimed May 19, 1900. These islands are situated in the Southern Pacific to the E.S.E. of Fiji, and 390 miles therefrom, with an area of 385 square miles, and a population (1929) of 376 Europeans, 250 half castes, 22,660 Tongans, and 247 others—total 23,556. The limits of the group are between 15° and 23° 30' S. and 173° and 177° W. Tongatabu is the seat of government, the late King George Tubou II., who died in 1922, being the last of the independent kings in the Pacific. Soil generally is fertile; the principal exports are copra, fungus, green fruit, kava, and candle-nuts. Two of the smaller islands disappeared owing to a tidal wave, in June, 1929. Revenue, 1928-29, £66,908; expenditure £43,688; imports (1928), £177,151; exports, £160,737. The total shipping entered and cleared in 1927 was 47,180 tons, all of which was British.

Agent and Consul, Islay McOwan

(and entertainment allowance £100) £800

(4) The Phoenix Islands (Wilkes, Gardner, Birnie, Hull, Enderbury, Phoenix, and Sidney), between 2° 30' and 4° 30' S. and 171° and 174° W.

(5) Pitcairn Island, situate in lat. 25° 3' 30" S., long. 130° 8' 30" W. Pop. (April, 1907), 244, descendants of the mutineers of H.M.S. Bounty. Arrowroot is manufactured and exported.

Deputy Commissioner, Dr. W. T. Williams (H.M. acting Consul for the Society Islands).

Chief Magistrate, Parkin R. Christian.

(6) The New Hebrides Group lies west of Fiji and south-east of New Caledonia. In 1906 a Convention was signed under which the administration of the group was assumed by Great Britain and France. British and French Resident Commissioners were appointed in 1902. Nat. pop. about 65,000, European 800. Principal exports, maize, copra, cotton, and coffee. A British steamer runs regularly between Sydney and the group, and French steamers from Sydney and New Caledonia.

French High Commissioner, J. Repiquet (Governor of New Caledonia).

British Resident Commissioner, M. King ... £900

French Resident Commissioner, M. Miramand.

President of Joint Court, Count de Baena Esperanza ... £900

(7) There are also a large number of scattered groups and isolated islands.

PALESTINE.

Palestine, extending from the Mediterranean on W. to an eastern boundary formed by the Wady Arabah, Dead Sea, River Jordan and Sea of Tiberias, and from the Egyptian frontier on S. to the French Mandatory Sphere of the Great Lebanon on N., includes, in addition, a large area E. of the Jordan and S. of the Yarmuk.*

Palestine is under British administration since the conquest of the country by the forces of General Allenby in 1928, and consists of a W. maritime lowland, the mountain region of Judah (which forms the backbone of the district) and, on the E., the depression through which the Jordan winds its way from the Sea of Galilee (Tiberias) to the Dead Sea. The Dead Sea, 1,200 feet below the level of the Mediterranean, is 46 miles long and has an average width of 8½ miles; it receives the waters of the Jordan and of six other rivers, and has no outlet, the surplus being carried off by evaporation. Its water is intensely salt and has a specific gravity one-sixth greater than water, with 24 per cent. of salt. (The Great Salt Lake of Utah, U.S.A., is 80 miles long and 30 miles wide, at 4,282 feet above mean sea level, and contains 25 per cent. of salt.) The area of Palestine W. of the Jordan is about 9,000 square miles, with a population (July, 1928) of 700,000, of whom 547,000 are Muhammadans, 76,000 Jews, and 77,000 Christians. Since 1929 about 10,000 immigrants (mostly Jews) have settled in the country.

Palestine is divided into 7 administrative districts, under District Governors. English, Arabic and Hebrew are the official languages of the country. The chief town, Jerusalem, had been in Moslem hands since 1244, and under Turkish rule since 1917, until it surrendered to General Allenby on Dec. 9, 1917, to be entered the next day by British troops. The city, which occupies so prominent a place in the affections of the Jewish, Christian and Muhammadan peoples, had a population in 1920 of 62,000. The Church of the Holy Sepulchre at Jerusalem is visited annually by large bands of Christian pilgrims, principally of the Orthodox and Coptic churches. The site of Solomon's Temple is occupied by the Mosque of Omar, which contains a relic of Mahomet and the sacrificial stone of Abraham. Bethlehem, the scene of Christ's Nativity, is 5 miles S. of Jerusalem. The Church of the Nativity, at the E. end of the present village, is reputed to be the oldest Christian church in existence. King David was also born in Bethlehem. Nazareth, about 25 miles S.W. of the Sea of Galilee, had a population of 9,200 in 1920. Other large towns are Jaffa (45,000), Gaza (25,000), Acre (6,500), and Haifa (26,000). The Jewish schools at Haifa have been purchased from the German Hilfsvereine and presented to the Zionist Organization.

The railway system of Palestine consists of five sections: Imja-Haifa, continuing southward to Kantara to join up with the railways of Egypt, passengers and freight being transported across the Suez Canal at Kantara; Haifa-Acre—

* Transjordanica or Karak.—The country beyond the Jordan is under the provisional government of the Emir Abdallah (brother of the Emir Feisal, King of Iraq), assisted by British advisers.

Semakh, continuing beyond Semakh to Damascus in the French mandatory territory of Syria; Jaffa-Ludd-Jerusalem; Rafat-Beerseba; and Afula-Tulkerram. The main junction of the Government Railways is at Ludd, the general offices being at Haifa.

The chief ports are Jaffa, Haifa and Acre. There are branches of the Anglo-Egyptian, Anglo-Palestine, Banco di Roma, Credit Lyonnais, and Imperial Ottoman Bank in the main towns.

Although economic conditions are still primitive, modern methods are making headway, and there are good prospects of development and progress. The country is generally fertile, and cereals, wine, olives and various fruits are produced, while sheep and goats thrive in the lowlands, and in the mountains in time of drought. The imports in the year ending March 31, 1922, were valued at £5,226,633 and the exports at £2,771,702.
